U. S. Mines Entrances To Canal, Rushes Big Guns to Atlantic Side

Fleet Quits Hawaii With Sealed Orders; Plane Motor Deal With Ford Fails

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Balboa, Canal Zone, June 25 (By Wireless).—The defenses of the Panama Canal were brought on an "alert" standing over the week-end in view of the gravity of the European situation, as Maj. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis, commanding the garrison of approximately 20,000 men, ordered additional intensive antiaircraft defense training.

As a precautionary measure to prevent possible attempts at sabotage at the Canal entrances, some mining was engaged in by Army mine layers, but the extent of the operations was not disclosed.

One battery of Coast Artillery was transferred from the Pacific side of the zone to guard the Atlantic harbor defenses. The battery includes two 14-inch railway guns, which are now believed to be placed strategically in the vicinity of Fort Randolph.

[In a copyrighted article the New York Daily News tonight said the United States had mined both entrances to the Panama Canal, had rushed heaviest railroad artillery to the Atlantic side and had placed the Canal Zone's defense forces on virtually a war footing.

Called "Emergency Rehearsal"

[The article said that with 30,000 men under arms, military officials termed the maneuvers an "emergency rehearsal."

["But with intense activity still continuing," the article went on, "qualified observers believed the Army was getting ready for real trouble on short notice."—Editor's note.]

Army authorities here stress the fact that no attack against the Panama Canal is anticipated, but it is apparent that Gen. Van Voorhis is taking no chances.

It is also understood that the anti-aircraft defense units may remain at "alert" indefinitely. Brig. Gen. Sanderford Jarman, commanding the provisional Coast Artillery brigade, conducted an inspection of the Atlantic harbor defenses today.

The War Department's program for additional firing maneuvers, ordered last week, will include troops of all arms and services.

Simultaneously, construction operations have begun for an emergency headquarters shelter in the heart of Ancon Hill near the present Army headquarters. Workmen are boring into the mountain to build a safe area in the event that the headquarters building is bombed or burned.

Fleet Whereabouts a Mystery

[Meanwhile, the whereabouts of major units of the United States fleet remained a mystery that was reported to be causing perplexity mingled with anxiety in Hawaii, whence the warships put to sea Monday unexpectedly and with sealed orders.

There was much speculation that the battlecraft were heading for the Canal, though the possibility that they had taken an eastward course, in view of disquieting rumors as to Japanese intentions toward French Indo-China, was not being overlooked.

[President Roosevelt maintained the mystery yesterday when he said at his press conference that he had no news on the fleet for the reporters.—Editor's note.]

U. S. Cruiser Secretly Lands Gold Bought From France

Sum Put Ashore at Brooklyn Not Revealed But Reports Indicate It Might Amount To $250,000,000; French Store Was Huge

A considerable amount of the French government's gold, bought by this country, was brought to the United States secretly, aboard the U. S. cruiser Vincennes last week, it was revealed last night.

A two-sentence joint announcement by the Treasury and Navy Departments said merely:

"Some time ago the United States purchased a sum of gold from the French government. It was transported to the United States aboard the U. S. S. Vincennes which was returning home from abroad."

Officials of the two departments were close-mouthed last night when asked how much gold was involved and how and when it was acquired.

All that was known was that the Vincennes docked at Brooklyn Navy Yard last week with a cargo of gold from France.

The Vincennes had been on duty off the coast of Portugal with the European squadron. Its movements were carefully concealed. Even after it was known to be at Brooklyn, some officials said that, so far as they knew, it was still in Lisbon, Portugal.

Though no official would reveal the value of the gold shipment, last week's Federal Reserve statement, covering the period from June 13 to June 20, showed the largest weekly rise ever recorded in the United States, except in the first week of February, 1934, when gold was revalued to $35 an ounce.

The week's increase was shown as $342,000,000. In addition, the daily Treasury statement for June 21 showed an increase in the gold stocks of $250,000,000 for the day, as much as the United States has recently imported in an entire month.

Disclosure of the secret gold shipment coincided with reports that the French government, on the

Petain Broke Navy Pledge, Churchill Says

French Vowed Never To Surrender Fleet, Briton Declares

By the Associated Press.

London, June 25.—Prime Minister Churchill solemnly acknowledged today that Britain's safety was "powerfully though not decisively affected by what happens to the French fleet."

He indicated, and the hope was echoed in the House of Lords, that England still might, somehow, take over the French navy which was ceded to Germany as an armistice condition.

Churchill told the House of Commons surrender of the fleet had been ordered by the government of Marshal Premier Petain in violation of "many solemn assurances."

"We note, of course," he went on heavily, "the solemn declaration of the German government that they have no intention of using them (warships) for their own purpose during the war, but what is the value of that? Ask half a dozen countries . . ."

But while he thus stated the position in its baldest and least comfortable terms as it applied to England, he made some oblique references that indicated his hope that England would still forestall the transfer. Among them were references to the cooperation expected from French empire outposts.

Dispatches from Alexandria reported that units of the French fleet flew their flags at half staff in mourning for France's defeat.

The fact that these vessels remained in that area of the Mediterranean proved they had not obeyed—at least not yet—the reported armistice stipulation that they return to home ports for dis-

Germans Get French Fleet Under Terms

Berlin Announces Provisions of Peace Signed by France

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 25.—The terms of the German-French armistice, providing for the surrender of all France's fleet save that part of it necessary to police French colonies, were officially announced tonight.

(The official announcement of the details varied in no important particular from the armistice terms disclosed by the British ministry of information Sunday night.)

These were among the most important provisions:

Occupation by Nazi troops of more than half of France.

Germany stated its intention of occupying the west French coast only as long as was necessary for completion of the war against England.

The French will be permitted to set up a government within the unoccupied region or, if they prefer, to return to Paris.

[Spanish border reports said the French government was planning to move to Clermont-Ferrand, 170 miles north of the Mediterranean and 90 miles west of Lyon. The Spanish embassy in France announced it was transferring to a locality near there.]

France to cease all hostilities against Germany not only on land but on the seas and in her colonies, territories and mandates.

In connection with the surrender of the fleet, however, the Germans "solemnly" promised not to use French vessels in war action except for harbor defense and minesweeping, and said that they had no intention of demanding permanent possession of the fleet as the price of a final peace.

Conquered France, however, must

Roosevelt Signs Act Imposing Biggest Tax Burden Since 1920

By the Associated Press

The Nation shouldered its heaviest Federal tax load since the World War yesterday.

President Roosevelt's signature made law of a bill estimated to raise an additional $4,602,500,000 in the next five years by adding 2,200,000 citizens to the list of income tax payers and by raising the rates on income, profits, excise, gift and inheritance taxes. The money will be used to help finance the defense program authorized by Congress.

The Treasury calculated that the law would increase anticipated Federal revenue in the 1941 fiscal year, which begins Monday, from $5,652,300,000 (not counting social security funds, which are now outside the budget) to $8,367,600,000. An extra $604,800,000 was expected to be raised in each of the following four years.

Officials estimated that 2,200,000 persons would pay Federal income taxes for the first time because of reduction of personal exemptions for heads of families from $2,500 to $2,000 and for single persons from $1,000 to $800. This lowering of exemptions also will result in increasing the payments of those now taxed.

Effective dates of the tax increases vary. The income tax provisions apply to incomes earned during the 1940 calendar year, and will be payable March 15, 1941.

An extra 10 per cent added to the estate and gift taxes became effective at 11:45 a. m., Eastern standard time, yesterday, the time the President signed the bill.

Increased excise taxes, such as those on liquor and cigarettes, will become effective at 12:01 a. m., Monday, July 1.

Italy Makes French Yield African Bases

Armistice Orders Demilitarization; Duce Gets Djibouti Rights, Alps Belt

(Peace Terms, Page 8.)

By the Associated Press

Rome, June 25.—Italy gained military occupation of only a slim border belt in the Alps, demilitarization of French colonial outposts in North Africa and full rights over Djibouti, only rail outlet to Italian East Africa, under terms of the French-Italian armistice announced here tonight.

The armistice also forces France to demilitarize her naval bases in the Mediterreanean while the war with Britain is in progress.

No mention was made of Nice, Savoy and Corsica, French-ruled territory for which the Italians long have been clamoring.

In addition to full rights over Djibouti, Italy got control of the French section of the railway running from the Gulf of Aden port to Addis Ababa, capital of Italian-conquered Ethiopia.

Demilitarized zones will be established in France, Tunis, and French Somaliland, ranging from 30 to 120 miles in width. French troops must be withdrawn in ten days.

Get Alpine Area

The zone of military occupation in France proper includes a narrow Alpine border area taken by Premier Mussolini's forces in their 14 days of war against France.

It extends a short distance into France from the Swiss frontier to the Mediterranean, including Briancon in the north and Menton, Mediterranean port. Briancon is about 5 miles from the frontier, Menton about a mile.

[At Tetuan, French Morocco, French High Commissioner Gen. Auguste Nogues declared today his crack Moroccan troops would not yield one inch of French North African territory without a fight, the armistice notwithstanding. The Tunis radio tonight broadcast a communique declaring that "no foreign power" would occupy any part of French Tunisia, Algeria or Morocco.

[In Jerusalem, an informed source said a new French line would be formed in North Africa and through Egypt and Palestine to Syria. The formidable mobile army which Gen. Maxime Weygand trained in Syria would become the nucleus of new French resistance in the colonies under Weygand's successor, Gen. Eugene Mittelhauser.

Colonies Fortifying

[The French colonies, it was said, already were fortifying and arming themselves "for a long siege."]

For the duration of hostilities between Italy and Britain, and for the duration of the armistice, the French Somaliland coast in north Africa is to be demilitarized entirely.

Like the German-French armistice, the agreement stipulated that the French fleet be surrendered, and that hostilities cease in the colonies as well as Europe. The Italians joined the Germans in assurances that the French warships

Early Returns Give Whelan Lead Over Frazier

Fargo, N. Dak., June 25 (AP).—State Senator Thomas Whelan held a slight indecisive lead for the Republican nomination for U. S. Senator over Senator Lynn J. Frazier and former Governor William Langer in early returns in the North Dakota primary election tonight.

Whelan had 3,471 votes in 112 of 2,257 precincts with 3,104 for Frazier and 2,749 for Langer.

Whelan, endorsed by a coalition of regular and progressive factions, attacked Frazier's record in the Senate in which he voted against the majority of armament measures.

Langer, endorsed by the non-Partisan League, and defeated by Senator Gerald P. Nye in the primary and in the general election in 1938, also attacked Frazier's record and called for adequate defense for this hemisphere.

G. O. P. Cheers as Hoover Demands U. S. Avoid War, 'The Suicide Road for Liberty'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"GANGWAY FOR HOOVER!"—Brawny policemen fought to clear a way last night for a happy Herbert Hoover (right) as he arrived at headquarters of the Republican Convention in Philadelphia. Hundreds jammed the hotel entrance for a glimpse of the former President who attacked New Deal "totalitarian liberals" in a speech at the convention

Former President Calls for an End To Provocative Official Speeches

(Hoover Text On Page 8.)

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 25.—Herbert Hoover, last Republican President before the New Deal, returned here tonight to the heart of his party to upbraid his successors and warn that this Nation is taking "the suicide road for liberty that led to disaster in Europe."

A wildly demonstrative Republican convention cheered when he denounced "totalitarian liberals." It roundly booed the "third term." And it rose in long, lusty applause as he demanded "an end to provocative speech by our officials."

A ten-minute demonstration followed his speech. The band struck up "California, Here I Come," and the California delegation started around the hall, their banner lifted. A few other delegations joined, and permanent Chairman Joe Martin had to sound his gavel four minutes to bring the conventon to order.

"Keep Out . . . Unless Attacked"

The big hand came with Hoover's parting question to Republicans: "Are you prepared to fight."

But he urged them to "fight" not in European wars but to "hold alight to a confushed world, the lamp of liberty." He demanded America "keep out of these wars unless the Western Hemisphere is attacked."

It was a powerful defense of his own policies as President and a bitter attack on New Deal economic planning and foreign affairs management that the graying former President presented to an appreciative Republican convention now in its second day.

Renouncing any strict isolationist position, Hoover urged supplies of both materials and munitions for "all nations fighting for their freedom," barring any action which might lead to war or contravene our neutrality statutes.

In a post-war world, which he said "will not again be the same," Hoover relegated the Hull reciprocal trade treaties "to the heaven of forgotten issues."

Candidacy Denied

Matching oratory against delegates, his speech shoved him forward as a formidable contender for controlling party influence if not for active candidacy in this "anything might happen" convention scramble for a Republican nominee and a platform.

Hoover's friends denied he is a "candidate," but Hoover scouts were active before and after his address and the former President remained on the convention scene.

Some observers even regarded a late addition to his speech as a double-barreled assault on the ever-rising star of Wendell L. Willkie in its strong stand against any war intervention and in its blast at reciprocal trade prospects.

If so, Willkie had anticipated it, for late today the blitzkrieg candidate tacked suddenly away from his former support of the reciprocal trade "principle." Willkie already had tightened his stand against war involvement.

Dewey, Taft Crowded

Dewey and Taft camps, which promised to be first ballot leaders when candidate voting opens Thursday, were still desperately fighting off heavy Willkie inroads today. Hoover's speech tonight helped to spread this convention disease of "candidate jitters."

Earlier today, House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., him-

G. O. P. Agrees On 'Punchier' Defense Plank

Accuses Democrats Of Policies That Might Lead to War

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia (Wednesday), June 26.—A "stronger and punchier" foreign affairs plank inferentially accusing the Democrats of policies that might lead to war while lauding the Republicans as the party "of preparedness and peace" was unanimously written into the Republican platform by the resolutions committee last night.

When it broke up just before midnight, the committee had indorsed without a dissenting voice the entire draft platform, which will be polished into final shape this morning and offered to the convention this afternoon or evening.

The hotly disputed plank on foreign affairs was approved by the committee in a form somewhat modified from the draft presented earlier in the day by the subcommittee that had been working on the plank.

A preamble includes the flat declaration that the "Republican Party stands for Americanism, preparedness and peace," but charges the Democrats with "unpreparedness" and the "consequent danger of involving us in war." The wording

Willkie's Wife Is 100% Help To Candidate

By Christine Sadler

Philadelphia, June 25.—Although this convention demonstrates that women still are no great shakes politically, it also proves that their value as "window dressing" has gone sky high.

They're the candidates' answer to 1940's demand for "glamour." They make the photographs look better and they help keep the women's clubs happy.

Even Wendell Willkie's charm is enhanced by the presence of his wife, so they are saying around the Convention Hall as they tell how his political advisers suggested she put in an appearance on opening day rather than nearer the end of the week as had been planned originally.

Any fear they may have had that the "little missus" would say the wrong thing was dispelled almost immediately. Mrs. Willkie was 100 per cent to her husband's good as soon as they told her to go ahead and be herself.

What she is, of course, is a very attractive woman with a lively sense of humor and plenty of quick intelligence.

"I've run out of different hats," she declared today, "so now I can't go around incognito any more. Nobody can recognize a woman these days—just as long as she keeps changing her hats."

Mrs. Robert A. Taft, without much doubt, is the leading and most active woman at the convention, including delegates and everybody. She works at headquarters all day interviewing groups, answering questions, planning next moves. And she's always on hand at the convention, working in the same capacity.

Senator Taft's cause has been boosted, too, by the appearance of

Hitler Killed Hull's Pacts, Willkie Says

No Point in Arguing About Dead Issues, Candidate Asserts

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 25.—As the time approaches to transfer the battle from the hotels to the Convention Hall, Senator Taft, of Ohio, and Wendell Willkie, of Indiana, are regarded as the leading contenders for the Republican nomination for President.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, Manhattan's 38-year-old racket buster, No. 1 man in the popularity polls and primary elections, is having serious trouble in persuading his delegates to stay with him after the early balloting.

Hitler's Name Pops Up

Former President Hoover got a whopping ovation after his speech tonight, but it was a tribute to his speech and also a token of respect and affection. It did not seem to carry with it any demand for another nomination for Hoover.

The name of Adolf Hitler popped up today in the wild battle for the nomination.

Wendell Willkie brought Hitler into the picture, saying that the German conqueror had killed the Hull reciprocal trade pacts and that, therefore, there was no longer any sense in quarreling about them. Willkie has been under fire because of his ardent advocacy of the Hull trade pacts. In fact, it was his stand on these that more than anything else caused some 40 Western members of Congress to loose a broadside at him yesterday.

New World at Hand

Willkie timed his statement so that it would dovetail with former President Herbert Hoover's remarks

John J. Raskob, jr., son of the former Democratic National Committee chairman, married Dollie Lee Boggiano, of Los Angeles, at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria yesterday.

Justice of the Peace Herman Friedlander, of Alexandria, read the ceremony and the newlyweds, both of them married once and divorced, left for a motor trip.

They arrived in Alexandria from Centerville, Md., home of the bridegroom's father, and were married at noon. Raskob gave his age as 31, his bride hers as 28.

He said they met two years ago in Los Angeles.

Italian Liner Set For Blockade Dash

Balboa, C. Z., June 25 (U.P.).—The 23,255-ton Italian liner Conte Biancamano moved through the Panama Canal from the Pacific to the Atlantic side today, apparently in preparation for an attempted transatlantic dash through the British blockade.

The giant luxury vessel, loaded with 2,000 tons of copper bars from South American west coast ports, left here for Cristobal at 6 a. m. after being fully provisioned and fueled.

Staying Powers Compared

Dewey Most Wide Awake Candidate, Sleeps Only 4 Hours

By Hedley Donovan

Philadelphia, June 25.—Thomas E. Dewey announced today that he has discovered the "one dividend" in running for the Presidency at the age of 38. He said he had only four hours of sleep last night and is feeling fine.

Revelation of the Dewey staying powers, coming on the eve of nominations, led to immediate inquiries in other candidates' headquarters. Incomplete returns from these camps were as follows:

Taft, five hours.

Willkie, five hours.

Vandenberg, six hours.

At Vandenberg headquarters an aide announced with dignity:

"I don't think the Senator has any intention of competing with Mr. Dewey to see who can get the least sleep. We have never commented on the claims of other candidates, and I don't see why we should start now."

He did confide, however, that Vandenberg has talked to 23 State delegations and "countless individuals" in the last two days, and when pressed, offered the six-hour sleep estimate.

In the Taft office an aide's first reaction was, "Well, maybe two hours. Senator Taft can do very well on two hour's sleep." Sources closer to the candidate later revised the figure to five hours.

Willkie lieutenants reported with pride that their man has been on a five-hour sleeping schedule for six weeks. "He can take it," they added.

Delegates can take it, too.

They turned the hotel lobbies, narrow streets and historic squares of downtown Philadelphia into an

Philadelphia, June 26.

NO TAKERS: The stampede toward Willkie has gone so far that betters who want to lay some money on him against Tom Dewey, at even money, are finding takers scarce—though Dewey still leads by 18 points in the surveys.

* * * *

WILLKIE-LEWIS? In the indescribable confusion excited here by war and Willkie, some delegates are suggesting GOP tickets which a week ago would have seemed fantastic—a Wendell Willkie-John L. Lewis ticket, for example; a marriage of utilities and C. I. O.

Harlan Miller

Veteran politicians who believe most voters cast their ballots against something rather than for something think this ticket would provide an all-time record as a target for the aginners.

* * * *

TOM'S NICKNAME: Newest nickname for Tom Dewey in the hotel lobbies is "New York's favorite grandson." Dewey was notably nimble and resourceful at his press conference, but he seemed exceedingly nervous and couldn't win much response to his witticisms.

* * * *

PORCH MODERNIZED: Old timers here recall that in 1908—when another Taft was nominated—campaign tours by Presidential candidates were considered undignified. Some version of the "front porch" campaign was deemed correct, until the 1912 fireworks.

Today a microphone modernizes the front porch for campaigners.

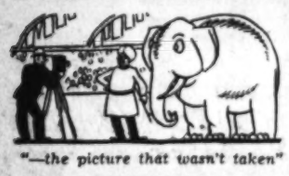
OLD NAMES: Most of the names that were important the years when the names of Taft and Roosevelt were last involved together in national conventions are missing now. Besides these two names, however, one recurs—that of Senator Lodge.

* * * *

He is a member of the Resolutions Committee. His grandfather was chairman of the 1900 convention which nominated Teddy Roosevelt for Vice President; chairman of the resolutions committee in 1904; and the man whom Teddy thanked for saving him from being nominated for a third term in 1908.



"—the picture that wasn't taken"

FIRST ROOSEVELTIAN: Senator Taft's uncle, Henry Taft, was a delegate at the 1900 convention . . . An old-timer tells me that Lafe Young, of Iowa, whose old home is next door to mine in Des Moines, nominated Teddy Roosevelt for the Vice Presidency in 1900.

* * * *

HASTY BLACKBALL? Some politicos think the G. O. P. high command acted hastily in reading Knox and Stimson out of the party for entering the Roosevelt Cabinet. They think it would have been cute, for example, to have put a Roosevelt Cabinet member on the G. O. P. ticket. Or at least induce Knox and Stimson to campaign for the G. O. P. nominee.

* * * *

EARLY TRUST-BUSTING: The first G. O. P. plank against monopolies was inserted in the 1900 platform. It was a plank Teddy later whittled into a club. (That year the current trust-buster, Thurman Arnold, was 9 years old.)

* * * *

EARLY RECIPROCITY: Elderly Republicans also recall that there was a reciprocity plank in that platform. That was also in 1900, the year Capt. Cordell Hull, the 1940 apostle of reciprocity, was getting back home from the Spanish-American War.

"—might revive Dewey drive"

DEWEY EXHIBIT: Some of the more frivolous observers think that maybe a cageful of the crooks sent to prison by Tom Dewey, displayed in the lobby, might put some new drive into the Dewey hopes.

* * * *

STOP WILLKIE DRIVE: If the lights were to go off at the GOP convention and leave it in darkness, some of the Willkie boosters might interpret it as another trick in the drive to stop the utilities wizard.

* * * *

CRACKER BARREL SAGE: Willkie seems willing to stop anywhere—on the sidewalk, in lobbies and corridors, even in bathrooms—to exchange opinions on issues of the day with anyone. He relishes the role of cracker barrel statesman.

* * * *

OUTSIDER? Incidentally, the Hoosier glamour man isn't eligible for membership in Philadelphia's great Republican club, the Union League Club, which requires its members to attest that they have never voted for anyone but a Republican for President, governor or Congress.

* * * *

HOOVER BACKSTAGE: An astonishing phenomenon here is how incompletely the amount of Hoover sentiment behind the scenes is reflected in the open. An inspired nomination speech for him, a well-organized demonstration, might easily blast this sentiment out on the floor of the convention. The soft-pedaled Hoover feeling is another illustration of the gulf between qualification and availability.

* * * *

REPUBLIC'S MIRROR: Unhappily, the atmosphere at the convention mirrors only too accurately the confusion that prevails in the minds of men. Like the Republic, the GOP at the moment seems to be suffering from split personality.

Health Coordinator Urged for U.S. Defense

Roosevelt Program Ignores Medicine, Says Dr. Parran

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

Inferentially criticizing the Administration for medical unpreparedness, Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health Service, yesterday urged immediate appointment of a co-ordinator on medical and health preparedeness for national defense.

The country's No. 1 "New Dealer" in the public health field, Dr. Parran told the New York State Conference of Health Officers and Nurses that the present defense program completely ignored the importance of promoting the civilian population's health.

His address, one of the most aggressive he has delivered since President Roosevelt named him Surgeon General in April, 1936, was delivered at the conference session in Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

In his prepared talk, obtained at Washington headquarters of the Public Health Service, Dr. Parran outlined a great volume of duties waiting to be performed by a co-ordinator who would marshal and utilize resources of all Federal and private agencies concerned with medicine and public health.

This person, who would be to health what William S. Knudsen and Edward R. Stettinius are to production and raw materials, respectively, in the Defense Advisory Commission, would attack the following critical problems, said Dr. Parran:

Listing and classification of professional and technical personnel throughout the country so that, in event of emergency, the extent of these human resources would be known immediately.

Systematic protection, through expanded industrial hygiene measures, of the health of the thousands of workers being drawn into production of defense materials.

Disease Control

Intensification and coordination of efforts in fighting venereal diseases, tuberculosis and malaria.

Conservation of morphine and quinine, supplies of which are threatened by the European war and its repercussions in the Orient. The quinine "war chest" is inadequate, but there is sufficient morphine stored in Washington vaults formerly used for gold to last "at least three years," according to Dr. Parran.

"If or when war comes," said the surgeon general, "every 1,000,000 men mobilized need 7,500 doctors drawn from civil practice. Dentists, nurses, sanitary engineers are needed too. In the mobilization of 4,000,000 during the last war, more than a fourth of the effective medical men of the country were called to the colors.

Counties Without Doctors

"Whole counties were depleted of doctors. Many medical schools were almost put out of business because the best men left for military duty. We should not repeat these mistakes.

"Today we should investigate who should go, who should stay to practice, to teach, to operate an essential civilian service. We have no machinery now to do this. A coordinator of medical and health preparedness should create the machinery, working with the public health agencies, the schools and the medical profession itself."

The President has proposed that all American youth give one year to preparedness training but as yet there is no organization, or even the planning of organization, to examine these boys and girls physically and correct defects, Dr. Parran pointed out.

Physical Status Unknown

The National Youth Administration, he added, has done nothing to appraise the physical status of the thousands of young people it has aided in the last five years.

"Employed by the Work Projects Administration," he went on, "are nearly 2,000,000 people. The Nation wants to use their services. They themselves want to serve in the ways they can best contribute to national safety. What is their physical status? No one knows."

In an apparent bid for cooperation of the American Medical Association, soon to be tried on charges of violating the Sherman anti-trust law, Dr. Parran declared:

"We cannot now afford controversies. The preparedness of our manpower for national safety is not controversial. Given a hand in the planning, all of us together, official and professional, can work out methods in which we all believe."

Kin of Dr. Mudd Enlists in Marines

A great-grandnephew of Dr. Samuel Mudd, the Southern Maryland physician who was imprisoned on Shark Island as an accomplice in the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, has enlisted in the United States Marine Corps. The corps reported yesterday.

He is Raymond Mudd, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mudd, 407 Sixth street southeast. A former student at Eastern High School, he will receive primary training at the Marine base at Parris Island, S. C., after which he intends to become attached to an aviation unit, it was announced.

tional Defense Advisory Commission.

Ford's continued refusal to manufacture in this country engines for any foreign government brought cancellation of the plans for quick starting of mass production of Rolls-Royce motors with the United States and Great Britain dividing the engines. The project called for Britain to take two-thirds and this country one-third of the early production. Ford has consistently declined to produce war implements here except for this country's defense forces. The commission said, however, that Ford interests in Great Britain have a contract with the British government for manufacture of the Rolls-Royce engines.

William S. Knudsen, in charge of industrial production in the commission, said in a statement:

"Cooperation in the production of this important military equipment will be sought elsewhere" by the commission.

U. S. Speeds Naval Training

A short time earlier, a major program for rapid training of 5,000 young men as naval officers annually to help man the swiftly expanding American fleet was announced by President Roosevelt.

The President announced, as well, a wide survey designed to prevent epidemics such as frequently follow wars, and to meet the health and education problems raised by unusual increases in population around centers of defense production activities, such as munitions factories.

And in still another development in the swirling picture of foreign relations, Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee issued a statement expressing hope that the British plans to "fight from the New World" with the British navy would not be "too long delayed by futile encouragement to fight on" in England.

The statement said:

"The probability of Hitler's domination of Europe is evident. It is my personal opinion that there is no time for further muddling. It is no secret that Great Britain is totally unprepared for defense and that nothing the United States has to give can do more than delay the result.

"Churchill's statement, 'We will never surrender' and that if any portions of the British Isles are subjugated 'we will fight from the New World with our navy' if carried out and carried out immediately will end Hitler's ambition for world conquest. It is to be hoped that this plan will not be too long delayed by futile encouragement to fight on. It is conclusively evident that Congress will not authorize intervention in the European war."

The White House said that beginning Friday of this week applications for the naval training will be received from aspirants 19 to 26 years of age, and the first training cruise will begin about July 16, with three battleships available for the program. Applicants must have at least two years of college education.

One month of training at sea in gunnery, navigation, engineering, communications and watchstanding will be followed, for those chosen on a competitive basis, with appointment as Naval Reserve midshipmen. Then there will be provided a 90-day course ashore, and those successfully completing it will be given commissions as ensigns in the Volunteer Naval Reserve for general line duties.

The President's statement said that on the cruises "regular officers and petty officers of the fleet will pound home the art of fighting and maneuvering a modern man o' war and will inculcate these young men with the elements of discipline, team work, loyalty, endurance and technical skill which are the foundations of the naval excellence of the fleet."

"If present world conditions continue," it added, "there will be opportunity for many Naval Reserve ensigns to serve on active duty in the fleet with full pay and allowances."

Same Pay as Midshipmen

A similar plan was utilized in World War days.

Those undergoing the 90-day course will receive the same pay and allowances as Midshipmen at the Naval Academy at Annapolis. Railroad fare and subsistence of applicants en route from and to their homes will be paid. While on the one-month cruise students will receive no pay but will be given their food, lodging, uniforms, books and equipment.

Meanwhile the War Department announced plans to select 9,000 reserve officers for extended voluntary active service to assist in training of recruits.

Some reserve officers in the grade of lieutenant who recently completed six months' active duty with the Regular Army, the announcement said, will be offered the opportunity of extended active duty in the foreign garrisons of the Army so as to release up to 30 per cent of the Regular Army officers at such stations for troop training duty in the continental United States. The garrisons where reserve officers may serve are in the Panama Canal Zone, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, the Philippines and Alaska.

The defense commission's statement on failure of the plane-engines deal with Henry Ford traced the negotiations as follows:

On May 31, Ford Motor officials, including Edsel Ford, president of the company, conferred with the Treasury Department regarding participation in an engine production program and agreed to study the Rolls Royce design, patents on which had been turned over to the United States by England.

On June 11, Edsel Ford and his associates conferred with Knudsen, former General Motors president, and Dr. George J. Mead, head of Knudsen's aeronautical unit in the defense commission. Ford was informed, said Knudsen, that motors produced for the British government would have to be covered by a contract separate from that of the United States War Department.

Edsel Ford telephoned on the following day, Knudsen said, that such an arrangement was satisfactory, and the Anglo-French commission arranged with the British Government for a commitment covering 6,000 engines. The United States Government agreed to take 3,000.

"The combined quantity," said the defense commission statement, "was sufficient to justify the undertaking, as it would assure a more reasonable cost of both motor and equipment for its manufacture."

Contract negotiations were started, Rolls Royce engine drawings were delivered to the Ford company June 19, and on the same day Henry Ford announced he would not produce engines here for Great Britain.

In the Detroit conference Monday, the defense commission said, Ford declared he would make "any number of Rolls Royce engines" for the United States but none for Britain.

Ford's decision, the statement said, "has necessitated termination of negotiations."

"Offer Stands," Says Ford

Detroit, June 25 (AP).—Henry Ford said tonight: "My offer to make airplane, aviation engines or anything else the United States Government needs for defensive purposes still stands. My original proposal was to make airplanes on a mass production basis—up to 1,000 a day within six months—under certain conditions. The conditions among other things specified that they were to be for the defense of this country.

"My offer was made," Ford added, "in response to President Roosevelt's plea for 50,000 airplanes. It still stands."

Advised that William S. Knudsen, a member of the advisory defense commission, had said that "cooperation" in the production of the engines would be sought elsewhere, Ford said that, in entering into discussions with the commission, "it was my understanding that we were dealing with the United States Government and that the commission represented this Government—not that of Great Britain or any other foreign nation."

The Gallup Poll

Majority of Families Willing to Allow Refugee Children to Have Haven in U. S.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., June 25.—With the British government laying plans to send many women and children to the dominions and the United States, a national survey indicates that as many as 5,000,000 American families might be disposed to take British and French refugee children into their homes and care for them until the war is over.

DR. GALLUP

This large figure is, of course, subject to many discounts, for some families say it would depend on the character and background of the children, the length of their stay here, and other factors. But even with these qualifications, the survey results do indicate that, if the movement were properly organized, the American people are willing to go a long way toward solving the child refugee problem of war-torn England and France.

55% in Favor

The study, conducted among a cross-section of America's families in all parts of the country, asked two questions. The first was:

"Should the United States permit English and French women and children to come to this country to stay until the war is over?"

Those with an opinion voted:

Yes	55%
No	42

Approximately one in seven (14 per cent) expressed no opinion.

The second question was:

"If English and French refugees are allowed to come to this country, would you be willing to take care of one or more of these children in your home until the war is over?"

Yes	25%
No	54
Undecided	21

Translated in terms of actual families, these percentages indicate that somewhere between 5,000,000 and 7,000,000 families are willing to open their homes to the child refugees of Britain and France. This number is, of course, far greater than the number of refugees who could possibly be sent here.

Depends on Income

Responses to the second question in the survey clearly show that each voter's attitude is conditioned chiefly by his income. Forty-one per cent of the families polled in the upper income group said they would be willing to take in refugee children, as compared to 27 per cent in the middle income group and 14 per cent in the lower income group. The upper income families willing to take refugees could alone absorb some 2,000,000 of them, which is undoubtedly greater than the number who would be likely to come.

However, many of the voters polled made certain stipulations or conditions under which they would be willing to accept children. These "ifs" are chiefly three: (1) if someone, either the parents of the refugees or the government, helped pay the living expenses of the children—a condition stated chiefly by the middle and lower income groups; (2) if the children are of good character and respectable background; (3) if they stay here only as long as the war lasts.

Refugee Group Formed

Last week an American organization was formed to deal with the refugee problem. The United States Committee for the Care of European Children, with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt serving temporarily as honorary chairman, plans to help refugee children arriving in Canada and to provide homes in the United States for as many youngsters as can enter the country under present laws.

Judging by the results of today's survey, there is substantial public sentiment for changing these laws to permit the arrival of many child refugees.

Defense Council Has a Headache

By Edward Ryan

Newest, and least happy, hunting ground for Washington job seekers is the youthful National Defense Advisory Commission.

Applicants by the thousands, officials glumly reported yesterday, have come to the Federal Reserve Building, general headquarters of the commission, in the past three weeks. Their lure has been a hopeful thought that the mammoth duties of the commission would mean a mammoth employment list.

Harried officials, their desks piled high with unfiled job applications, admitted they would like to see the crowds stay away. They were wary about setting any figure on the number of persons who will eventually work for the commission, and unrestrained about describing the obstacles in the way of landing a job there.

Estimates Vary

Estimates of the number of jobs which the commission will have to be filled varied, this way:

A spokesman for the commission said the working staff which is now under 100 persons will be held to a minimum through the commission's announced plan of having existing agencies in the Government handle major administrative assignments.

About 700 person will be ordered from civil service ratings during the summer to fill jobs in the administrative staff of the Defense Commission, according to preliminary estimates which have been talked over by officials of the defense agency and the Civil Service Commission.

The Defense Commission is likely to become, if not a superagency, a full-grown organization employing 1,500 persons in its own right, according to independent estimates by civil service officials.

While the actual number of jobs to be filled awaits working out of the commission's full program, the obstacles facing job hunters are already operating. Biggest hurdle is this: The jobs are going to be open to but two types of applicants, those with civil service status or prevolus experience in Government service, those who are brought in as "experts" from industrial and other outside positions, by order of the commission chiefs and their close aides.

Tell It to the Guards

There is, officials made clear, no "technique" whereby those who go up to the headquarters and ask for a job can land one.

For the untrained, the first and last line of defense are of the building guards. These have caught and turned away between 400 and 500 persons a day for three weeks, supplying each with an application blank to be mailed back.

An experienced hunter, with knowledge of the ropes, the floor plan of the Federal Reserve Building, and the name of a "friend" in the commission can pass the guards, and reach his man. He will get a welcome, hearty perhaps but short, and an application blank. He, too, must go away and mail back the application.

Interviewing applicants, except for those called to "report for duty," is banned, officials said.

5,000 Apply for Jobs

Modest estimate of the total applicants yesterday was 5,000—no actual tally has been made. Of these about 2,000 have returned application forms filled out. Hundreds more have written in looking for jobs, and many have volunteered to work on a $1-a-year basis when needed. All the applications are to be routed to the Civil Service Commission; the jobs when open will be filled from civil service lists.

Aside from estimating future jobs, officials said they had no accurate count of how many are already working there. So far all employes are "borrowed" from other agencies and listed on their old pay rolls. The commission, in fact, has no pay roll. That will start when they get their $1,000,000 fund under the supplemental defense measure. About June 8, officials said, a report will be made on how many persons are on the pay roll, and the first commission pay checks will be out July 15.

Commander Francis Reichelderfer, chief of the Weather Bureau, will turn over the first spadeful of earth today for construction of the new Weather Bureau Building at Twenty-fourth and M streets northwest. The ground-breaking ceremony will be held at noon.

The $250,000 structure, first unit of three, is expected to ease present overcrowding in the Weather Bureau plant, and will be ready late next spring.

Policeman to Be Reprimanded For Accidentally Shooting Boy, 10

Capitol Board Votes Unanimously to Punish Sergt. Deus

Reprimand and punishment for Vernon O. Deus, Capitol police sergeant whose revolver accidentally fired a bullet through the neck of a 10-year-old colored boy, was voted unanimously late yesterday by the three-man Capitol Police Board.

The nature and severity of the punishment will be determined after investigation of all facts in the case by Lieut. Lloyd W. Brown, board clerk, and Sergt. E. R. Hales.

Kenneth Romney, sergeant-at-arms of the House and board chairman, in disclosing the board's decision, described the shooting as "obviously accidental" but due to "gross negligence" on the part of the policemen in handling his revolver.

Romney also revealed that certain measures are being taken to "tighten up" operation and administration of the Capitol force. Some steps to improve police efficiency at the Capitol have been under consideration for some time, but at least one is the direct result of the shooting Monday afternoon of Fred Walker, jr., 10, of 912 Fifth street northwest. Walker, with three other children, had been taken to the Senate Office Building guardroom after two children had been caught swimming in the Plaza Pool.

Henceforth, Romney said, headquarters for the force will be maintained at all times in the Capitol in offices close to Romney's and with a lieutenant and sergeant in charge. It has been the practice to shift headquarters from the Capitol to the Senate Office Building after 4 p. m., Romney explained.

Romney said all Capitol police carrying guns will be required to leave empty the revolver chamber directly under the hammer thus making discharge by accident virtually impossible.

No shakeup of the force will result from the shooting, Romney said, as only one member was involved. Romney declared he would propose to the board whose other members are Chesley W. Jurney, Senate sergeant-at-arms, and David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, that appointment to the force be to men between 28 and 50 years old.

Minimum Age Now 21

The minimum requirement is now 21 and appointment is by patronage. Many members of the House and Senate find the force convenient for placing in jobs young constituents who come to Washington to finish their education.

By raising the age requirement, Romney said he hoped to keep the force from "becoming topheavy with students."

Before the board yesterday was a statement indicating, it was learned, that the Walker boy had been shot while Deus was using his revolver to so frighten the children that they would not again use the pool between the Capitol and Union Station for swimming.

The statement was made by one of the children, Margaret Marie, 11, of 440 I street northwest, to Private Thomas J. Dailey and Lieut. Roy L. Johnson at her home Monday night.

Boy Robbed of Relief Check Regains Some Faith in Man

Groceries and Funds From Persons Who Read About Family's Plight In The Post Enable Dunfees to Carry On

"His faith in people has returned to some degree . . . all because of the unexpected response from Washington Post readers."

A penciled note yesterday from his parents relayed that message from Collins Dunfee, who had just had a siege of disillusionment at the age of 12. Last week he was robbed of $21.19, the major part of the relief check of the Dunfee family of seven.

But yesterday when Michael E. Dunfee, 50, the father, a World War veteran, took stock of the family resources, he had to count in the unexpected gifts of cash and food from those who read the story in The Post—as well as an an extra portion of cheer and gratitude, which they inspired.

"The money added up to around $18, nearly making up for what we lost. And we got several baskets of food," Dunfee said yesterday at the Self-Help Exchange where he was making brooms in exchange for two meals a day.

At the Dunfee home, 518 D street northeast, unexpected callers began arriving soon after the story of the family's loss appeared.

"An old soldier from the Soldier's Home came over and brought us $2. And I have a sneaking idea that he was responsible for the $10 grocery order that we received," Dunfee said.

"Another soldier from the Army and Navy Club sent us $3. Early one morning a man in uniform came to the door with a bag of groceries which he said was from someone at Walter Reed Hospital—but he left before I could ask him any questions.

"Someone in Berryville, Va., sent $10. And somcone else sent us groceries through the Self-Help Exchange," he added.

"We're still surprised over it all. We didn't expect that such a thing would happen," Dunfee said.

His cheer at being tided over this emergency is mingled with fear that the relief money stolen will be his last check from that source. He explained why:

"I am now considered employable, and I'm told that I've been certified for WPA. But I haven't been interviewed and don't know when there's a chance of getting on WPA."

The Dunfee family, whose five children range from Louisa, 15, down to Evangeline, 3, was plunged into gloom last week by the robbery. Collins had cashed the $30 relief check by paying the grocer and was bringing home the rest of the money, when two colored men snatched the envelope from his pocket.

Commissioners Set Aside Bill On Fund Drives

Legislative plans to regulate fund solicitations by charitable and religious organizations have been abandoned by the Commissioners for this session of Congress.

The Commissioners, it was reported yesterday, are dissatisfied with certain provisions of a measure drafted by the corporation counsel's office. Although advocated for several years by the Better Business Bureau, the bill has never been sent to Capitol Hill.

The current draft was tabled by the Commissioners with an announcement that it would be considered next session. The plan would provide fines up to $300 for unauthorized solicitation. Groups seeking funds would be required to file their intentions at the District Building.

Mrs. Lucy Fox Dies in Kensington; Rites Tomorrow

Mrs. Lucy Alice Fox, 80, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Schneider, 12 Warner street, Kensington, Md., after a week's illness.

Born in Fairfax County, Va., Mrs. Fox lived most of her life in Virginia until she moved to Kensington, five years ago. She was the widow of Zachariah Fox. Besides Mrs. Schneider she is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Eva Schneider, of Washington, and a son, Clarence E. Fox, of Kensington.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the Warner E. Pumphrey Funeral Home, 8424 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, Md. Burial will be in Centerville, Va.

Yardmasters Close Conclave; Resolve To Aid Defense

Amending their constitution to expedite operations in connection with transport of national defense materials and supplies, the Railroad Yardmasters of America yesterday closed their eighteenth annual convention here.

Final event of the program was a dinner dance last night at the Hotel Mayflower, where business sessions were held Monday and yesterday on ways and means of keeping yard procedures apace with preparedness demands.

L. J. Ryan, of Washington, was convention chairman. This morning the 111 yardmaster delegates will leave for a sightseeing trip to the New York World's Fair.

1,800 Orphans To Go on Outing

A big time for Washington's orphans is on the books for today. About 1,800 of them, under the wing of 120 Elks, will take charge of Glen Echo from 10 a. m. to about 4 p. m.

It will be the twenty-eighth orphans' outing sponsored by the Benevolent Protective Society of Elks. The children will come from St. John's Orphanage, the Baptist Home, St. Joseph's Orphanage, St. Vincent's Orphanage, the Hillcrest Home, the German Orphanage, the Swartzell Home and the Masonic Eastern Star Home.

Needy Children's Camp Committee To Renew Appeal

Scores of needy children, playing on the pavements, yesterday had a brighter hope of attending a summer camp, as the Needy Children's Camps Committee met to plan for renewing its appeals to the public for a $7,500 fund.

The group, headed by Mrs. Frank Linzel, met in the office of Juvenile Court Judge Fay L. Bentley.

The fund will extend the camping period in the Chopawamsic area, where a number of Community Chest agencies have camps. Contributions should be sent to the committee treasurer, Claude W. Kniseley, at the Riggs National Bank, Seventh and I streets northwest.

Schools Ready To Aid Defense, McNutt Says

Special Labor Needs Program to Meet Prepared to Start

United States trade and engineering schools are ready to start a training program designed to meet labor needs of national defense industries as they are set forth by the National Defense Advisory Commission, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt announced last night.

At the same time McNutt disclosed a conference of National and State vocational education leaders, called by John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education, is being held in the United States office of education.

State vocational education directors and supervisors of trade and industrial education from all sections of the country are attending the conference to discuss technical questions involved in the administration of a program in which trade and technical schools will train thousands of national defense workers.

Before recessing last week Congress authorized an additional $15,000,000 for the Office of Education. The money will be distributed, McNutt said, to local schools and colleges of engineering for vocational education.

The money will be spent, Studebaker said, primarily for two groups: first, those selected from employment registers for intensive training for specialized jobs, and, second, those now employed who need supplementary training. Instructions to be followed in handling of funds by local authhorities will be mailed out in a few days, Studebaker said.

The program, McNutt declared, will put to use immediate "an investment of more than a billion and a quarter dollars in buildings and equipment for trade and industrial training, an investment manned by a staff of more than 35,000 trained and experienced teachers. . . . This investment can turn out at least 1,250,000 trained workers . . . in less than one year's time."

Studebaker said some schools should be in operation within a week.

Mystery Bomb Is Just a Sample Salesman Forgot

Copyright by New York Times

New York, June 25.—The "bomb" found in a Pullman train from Washington Monday night in Pennsylvania Station proved today to be a forgotton sample of a munitions salesman.

After a night of delicate examination by the police department's bomb squad, the fire department's division of combustibles, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and an Army ordnance inspector, it turned out that the "bomb" was an 81 millimeter shell for a Stokes trench mortar. It was the kind of steep trajectory projectile used by the Doughboys to blast the Germans in opposing trenches during the World War.

The shell was finally claimed by J. B. Decker, vice president and general manager of the Triumph Explosive Co., of Elkton, Md. He told Lieut. James G. Pyke, of the bomb and forgery squad, that the shell was not loaded and explained he had brought it to New York to offer it for sale to "foreign governments."

Board of Education To Organize Monday

The Board of Education, which holds its regular meeting today, will have an organization meeting next Monday, its last session for the summer.

Officers for the coming year will be elected at 10 a. m. Monday. Make-up of the board remains the same, with three members whose terms expire this year having been reappointed. They are Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board; Charles D. Drayton and Col. West A. Hamilton.

State Defense 'Cabinet' Hears Transition Plan

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., June 25.—Col. Mills F. Neal, coordinator of the State defense council, told Gov. Price and his State department heads today that a number of Virginia industries have agreed to help employes, who are National Guardsmen, in taking of field military training.

Neal said a number of industrial plants would pay the difference between an employe's normal salary for three weeks, and the salary paid guard members for three weeks of actual training.

At the meeting of the Price "cabinet" to discuss Virginia's possible transition from a peacetime to a war basis, the Governor said a State policy for State employes who are guardsmen would be announced in the near future. There exists a problem in the finding of temporary replacements for State employe-members of the National Guard who should be called from their work in the event of induction of the guard into Federal service. The State budget office is now making a survey of guard employes and also of those in State service who hold Reserve officers commissions.

Col. Neal asked the Virginia department heads to make a survey of their own departments and to suggest in writing how they might aid the State Defense Council in case of emergency.

Neal added his second to the statement of E. Leigh Stevens, director of United States Government reports in this State, that the FBI is the only authorized agency for the investigation of "fifth column" activities in the United States—a view supported by statements of the President and Attorney General.

Prison Goods Ban Perils D.C. Penal Program

Bills Barring Sale Would Make Trade Instruction Too Costly

District authorities yesterday predicted a complete breakdown of rehabilitation programs at the Lorton Reformatory and Occoquan Workhouse if pending Congressional measures prohibiting outside use of prison-made goods are passed.

The Commissioners have registered strong opposition to bills by Senator Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, and Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, banning the sale of convict-made articles.

The Ashurst measure forbids the interstate transportation of goods manufactured in part or whole by convict labor and has passed the Senate. The Randolph bill would prohibit the sale of goods in Washington made at Lorton or Occoquan—even to the District government.

Both Teach Trades

It is part of the local penal system's rehabilitation program to teach trades in its two principal detention institutions.

The Commissioners said that much of the brick used in local construction—schools, public buildings, etc.,—comes from Lorton and Occoquan. Passage of measures to prohibit use of this brick and other materials would be "disastrous," said Commissioner Hazen.

Should the sale of prison-made goods be cut off, it was explained, penal authorities would be forced to close the Lorton shoe shop, metal foundry, brick plant, clothing mill and numerous other labor enterprises. This, the Commissioners said, would result in an added custodial burden and would demoralize the prison population.

Book Bindery Lost

Already at Lorton is $8,000 worth of book binding equipment installed last year but never used. As part of the District's rehabilitation and prison training activities, the equipment was authorized by Congress last year.

But labor groups protested and subsequent Congressional action eliminated the Lorton book-binding program.

Opera Group Plan Rally on Friday

Members of the Civic Grand Opera Association will hold a rally Friday evening in the ballroom of the Hay-Adams House. Complete plans and casts will be made known for the productions of "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Manon," "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" on July 19 and 26 and August 2 at the Potomac Watergate.

Following the meeting, committees will start a ten-day campaign for these performances. Box offices have been established at the Hecht Co., American Automobile Association and Waters Travel Service. Special facilities for purchase of tickets will be made available to residents of neighboring communities.

Women Accept Red Cross Sewing In Prince Georges

At its regular monthly meeting yesterday the Forest Garden Club of Prince Georges County voted to accept a quota of sewing work from the American Red Cross for refugees in Europe.

The organization will suspend its regular meetings for the summer and will meet every Tuesday in the parish hall of Holy Trinity Church, Mitchellville, to sew on the work received from the Red Cross.

Miss Jeanette Long, Red Cross field organizer from the Hyattsville unit, addressed the meeting.

The following appointments were made: Mrs. Oscar Carlson, Bowie, head of distribution; Miss Karolyn Klager, Marlboro, in charge of dresses; Mrs. William Roberts, Landover, in charge of sweaters, and Mrs. J. J. T. Graham, Bowie, in charge of layettes. The work accepted by the club is expected to be completed by September. 1.

Morrison Predicts Death of C. I. O., Hits Labor Board

Frank Morrison, 80-year-old secretary emeritus of the American Federation of Labor, described the National Labor Relations Act as "all right" last night but added:

"Unfortunately the President picked out three men who have so far failed on many occasions to render a decision in accord with the intents and purposes of the law." He referred to members of the NLRB.

Addressing a meeting of Local 21354, Industrial & Ordinary Insurance Agents Union, at the Annapolis Hotel, he also told of unions disintegrating because they tried to organize industrially instead of by crafts, and predicted:

"I'm going to live to see the day when the C. I. O. will be laid side by side with these others as examples of the efforts of misguided men who have tried to form this kind of organization so many times and failed."

Willkie's 'Glamour' Winning Delegates From Rivals

More Colorful Man Than Taft Sought

Isolation Views Believed Eliminating Dewey, Vandenberg

By Mark Sullivan

Philadelphia, June 25.—The delegates in this convention respect former President Hoover, respect him almost extravagantly. Nine out of ten think that, because of experience and other qualities, he would make a better President than any of the candidates seeking the nomination. But many have thought that while Hoover would be a better President, he would not be as good a nominee.

Looking forward to the campaign against the Democratic nominee, many delegates have thought, vaguely, that Hoover might be under a handicap. If the Democratic nominee were President Roosevelt, then Wendell Willkie or Thomas E. Dewey would be a better type of Republican nominee to fight back at Roosevelt in Roosevelt's own manner.

Or, if Hoover were the Republican nominee, the Democrats would make against him, the same sort of campaign they did in 1932. And since that 1932 campaign against Hoover was successful, many delegates fear a similar campaign might be successful.

Such apprehensions evaporate under analysis—the conditions of 1940 are very different from 1932. But these notions have hung over the convention, arresting any impulse to turn toward Hoover as the nominee.

Do Not Share Apprehensions

There are delegates who do not share the apprehensions. They say that if a party has one man who would be the best President, and if it fails to nominate that one, then the party is left with something to explain.

One condition of this convention has elevated Hoover, for leadership and counsel at least. From the beginning it was apparent the convention was unbossed, unled. Omitting the candidates, it was apparent there was no one who had any kind of control. Chairman John D. M. Hamilton did not have control and would not try to.

Alf M. Landon, as a former Presidential nominee, was in a position to have influence, and was here in person, actively trying to exert influence. But, in a thousand independent-minded delegates, distinctly of a caliber not easily herdable, neither Landon nor any one else had much power.

Delegates Seek Leadership

Meanwhile, conditions arise which made leadership desirable. Even the most independent-minded of the delegates came to wish it. Many a delegate felt unable to make up his own mind which of the candidates was best. Many delegates, some in one direction, some in another, it was not merely a case of comparing candidates, it was a matter of comparing types of candidates—types as diverse, by temperament and background, as Senator Taft and Willkie, or Dewey and Senator Taft.

To many delegates here, some of the conditions were novel and baffling—for example, the existence of a strong candidate, Willkie, who is a former Democrat, and otherwise strange to a Republican convention.

In this situation there was a looking about for guidance. The wish came from delegates, and also from men who in other conventions might themselves be leaders. Spontaneously the wish for leadership turned in one direction. By Tuesday afternoon there was almost a Macedonian cry to Hoover, saying in effect, "You are the one man who can give leadership to this convention; won't you take the responsibility and say which of the candidates is best to nominate under these conditions."

It was known of course that Hoover would arrive Tuesday night, to deliver his speech. Even before that speech was delivered, and regardless of what effect the speech would have, it was clear Hoover was going to be a powerful figure, and could have great influence, if he should choose to exert it.

Dewey Believed Slipping

Among the avowed candidates, meanwhile, certain shifts were discernible. It was still apparent Dewey would have most delegates in the first ballot. But one felt Dewey was not holding his momentum. Nearness of war, and the problems it would thrust on America, caused delegates to reflect on Dewey's youth and lack of national experience. Also, Dewey, in the early days of his candidacy, had taken a stand further toward isolation than now seems practicable for America to keep.

Senator Vandenberg seemed also a casualty of the war. He had taken, long ago, a position of isolation more extreme than America now wants.

Senator Taft kept his great capital, which is esteem for his character and ability, but delegates feel that the Democratic nominee might be Mr. Roosevelt, and they feel that on the stump Taft would not be Mr. Roosevelt's equal in color, charm, so-called "glamour."

In proportion as the three orthodox candidates seemed not to make progress, so did the remarkable Willkie loom.

Today's Program At Philadelphia

Philadelphia, June 25 (AP).—The program for Wednesday, June 26, at the Republican National Convention:

Convention called to order at 10 a. m., Eastern standard time.

Prayer by Rabbi Michael Aaronsohn, Cincinnati.

Nominations for President.

Rollcall on Presidential nominations.

(Note: The program is somewhat uncertain at this time. For example, if the resolutions committee does not have its report ready by tomorrow, the convention is expected to recess to give the committee more time.)

Last Rites Today For Mrs. Topliffe

Funeral services for Mrs. Theodora Casey Topliffe, daughter of the late Lyman R. Casey, North Dakota's first United States Senator, will be at 2 p. m. today in Green Mount Cemetery, Baltimore.

Mrs. Topliffe died in New York June 14 after a long illness. She lived most of her life in Washington, but traveled a great deal in Europe and Africa. Among her friends were many stage people, including George Arliss.

G. O. P. Pins War Tag on Democrats

may be slightly changed by the drafting committee this morning.

Thus, the platform will draw the peace-war issue as indicated in the addresses of Permanent Chairman Joseph W. Martin yesterday and former President Hoover last night. An advance copy of the foreign affairs section of Hoover's speech was in the subcommittee's hands during its deliberations.

Three noninterventionists yesterday were added to the subcommittee: Senator John Thomas, of Idaho; Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts, and Senatorial Nominee C. Wayland Brooks, of Illinois.

It was Brooks who proposed the addition of a clear-cut contrast between Republican and Democratic parties on the peace-war question. He offered to the subcommittee a plank adopted by the Illinois Republican Convention, June 14, which, after stating that the Republican Party "stands for Americanism and peace" denounced the Democrats as standing for "internationalism and war"; but the subcommittee apparently felt this was too strong an indictment.

Besides the Republican-Democratic contrast, the plank is understood to denounce President Roosevelt for "impulsive, provocative and incendiary" statements on foreign affairs and failure to build up adequate national defense.

It contains a most emphatic declaration against American involvement in foreign wars and for a steady and efficient rearmament program. The plank reaffirms the Monroe Doctrine.

Aid to "oppressed peoples" whose liberties are threatened and whose ideologies agree with ours" is indorsed, but only if it does not violate international law or interfere with the Nation's defense. To counterbalance this gesture, the isolationists insisted that there be a reminder of the cost of the last year war in men and money.

After the subcommittee had finished redrafting this bitterly contested plank today, Landon observed that it is framed "so that as events develop, the candidate can chart his own course."

Marks "Changing World"

In response to a question, he admitted the plank had undergone revision to meet the objections of resolutions committee members who had been unable to reach Philadelphia last week when preliminary work was done.

(In this category were Senators Tobey, of New Hampshire, and Lodge.)

The foreign affairs plank, which has virtually eclipsed interest in all the other planks, was fought over in the drafting subcommittee until early yesterday. A few hours later, it was referred in unfinished state to the full resolutions committee, which, after long and acrimonious debate, sent it to Landon's group for strengthening. Then it was returned to the resolutions committee for ultimate approval.

May Limit Discussion

The reciprocal trade plank was approved yesterday afternoon by the resolutions committee. It indorses the principle of trade agreements but recommends that Congress pass on each one.

An attempt of Senator Lodge to write an old-age pension plank into the platform was turned down by the full committee. He urged a "comprehensive system of old-age assistance organized on a pay-as-you-go basis supported by a fair and equitable tax widely distributed."

Business Plank

A business plank was said to have promised that if the Republicans were returned to power they would seek to get idle men and idle capital together, remove some of the restrictions on business, and thus attempt to create new wealth.

A farm plank said to call for a "profit price" system, continuation of soil conservation payments "without regimentation" and encouragement for the small farmer also won approval.

The committee was reported to have indorsed a labor plank urging revision of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, but strongly reaffirming the right of collective bargaining.

The committee was reported to have endorsed a proposal by Senator Townsend (Republican), Delaware, advocating cessation of foreign silver purchases.

Hitler Killed Hull Pacts, No Use Arguing, Willkie Says

"I do not change my position. I merely state to you that all old positions are obsolete, as dead as last week's newspaper, and that any man who aspires to leadership must think wholly in the present on the trade treaties.

Referring to the Hull pacts, Willkie said:

"They have been legislated out of being by Adolf Hitler, whose victories in Europe have created a new world and conditions never faced by inhabitants of this globe.

"Today we must deal, not with the past and its dead problems, but with today and its live problems and with the future and its as yet unborn problems, and its future and let the dead past bury its dead."

Dewey today claimed that he had picked up another State delegation in his drive for the nomination. However, he refused to identify it.

The impression persists that Dewey's candidacy is sagging badly, and that the battle for the number 1 prize is shaping up as a contest between Willkie and Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio.

The Willkie strategists said they expected their man would have in excess of 100 votes on the first ballot. This is considerably more than they have ever claimed before. Actually these are votes that were not solicited. What the Willkie people are after is second and third ballot votes because they are convinced that both Taft and Dewey are going to begin slipping after the early balloting.

At the same time there was a report here that Henry Ford would soon issue a statement endorsing Willkie.

Pew Cheers Taft Camp

The Taft camp was radiant today after Joseph I. Pew, jr., Pennsylvania Republican leader, said the Ohioan was his second choice after Gov. Arthur H. J. H. James.

Here, however, was another proof that this is an extraordinary convention—extraordinary because of its lack of bosses and its abundance of foot-loose delegates. Pew is no Penrose, and nothing could better demonstrate that than today's developments.

As Pew was saying nice things about Taft, Jerome H. Louchheim, wealthy retired contractor and a Pennsylvania delegate, announced that he was breaking away from Gov. James and going to Willkie. He thus lined up with four other pro-Willkie delegates in the Pennsylvania aggregation.

D. C. Bloc for Willkie

The most difficult thing to determine is Willkie's reserve strength. His friends say it is enormous but they are not giving out any figures.

Today it was learned that the three delegates from the District of Columbia—Charles C. Glover, jr., Ms. Louise Hunter Strong and J. Franklin Wilson—are ready to go over to Willkie after giving a complimentary first ballot vote to Senator Capper of Kansas.

Edward F. Colladay, national committeeman for the District, has been busy trying to pave the way for a ticket made up of Taft and Dewey.

Dewey Denies Taft Deal

In this connection, Dewey said today that the report that he or his agents were dickering with the Taft forces was a "convention phony."

The Willkie headquarters in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel were more jammed than ever today. All kinds of people tried to push their way through the pack. Ole Olson, of Olson and Johnson, came down from New York to tell Willkie that the metropolis was "hellzapoppin'" for him. Clarence Buddington Kelland, author of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," arrived and joined a budding brain trust made up of Representative Bruce Barton and Roy Howard to help with the Hoosier's statement on the trade pacts.

Nothing like Willkie's informality has ever been seen at a national convention. Ralph Smith, of the Atlanta Journal, saw Willkie for the first time on an elevator.

Word for Atlanta

"What have you got to say for Atlanta?" asked Smith.

"Let's get some food—and I'll tell you," said Willkie.

They ate at a drug store counter.

Everett Watkins, of the Indianapolis Star, interviewed Willkie while he was soaking in a bath tub.

The corn stalk candidate, who came here traveling light, ran out of shirts and tried to borrow one. None of his friends had a neck like his—size 17. He had to send a messenger out for one. He needed underwear, too, but the kind he used couldn't be acquired for love or money. It turned out that Mrs. Willkie always buys his underwear in the Wanamaker basement in New York.

Cab Driver Boosts Him

Sam Blythe, the veteran political writer, said he had been covering conventions since Bryan won with his "cross of gold" speech in 1896, but never saw anything like this.

"I got off at the Philadelphia station," Blythe said, "and a taxicab driver started buttonholing me for Willkie. This is one time when the people are controlling the convention."

A committeeman from Texas called for his mail at the Bellevue-Stratford last night and was handed a batch of telegrams from the Lone Star State. He counted them.

"There are 12 of them," he said. "I know without looking that 11 of them are asking me to support Willkie. The twelfth ought to be from my wife, but I wouldn't bet on it."

Nice Predicts Vandenberg Will Get 5 Md. Votes

Sees Five Md. Votes for Him On 3d Ballot

Expects Willkie To Get 11 of Dewey's Pledged Delegates

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 25.—Support for Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, on at least the second and third ballots began developing today among the 16 delegates from Maryland to the Republican National Convention.

Pledged to Dewey as a result of the State's Presidential preference primary, in which he was the only candidate, the 16 Maryland votes will be cast as a unit for the New York prosecutor on the first ballot.

Thereafter, said former Gov. Harry Nice, the delegation was expected to divide.

The big change, he said, would come on the second ballot with 13 votes going to Willkie and 3 to Vandenberg. Then, he said, on the third, Vandenberg would pick up 2 more, leaving 11 for Willkie.

Nice said his forecasts were based upon an assumption that Dewey strength would not be sufficient on the first and second ballots to warrant carrying on his support from Maryland. Under custom the State's delegates recognizing the primary results would support Dewey so long as they "conscientiously felt" he had a chance of nomination.

Effort to Unseat Wise

Philadelphia, June 25 (AP).—Virginians supporting Henry A. Wise, of Kiptopeke, for reelection as national Republican committeeman, said today that the opposition to him within the State's delegation to the National Convention came from the same sources which sought unsuccessfully to have C. Bascom Slemp, of Big Stone Gap, made a delegate at large.

The effort to unseat Wise, his supporters said, had "about the same chance of success" as did the Slemp move.

Some Ninth District Republicans are backing former State Senator Ryland Craft, of Gate City, against Wise. The election is expected to be the principal business of the delegation's caucus tomorrow.

It also became known that Mrs. Murray Boocock, of Keswick, who is not attending the convention because of illness, may be opposed for reelection as national committeewoman from Virginia. Her prospective opponents are Mrs. Will Logan, wife of the Commonwealth's Attorney of Shenandoah County, and Mrs. Felix Parker, of Roanoke.

A prominent delegate, who declined to be quoted, said a poll of the Virginia delegation showed Taft should get a minimum of eight and a maximum of 12 Virginia ballots on the first ballot; Dewey, four to seven; Willkie, one to four; Vandenberg, one to two, and Bridges, one. One member predicted the Virginia vote would be little changed on the second ballot, but that Willkie's strength would increase to perhaps eight votes on the third ballot.

his 79-year-old mother, Mrs. William Howard Taft—who was not present when her husband was nominated in 1908, but thoroughly approves of the difference time has made in women in politics.

She wore a stunning red dress to the convention last night, and declared, "I want to be present when my son gets the nomination."

Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, 82-year-old second wife of the twenty-third President, arrived this afternoon and said she came expressly to hear former President Hoover's speech.

Only candidate Thomas E. Dewey has held out against the feminine onrush. Mrs. Dewey is reported ill at their home in New York. One of the sayings at Convention Hall is that "everybody's here except Mrs. Dewey and the Stassen baby."

Mrs. Simms Aids Dewey

Candidate Dewey, however, has Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms to glamorize his headquarters and was the first candidate to announce that a woman—Mrs. Grace Norris, of Burlington, Wash., would second his nomination.

Both of Senator Arthur Vandenberg's daughters and his wife are "on the Van Wagon," the girls busy at headquarters and Mrs. Vandenberg dashing about the town making friends and influencing people.

Seventeen-year-old Sally Gannett has been pictured with all the live elephants used for her father's parades—and Mrs. Frank Gannett is omnipresent.

She reprimanded her husband by note this morning when she heard he was receiving some men delegates in his pajamas.

"There's nothing gets you so quickly as politics, horse racing, and the newspaper business," she declared when her husband remarked that a man didn't get into politics alone any more but had to take his whole family into it, too.

Unexpectedly, and with no planning on his part, Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., a confirmed bachelor, today became a party to one of the neatest feminine tricks of the week.

Martin Gets Kiss

Mrs. James P. Winne, wife of the National Republican Committeeman from Hawaii came up to present him with a gorgeous white lei after he had been selected chairman. As she sliped the flowers about his neck, she also kissed him.

While thousands roared and photographers begged for a retake Chairman Martin blushed helplessly.

All four Republican Congresswomen are here as "observers" only. Mrs. Frances Bolton, however, is wearing a Taft button. Mrs. Eidth Nourse Rogers, who voted against a Congressional recess for the convention, is keeping an eye on the platform makers, hoping "the right stand will be taken on the foreign situation."

Four women were named to serve on the rules committee as follows: Mrs. E. G. Tallman, of Delaware; Mrs. Grace T. Batchelder, of New Hampshire; Mrs. Marion F. Yatman, of Rhode Island, and Louise Hunter Snow, of the District of Columbia.

TAKES OVER CHAIRMANSHIP—Just before his 15-minute speech at the Republican Convention in Philadelphia yesterday, Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, was elected permanent chairman of the convention. He acknowledged the cheers of party members as Gov. Harold E. D. C. Antiaircraft Unit Gets 6 New Trucks

The 260th Coast Artillery, anticraft division of the District National Guard, announced yesterday that six new heavy-duty trucks have been added to the equipment.

The trucks, known as "prime movers," are six-wheel vehicles capable of carrying 11,000 pounds. They will be used primarily for transporting other vehicles, and increase to more than 80 the number of trucks operated by the artillery.

Fuel Men to Frolic

The fifteenth outing of District fuel merchants will be held today at Bay Ridge, Md., under the auspices of the coal division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association. District coal dealers announce that coal yards will be closed Saturdays for the balance of the summer.

animated cross-section of the G. O. P. today. They are giving Philadelphian bars and night spots their briskest business in months.

"Lots of Fervor"

They are listening at intervals of 15 minutes to "God Bless America" played by cruising loudspeaker cars, brass bands, steam calliopes and hand organs. The Irving Berlin tune is already entrenched as the convention's unofficial theme song.

Franklyn Waltman, the party's head publicity man, was unable to account completely for the melody's vogue, but said: "It fits in pretty well with the kind of campaign we're running this year."

"It has lots of fervor," he added.

Highlight of the continuous performance on Broad street, home of the Union League citadel and the National Committee's official hotel, was the arrival of Herbert Hoover at the Bellevue Stratford two hours before his convention address.

A crowd of more than 1,000 swarmed around the former President's black limousine when it pulled up at the hotel entrance. Hat-waving and chants of "We Want Hoover" greeted the G. O. P.'s elder staesman. Half a dozen policemen eased him through the crowd into the hotel.

Mummers Repeat Parade

The tradftional New Year's Day procession of the Mummers was repeated for the benefit of convention visitors and Philadelphia natives. Police estimated the number of spectators at more than 500,000.

Thousands of marchers displayed their fantastic costumes over a 4-mile, confetti-strewn route. Mounted police engaged in a two-hour tussel to hold their lines on South Broad street.

Spectators were ten deep in front of the Bellevue-Stratford and the Union League Club. The Union League this week is displaying an illuminated eagle and electric light bulb sign reading, "Love of Country Leads."

The banners of the paraders were a roll call of Philadelphia ward clubs, fraternal bodies and neighborhood businessmen. Overhead an airplane flew a neon sign advertising a local beer.

Passing the Union League the Polish-American Association string band played "Over the Rainbow." The uptown string band offered "Confucius Say."

G.O.P. Women Want First Lady Who'll Stick in White House

Poll Reveals Mrs. Coolidge Is Still Belle Ideal of Republican Feminists; Willkie, Hoover Their Leading Candidates

By Inez Robb.

International News Service Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 25.—Any lady for First Lady as long as her name isn't Eleanor and she's prepared to live in the White House instead of a suitcase!

A galloping poll taken at the G. O. P. conclave shows that Republican women will accept a First Lady who's fat, thin, short, tall, blond, brunette or red headed, if only she'll stick in the White House once she gets there.

Anyone who has (1) charm, (2) dignity, (3) intelligence and is a dead-ringer for Mrs. Calvin Coolidge will do. Grace Coolidge is still the belle ideal of Republican womanhood.

But this doesn't mean that up-and-coming Republican feminists want that fiction known as an "old-fashioned girl." For all their veneration for Mrs. Coolidge, many have a sneaking admiration for Eleanor Roosevelt's humanitarianism and boundless energy.

Mrs. Margaret Wyeth, chic national committeewoman from Missouri, summed it up:

"We want a woman who's charming, intelligent and well-informed on public affairs. I don't even mind if she's vocal in her convictions, but darned if I want her wired for sound!"

"A First Lady's first duty should be to her husband and to her family," said Mrs. Ralph D. Brewster, whose husband has just received the Republican nomination for the United States Senate from Maine. But that doesn't man the old-fashioned type who merely dusts and sees that the company's well fed. That type is gone forever.

"We need a First Lady who takes an interest in national affairs, but the wife of a public official should never overshadow her husband!"

A middle-aged Iowa delegate, who refused to give her name, said she "had no objections to Mrs. Robert A. Taft, although she talks a lot, too. I think a woman ought to be a good talker and have opinions worth voicing, but that doesn't mean that every time you turn the dial, she ought to pop out of the radio."

"A woman who isn't officious" would fill the bill as First Lady as far as petite Mrs. William Doak is concerned. Mrs. Doak is the widow of the former Secretary of Labor in the Hoover Cabinet.

"Our candidate's wife will be good enough for me," was the diplomatic reply of Jane Todd, vice chairman of the New York State committee.

One frank Republican woman from the Midwest said she'd like a First Lady who "wore the customary step-ins, not pants!"

Mrs. William A. de Groot, State committee woman from the fifth assembly district in New York said: "I would certainly like a First Lady who was interested in national affairs in these crucial times. Every woman should have a knowledge of the world in which she lives. I have worked on more than one committee with Mrs. Roosevelt, and I confess I always found her most admirable."

Willkie and Hoover are leading candidates on the tea-drinking main line circuit, where every hostess worth her salt tosses a daily cocktail party to tempt delegates from the Taft, Dewey, Vandenberg and Gannett camps. If the martinis, scotch and sodas and orange pekoe hold out until Thursday, a Hoover-Willkie ticket may result.

Complete Text of Hoover's Convention Address, Offering 'Seven Stern Tasks'

'Must Reform The Reforms,' G. O. P. Told

Totalitarian Liberals Fathers of New Deal, Ex-President Says

We are here faced with the task of saving America for free men. The whole world is in confusion. Two-thirds of the world is at war. Twenty nations have become the stamping ground of militant despotisms. Almost everywhere in the Old World the light of liberty for which men have struggled and died has gone into a long night. Men and nations have lost their moral and spiritual moorings. Even in America our system of liberty has been weakened. We are divided in mind and fearful. And confusion in liberal nations is made worse by the spread of incompetence in government.

The world has survived confusion before. And men have grown in soul and safety. But how? Because some organizations of men have stood solid. They stood not because they knew the solutions to all these confusions, not even because they have the power to find solution. They stood firm and they held the light of civilization—until the furies passed, because they held to certain positive principles of life, of morals, of spiritual values.

In a time of confusion the action of a Republican convention 80 years ago saved this nation for free men. And free men of two generations built it into unparalled greatness.

Upon this party again rests the responsibility for the freedom and prosperity of men for the next two generations. The Republican Party again accepts that responsibility here and now.

Crisis in America No Sudden Blow

Our party is not concerned here with petty or factional issues or minor criticisms.

This crisis in America is no sudden blow. We have witnessed a steady sapping of our system of liberty and the mismanagement of government for the last eight years.

During all this time we have had 10,000,000 chronically unemployed, 18,000,000 of our fellow Americans have been continuously on relief. Agriculture has been held afloat by Government subsidies. Unending deficits and huge increases in debt threaten the financial stability of the Government. Our industry and business are hesitant and are afraid. In this decade, we have actually decreased in National income and National wealth for the first time in 150 years. America has gone backward. The human consequence is that one-third of our people are frozen to poverty.

This condition is not an inheritance from the inevitable world depression which followed the last World War. It is the result of incompetence in government. We were on the way to recovery in 1932. Every other democracy had recovered from that depression long before the outbreak of this war.

More Than Billion Shaken by Revolts

Now, economically weakened for the past eight years, we are faced with mismanaged National defense.

And this new world war is no sudden blow. It comes from the destruction of systems of liberty in the Old World. Since the last World War over a billion human beings in Europe and Asia have been shaken by revolutions. The insidious poisons of men's minds from this cauldron sweep over us.

And now with this war one liberty-loving country after another has been submerged. Our indignation, our sympathies, and our fears are desperately involved in their heroic struggles for freedom.

And now France, who tended the cradle of our liberties, has fallen. But the spirit of a great race does not die. France will rise again.

Whatever the outcome of this world catclysm, whatever the solution of our domestic crisis, the pattern of this world will not again be the same. Dictatorships, totalitarian economics, and militarism will long continue over a large part of the earth. New economic and political forces will be loosened upon the world.

Part II

Our Tasks Are Seven

To be prepared, we must at once undertake seven stern tasks.

First. We must restore and revitalize liberty in America.

Second. We must restore and rebuild morals in government.

Third. We must restore decent life and living to one-third of our farmers and workers, who have been chronically submerged by the New Deal.

Fourth. We must restore competence to government.

Fifth. We must prepare this nation to defend the Western Hemisphere.

Sixth. We must develop and maintain foreign policies that keep us out of these wars unless we are attacked. We should facilitate all nations fighting for their freedom in procuring materials and munitions, but subject to definite limitations which keep up out of war.

Seventh. We must recall our people from the flabbiness of the New Deal. We Must reestablish stamina, character and ideals. We must regenerate hope and confidence in America.

Part III

Weakening the Structure of Liberty

Let us first examine the weakening of the structure of liberty in our Nation.

There is a far larger war in the world today than a war of tanks and airplanes. It is even more dangerous to America. That is a war of hostile ideas, philosophies and systems of government. There are no neutrals in that war. That is where we have to fight.

From this vast seething laboratory of the Old World in revolution we can find warnings of the fate of democracy.

For more than a century and a half before the war of 1914 the whole continent of Europe up to the Russian border had been struggling upward toward liberty. These people in 20 races had attained a large degree of free government—free speech, free worship, orderly justice and free enterprise. After that war, liberty and peace seemed assured to the world.

And then in less than 20 years hundreds of millions of these people surrendered freedom for bondage under totalitarian government. This abandonment of liberty has been the most gigantic revolution in history.

Two years ago I was the invited guest of some 12 European countries. That gave to me a unique opportunity to inquire into some things that might help the American people.

Poignant Drama Before Last Act

I wanted to know more of what ideas and pressures had plunged these nations into dictatorships.

There will flash into your minds that it was communism, fascism or naziism. That is not what I refer to. They were the effect. I was seeking the cause. Liberty had been weakened long before the dictators rose under those banners. There was a long poignant drama before the last act in this gigantic tragedy of civilization.

There were many disintegrating forces. But also in every single case before the rise of totalitarian governments there had been a period dominated by economic planners. Each of these nations had an era under starry-eyed men who believed that they could plan and force the economic life of the people. They believed that it was the way to correct abuse or meet emergencies in systems of free enterprise. They exalted the state as the solvent of all economic problems.

These men thought they were liberals. But they also thought they could have economic dictatorship by bureaucracy and at the same time preserve free speech, orderly justice and free government. They can be called the totalitarian liberals. They were the spiritual fathers of the New Deal.

These men were not Communists or Fascists. But they mixed these ideas into free systems. It is true that Communists and Fascists were round about. They formed popular fronts and gave the applause.

These so-called liberals shifted the relation of government to free enterprise from that of umpire to controller. Directly or indirectly they politically controlled credit, prices and production of industry, farmer and labor. They devalued, pump-primed and inflated. They controlled private business by Government competition, by regulation and by taxes. They met every failure with demands for more and more power of control. And they employed that handmaiden of power, named "Gimmee a Billion, Quick."

Free Economic Life Ignored

These leaders ignored the fact that the driving power of free economic life is the initiative and enterprise of men.

When it was too late they discovered that every time they stretched the arm of government into private enterprise, except to correct abuse, then somehow, somewhere, men's minds and judgments became confused. At once men became fearful and hesitant. Initiative slackened, industry slowed down in production.

Then came chronic unemployment and franting Government suending in effort to support the unemployed. Government debts mounted. And finally Government credit was undermined. Out of the miseries of their people there grew pressure groups— business, labor, farmers, demanding relief or special privilege. Class hate has poisoned cooperation.

Does this sound unfamiliar to you?

It was all these confusions which rang down the curtain upon liberty. Frustrated and despairing, these hundreds of millions of people voluntarily voted the powers of government to the man on horseback as the only way out. They did it in hope of preserving their national independence.

And that blight of totalitarian liberalism even spread to Great Britain in 1929. But that liberty-loving people overthrew it in 1931. The British fully recovered prosperity in 1934. The blight swept over France in 1936 under Premier Blum and the French attempted to escape collapse by voting his government out in 1938. But their productive life was so injured that they are paying in blood, in tears and defeat.

Need I carry this analogy further?

Totalitarian Liberals Here

We have now had eight years of experience with our own totalitarian liberals. Battling against all the natural forces of recovery, they succeeded in stabilizing depression.

What is more, in forcing their economic measures upon us they have given even deeper wounds to Liberty. Their headlines in history would be: Vast Powers to President; Vast Extension of Bureaucracy; Supreme Court Decides Against New Deal; Attack on Supreme Court; Court Loaded With Totalitarian Liberals; Congress Surrenders Power of Purse by Blank Checks to President; Will of Legislators Weakened by Patronage and Political Pie; Attacks on Business; Stirring Class Hate; Pressure Groups Stimulated; Men's Rights Disregarded by Boards and Investigations; Resentment at Free Opposition; Attempt to Discredit Free Press.

Certainly the New Deal has not been allergic to power. And now fed fat on power they demand a third term for Mr. Roosevelt. That is not a mere violation of tradition. It is a violation of a fundamental restraint on power in this Republic.

But we Republicans would welcome Mr. Roosevelt as a candidate. For this battle must be fought out under the guns of debate.

Part IV

Restoration of American Living

One of our Republican tasks is to restore security of living and hope to those 40,000,000 Americans—farmers and workers—who are today plunged into insecurity or destitution. Restoration of jobs to 10,000,000 unemployed is the first step to lift this mass of poverty. It is the first step to relief of farmers. It is the first step to balancing our budget.

Unemployment is not a chronic disease of a free system. It is a disease of Governmental interference with that system. These jobs can be restored alone by the restoration of the vitality of free enterprise.

Let me say at once I am not interested in free enterprise because it is a property system. I am interested in it because intellectual and spiritual liberty can be sustained only by economic liberty. They are indissolubly bound in a common fate. I am interested in free enterprise because it is the one dynamic force by which we can restore jobs to our people.

It was dynamic individual enterprise which raised the country from insignificance to greatness. It was not government that put these prairies under the plow. It was not government that flung these railways across a continent. It was not government that built these great factories or cities. It was not government that brought forth these great inventions. It was not government that builded these millions of churches, or added this wealth of music, art and literature.

Is this Nation to be a great national workshop or a vast eleemosynary institution? We cannot exist two-thirds workers and one-third dependents.

We Must Now Reform the Reforms

It is easy to prove that the people are fearful of the New Deal. The evidence of their fears and loss of confidence is when they postpone the building of homes. It shows when they fail to improve and construct factories to produce the new goods to which science and invention beckon our energies. Let me give you just one figure.

The New Deal points with pride to its housing schemes. In the seven years before the New Deal, and with no subsidies, a free America built 3,437,000 new family units of housing. During the whole New Deal, with all its subsidies, America has built 1,737,000 new units. They no doubt have some more "on order."

There can be a free economy in America which releases the productive energies of man. Or there can be a dictated economy. These cannot be mixed. A free economy means sweat, turmoil, competition—hard at times if you choose. It means ever-new wrongs that must be righted, but it means, also, resistless growth and progress.

The restoration of confidence does not require exploitation or monopoly. A free people can no more tolerate private economic power without checks and balances than we can tolerate political power without balances and checks. But in effecting great reforms there is a dividing line. Upon the right of this line is cure of abuse and solution of marginal problems. On the left of it is dictation and tyranny and discouragement of production. We must now reform the reforms.

A confident, alert, alive and free people can quickly repair losses, repay debts and bury mistakes.

In the meantime, while we are getting our economic machine back to work we must care for those who suffer. It was a Republican Administration in 1930 that first announced we cannot allow Americans to go hungry and cold from no fault of their own. We organized and prevented it. It was a Republican Administration which first started relief for farmers.

But wholesale relief cannot go on for ever. No government can carry this deficit indefinitely. We must restore these people to self-support before the money fails. These people want work. They want their self-respect restored through productive jobs.

That can come only through a change of administration.

Part V

Morals In Government

And that brings me to restoration of morals in government.

Does anyone in the United States doubt that the New Deal has built up the most gigantic political machine to control the vote ever known in this country?

What of the abundantly proved misuse of relief for politics?

What of this shady substitution of political patronage for the merit system?

What of the use of taxpayers' money for partisan propaganda?

The whole business stank to an extent that the Jeffersonian Democrats joined with Republicans in Congress in passing new laws trying to stop this political corruption.

The effect of the new law on the New Deal has probably been to increase the use of the telephone instead of the typewriter.

Today there are three or four hundred thousand New Deal political officeholders who are the officers over an army of 10,000,000 voters who receive Government benefits. A modern explanation of the New Deal method would be that elections have been taken into protective custody.

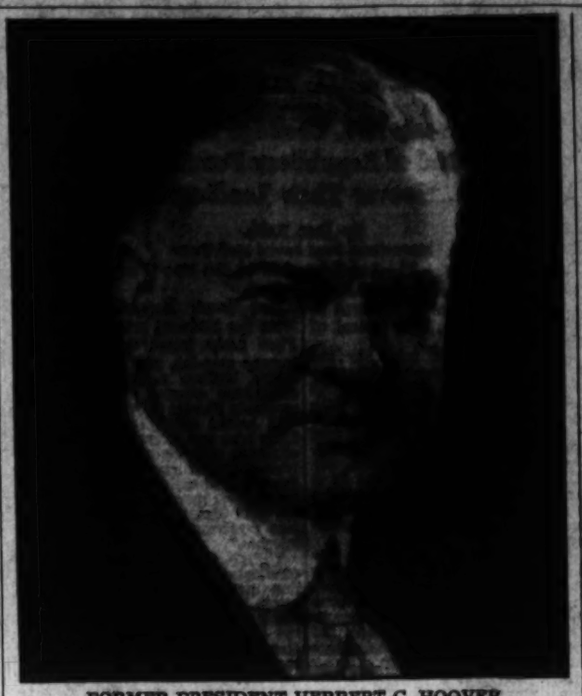
There is no time tonight to go into the whole field of intellectual and financial morals of the New Deal. They will be amplified in this campaign.

At the end of this debate we ought to have an election, not an auction.

Is all this liberalism? Liberals fought these things for centuries.

Does not the citizen lose faith in moral standards when he sees such Government dealings?

There can be no double standard of morals in a republic. For ideals must be served with clean hands.



FORMER PRESIDENT HERBERT C. HOOVER

Part VI

Competence In Government

Let us for a moment explore the question of competence in government, as distinguished from philosophy and morals.

There can be monstrosities in broad policies of government beyond those that merely cost money. They can jeopardize the Republic. I may mention a few samples. You will have others.

My first comment is that competence in government is not alone laws and policies. It is the capable administration of them. That means the quality and experience of the men and women doing the job. Many good objectives have gone wrong up that alley.

For 50 years the American people have fought to dig out the spoils system. Our people built a great dyke of competence through nonpolitical selection by merit. At one time 80 per cent of Federal servants were employed that way. Today one-half of its officials have never passed a merit examination. That is, however, a minor part of the subject. I cannot discuss its major aspects because I do not wish to deal in personalities.

Fiscal Policies And Mounting Debt

My second example of the consequences of incompetence in government relates to continued deficits and mounting National debt in peacetime. It is a dull subject. And like any chronic disease we "sort of get used to it." Deficits, debts, inflations, and their spawn of managed currency have been the curse of the earth ever since the last war. They are inscribed on the tombstones of every fallen democracy.

We are still alive and therefore I make two mild suggestions. These deficits are partly the natural results of pressures that arise from stabilized depression.

Therefore I suggest that we release national energies that make productive jobs.

Thereby we would restore the National income from the present 70 billions to the 100 billions it ought to be today. Thereby the revenues of the Government would increase automatically. Thereby the billions of dollars for relief would decrease automatically.

These deficits are partly due to men who, no matter what they say, show no comprehension that the money which they spend comes from the sweat of people who toil and produce. Now the ordinary peacetime expenses of the Government have increased about four billion under the Republicans to nine billions under the Abundant Life. My other suggestion is that somehow, somewhere we might pare a little off the abundance without hurting anybody but office holders. But these men cannot stop spending. It is in their blood. And it is part of the new economics.

Debts Are Explosives To Destroy Reforms

Our National debt is now long past the danger sign and its speed is increasing. It already weakens our National defense.

One source of the intellectual depression today is Mr. Roosevelt's gay dismissal of his fantastic National debt by the idea that Americans do not owe it, because we owe it to Americans.

You and your grocer are both Americans. You might ask your grocer if he would not concede the same idea. The fact is this debt represents the self-denial of those who have toiled and saved. They have a large part of their savings in that debt. Their 125,000,000 insurance policies, and their 30,000,000 millions savings and bank accounts are in it. Our children will have to pay it. And they will pay it with toil and bitterness toward our generation. They will be working to pay for the follies of the New Deal instead of their own living.

And in another direction these deficits and debts are becoming the explosives which will destroy the whole of our social reforms. During these eight years the New Deal has given hourly advertising to their advances in the social field. There have been advances We sorely needed them. We always will need them. Republicans builded them over years. We have no quarrel with the principle of protection for labor, the farmers, the old and the destitute. Our quarrel is with method and incompetence in administration. But the torpedo prepared for these services is that the Nation is not allowed to produce enough goods and wealth to foot the bill for them. They cannot be long paid by the magic of borrowed money. Unless the whole direction of this Government is changed, these humanitarian measures will go into the New Deal embroidered wastebasket called bankruptcy.

Recalls Legend Of King Midas

My third sample of the higher incompetence is the purchase of three-quarters of the whole world's gold supply. We bought it by giving foreigners our commodities and our investments. We have buried $19,000,000,000 mostly in a hole at Fort Knox.

The foreigners got our property at depression prices. We paid a high price for this metal.

You have often been reminded of the legend of King Midas. Today that legend bears more careful examination. Midas also had the starry-eyed notion that he could benefit the kingdom if he had the power to turn his commodities into gold. The gods gave him the power. And when he finished he had a great pile of gold but no commodities. Then he assembled another commission for advice. The God Bacchus advised him to jump in a certain river. He came out with donkey's ears.

Even Midas did not undertake to operate on silver. He left that to the New Deal.

Unless we quickly restore the vitality of this pile of dead gold, this Nation will face a loss of the whole $19,000,000,000 of it. We should start by putting it in circulation at home. We should start putting it in circulation abroad by swapping it for useful metals which we do not ourselves produce. We would far better have many years' stock of manganese, nickel, tungsten and tin than the so-called precious metals. These we may need for national defense.

Incompetence Strikes at Safety

There are other major incompetences in government which I could well discuss. There are agriculture and relief. But tonight my last example is national defense. And this incompetence strikes at our national safety.

Mr. Roosevelt recently broadcast an alibi that preparedness had been neglected by Republican Administrations.

In the six years of peaceful world outlook before the New Deal we had spent about $680,000,000 a year on our preparedness. As a matter of fact, Mr. Roosevelt considered we were spending too much on it. He supported the Democratic platform in 1932 which implied that. And in 1934 he drastically reduced our defense to $550,000,000, lopping off $30,000,000 from the air corps alone. And that year he reduced the number of commissioned naval graduates by one-half.

The interlude would seem to weaken the alibi.

Nazism in Germany and our New Deal both rose to power in 1933. During these dangerous years our Republicans in Congress supported repeated increases in defense appropriations until they reached $1,600,000,000 a year. In these six years the New Deal has spent $8,200,000,000.

What have we got for that enormous sum?

After all that expenditure we are told we are wholly unprepared to defend ourselves.

Our military leaders say to the Congress we are not organized for modern war, we do not have more than 75,000 fully equipped men.

Despite the growing menace in the air, and the expenditure of $350,000,000 of dollars on the air force in the last six years, Gen. Arnold says not half a dozen of our Army planes are modern.

If we spend another $6,200,000,000 and get no more actual defense than from the last $6,200,000,000 nobody will be afraid of us.

Yet the lives of our children, the fate of our Nation, the future of our civilization are at stake. We cannot risk failure. This is another battle which America better not lose. If we are to achieve preparedness we must have a change in our national Administration.

Part VII

Foreign Relations First Line of Defense

The first line of our national defense is clear, realistic and sober foreign policies directed to secure respect, good will and peace.

To realize that ideal, during the whole 12 years of Republican Administrations after the last armistice we strove to keep the face of civilization turned toward good will and peace. Americans saved Europe and Russia from collapse in famine. Americans led the advance on methods of settlement of international controversy by peaceful means. We led the world to reduce naval arms and lifted billions from the backs of all who toil. We led in constructive proposals for land disarmament. We set a moral standard in the world by refusal to recognize the murderous regime in Russia. We refused to issue a Communist license to undermine our institutions. We had organized a world conference to stabilize currencies and by removing trade barriers to give the world a chance. That conference was scuttled by Mr. Roosevelt. That killed the last hope of world cooperation.

The immense task now is to shape our foreign policies to protect us from the conflagration in Europe and Asia.

There is no such thing as our isolation from wars which envelop two-thirds of all the people in the world. The Monroe Doctrine alone is the negation of that. There is no such thing as economic isolation. Those shocks jam through the doors of our farmers and our workers every hour. There is no such thing as moral isolation. These violations of treaties and agreements raise dangers to the reign of law everywhere. There is no such thing as intellectual and spiritual isolation. Emotions come through the air, in every telegraphed and printed word.

Natural Sympathies With Democracies

From all this there are shifting dangers in which the Nation should have common counsel that we may have national unity. In a few days this convention will have chosen our national leader. The President will be able to secure from him the views of our party upon those transcendent questions.

Today a thousand tragedies to mankind crash one after another. Our emotions are inflamed. We are hostile to totalitarian ideas. We resent aggression. We are indignant at brutality. Our natural sympathies are with democracies fighting for their freedom.

But here and now, America must summon reason to control emotion. The greatest quality of men in danger, second only to courage, is cool, deliberate action. That is equally the necessity in a nation. An idealism as never before must keep its feet on the ground of realism.

The first policy of calm realism is not to exaggerate our immediate dangers. Every whale that spouts is not a submarine. The 3,000 miles of ocean is still a protection. The air forces, tanks and armies of Europe are useless to attack us unless they establish bases in the Western Hemisphere. To do that they must first pass our Navy. It can stop anything in sight now. In any event, this ocean and our magnificant Navy can give time for sober preparation.

The second policy in realism is complete preparedness. We must be armed so that no foreign nation will entertain the dangerous thought of starting over these 3,000 miles of ocean. We must be so prepared that we can rely solely upon our own right arm.

Trained Personnel Of Key Men

We need a Navy powerful as never before. Rather than a vast accumulation of arms, we must have an industry tuned up to turn out war machines faster and better than any nation on earth. We need a trained personnel of key men in reserve. We have the resources, the genius, the industry to make us impregnable.

But preparedness is not only making armies and navies. It must be supported by a sound national finance, national economy and a restored productivity of our people.

And before we can have preparedness we must have competent organization in Washington.

New Deal politics will never "make tyranny tremble." I suppose we might frighten tyrants by appointing another board to advise the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defense.

The third of realistic policies baars upon supplies of materials and munitions to those nations who are fighting for their freedom. My belief is that we should facilitate them in every way subject to two limitations. First, that it involves no action which takes us to war, and, second, that as liberty lives by law we must act within the law.

Part VIII

Peace or War Considered in U. S.

Today, many of our citizens, consciously or unconsciously, are considering peace or war with the totalitarian governments.

The most vital realism in all our relations requires that we keep out of these wars unless the Western Hemisphere is attacked.

It is a solemn determination. Our price of war is the lives of our sons and the poverty of our grandchildren. But we are here also considering the fate of our Nation and the fate of liberty in the world.

It is nonsense that we cannot defend freedom here even if the Old World fails. Our ancestors, with sparse population and resources for the first 50 years of this Republic sustained liberty here when most of the world was ruled by despots. We can do it again if we have to.

And the spirits of American boys buried in Flanders 22 years ago rise before us today to warn us that we can make war, but we cannot assure liberty in the Old World.

The hope of mankind and the hope of civilization is that democracy survives on this continent. Those who advocate war should never forget one thing. The first necessity of any great war is to set up dictatorship. France and England were compelled to do so. But with our already weakened structure of liberty and the fabulous national debt we shall have, and the mania for power of the New Deal, we would be generations in restoring free men in America. We should be sacrificing the last sanctuary of liberty in the world in the belief that we are defending liberty.

Irresponsible Talk May Bring Danger

Those who feel we should intervene in this war should take note of other realistic reasons why we should keep out. If we join, we shall in our own unpreparedness require two or three years to make ourselves effective. That will be too late. In the meantime, we should require the whole energies of American industry to arm for ourselves. For us to declare war would do the Allies more harm than good.

The final realism is that if we are to keep cool and not stimulate war there must be an end to provocative speech by our officials. Expression of indignation or regret do not require insults. The first responsibility of the President of the United States is to abate war, not to stimulate it. It is not the province of the President of the United States to create hate. Irresponsible talk in explosive times may bring danger. And we need remember that the day will come when we might be of service to humanity in dealing with these same men for peace.

And there is an infinite service that America can bring to the world. After this struggle, we shall see hate sitting at the peace table. We might with our moral force and counsel abate its dread consequences. I know the famine, disease and suffering that is yet to come with this war. With our economic strength and our compassion we can save millions of lives, give aid to reconstruction and inspire tolerance and hope again in the world.

In foreign trade after this war we shall meet an impoverished Europe reduced in its standards of living and above all armed with totalitarian-directed exports and imports. All that points in three directions. American workers and farmers will require more protection than ever from imports. We shall need mobilized counteraction on exports. We shall need develop self-sufficiency in our own industrial production. Under these impacts the Hull treaties will go to the heaven of forgotten issues.

Part IX.

Regeneration Of America

Finally, the greatest task of all deals with the intangibles of national life. It is to stiffen the stamina and the morals of our people. It is to unify their ideals and lift their spirits.

I have said whatever the outcome of this war, whatever the solution of our domestic crisis, the form of this world will not be the same. We must meet great change. And we will meet with moral and spiritual degeneration in the world.

In time these world storms will blow themselves out. Perhaps it will be a long time. But the spirit of Luther, Goethe, Schiller, of Mazzini and Garibaldi still live. And here upon our soil the temple of liberty must stand, that men may be inspired to return to its worship.

But truly we have been following the suicide road for liberty that led to disaster in Europe. But let me give you a word of encouragement. Those countries were economically lean from the last war. We still have economic fat on our national bones. Those countries were weaker in their fidelities to liberty. We are tougher in our fidelities.

Our ablity to meet these storms and these changes will abide in the qualities of our people.

There is in every nation some quality distilled from its racial life. Those are the mores of the race. Ours is a belief in God a belief in the dignity of the common man. Ours is a spirit of independence a vigorous assertion of self reliance of devotion to duty. Ours is a high sense of cooperation in times of stress. We have always fought tyranny in any form. We have not in the past been deterred by difficulty or defeated by disaster. We have sought new frontiers new obstacles to surmount. We have been resilient courageous, fearless and unconquerable. The New Deal has contributed to sapping of our stamina and making us soft.

Justice Abandoned In Quest of Reform

In quest of security we have retreated from liberty. In quest of reform we have abandoned justice and stirred class hatred. In quest of relief we have injured self-reliance. In quest of an easy way out we have lessened the vision of America.

The road of regeneration is burdensome and hard. It is straight and simple. It is a road paved with work and with sacrifice and consecration to the indefinable spirit that is America.

Centuries ago, alone under the stars, contrasting his own insignificance with the immensity of God's universe, these sprang to the lips of the Psalmist the question: "What is man, that Thou are mindful of him? And the son of man that Thou visitest him?"

Was man created a little lower than the angels, a being for whom the abundance of life consists of justice, liberty and opportunity? Does he possess the right from the Creator to plan his own life, to dare his own adventure, to earn his own reward so long as he does no harm to his fellows? Or must he submerge his life, his liberties and his independent personality in an omnipotent government?

War Americans Dare Not Lose

But if man is an inviolable human soul, possessed of dignity, endowed with unalienable rights, America is right. And this is a war that Americans dare not lose.

Republicans! You go into battle for the greatest cause intrusted to the government of mankind.

With steadfastness to these ideals, you can put this house in order. You can defend this nation. You can demonstrate that self-governing, free people can solve the problems imposed by the industrial revolution. You can restore employment and agriculture and end their sufferings. You can wipe out coercion and corruption. You can make this a classless country devoted to equal opportunity for all. You can build up humane measures of security, of increasing standards of living for all of the people. You can remove their fears. You can inspire their devotion to American ideals. You can and you will hold alight to a confused world the lamp of liberty.

Are you prepared to fight?

Keep U. S. Strictly Neutral, Hoover Tells G. O. P. Delegates

self a Presidential dark horse, drove another antiwar plug into the non-interventionist plank of the party. Martin accepted permanent chairmanship of the convention with a charge that seven New Deal years have led the country to the brink of war.

Martin's speech this morning and Hoover's tonight struck the anti-war pitch of Gov. Harold E. Stassen's Monday night "keynote."

The demonstration for Hoover continued long after the former President, smiling broadly, waved to the whistling throng and stepped off the platform. He came back and took another bow. Among the State delegations that followed California in the hall parade for him were West Virginia, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Nevada.

A mighty burst of applause welcomed Hoover as he came forward to make his second speech as a former President before a Republican convention. The theme for his address already had been struck in the evening prayer by a colored clergyman, Bishop John Andrew Gregg, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

Bishop Gregg called on the Lord to "keep us from war hysteria and keep us at peace."

Draws Sardonic Laughter

Hoover was frequently interrupted in the course of his long speech. After telling how chronic unemployment in Europe brought a "class hate that poisoned cooperation," he asked, "does this sound unfamiliar to you?"

"No, no," the crowd yelled.

Nearly white-haired now, but still wearing the high-starched collar of prewar vogue, Hoover flung back at his New Deal successors the depression taunt they had leveled at him. A strain of almost sardonic humor ran through the speech of this man, who never has been famed for his jests. Tonight he wrung laughter from this somber convention.

This convention's cautious approach to the campaign was emphasized by Hoover's eleventh hour preparation and release to the press of the foreign policy section of his speech.

The former President declared "insults" to heads of other nations unnecessary and likely to create hate and "stimulate war" not abate it.

Urges "Calm Realism"

He urged instead a policy of "calm realism" which would not "exaggerate" immediate dangers, reminding his hearers as Col. Lindbergh did that an ocean and a Navy that "can stop anything in sight now" should provide this hemisphere with time for "sober preparations".

Handmaiden to a realistic approach, he said, should be competent preparedness "to make us impregnable" and facilitation of supplies to besieged free nations "subject to definite limitations which keep us out of war."

But for first 50 years, he said, this republic sustained liberty here in a world ruled by despots and "we can do it again if we have to." Survival of democracy on this continent he called the hope of mankind and of civilization.

Turning sharply on the New Deal, he compared it with the period of economic planning which he said in every single case has preceded the rise of totalitarian governments elsewhere.

He said "starry-eyed" men preceding the dictators in other nations "thought they were liberals," but he called them "totalitarian liberals" and the spiritual fathers of the New Deal. He said they devalued, pump-primed, inflated, and for power used; "gimme a billion quick."

In each case, as here, he declared, men became hesitant, initiative slackened, industry slowed and frantic efforts redoubled to support the unemployed. Frustrated peoples elsewhere Hoover said turned to "the man on horseback" as the only way out, or like France, "their productive life was so injured that they are paying in blood, in tears and defeat."

"Better Not Lose"

One refrain ran through Hoover's lengthy oration—"this is a battle which Americans better not lose"—and he called on Republicans to go into the battle and fight "for the greatest battle entrusted to the government of mankind."

In self-vindication, he asserted "we were on the way to recovery in 1932;" every other democracy recovered from the depression before the war's outbreak, but the New Deal "stabilized" it here he said.

His "J'Accuse" directed at Roosevelt charged the New Deal with weakening public morals by misusing relief for politics, substituting political patronage for the merit system, building up a gigantic political machine to control the vote, fostering city machines with Federal grants, and using taxpayers' money for partisan propaganda. He said "the whole business stank."

New Deal purchase of three-fourths of the world's gold he called a "Midas" policy that risks loss of all of it, and he declared deficits, debts, inflations "are inscribed on the tombstone of every fallen democracy."

As a "mild" suggestion, he proposed that somewhere we might pare a little off on New Deal "abundance" without hurting anybody "but office holders." First step toward recovery, he declared, is finding jobs in productive enterprise for 10,000,000 still unemployed through a Government policy which encourages free enterprise not as a "property system" but as the only guarantee of spiritual and economic liberty.

At the convention's morning session, routine except for the Martin speech, the convention's permanent chairman likewise assailed the New Deal for blundering and contradictory policies. Martin accused the Roosevelt Administration of exploiting the people under the cloak of emergency and distress.

"The record is somber story of failure and futility and broken promises," said Martin, who was roundly applauded. "And there is much reason to believe we may yet wake up to find we have been pushed into war."

As the convention prepared to get down to platform adoption and nominating speeches tomorrow, it cleaned up a raft of routine business.

Foes Launch Drive to Oust Chamberlain Before Nazis Strike

Hope to Check 'Peace' Offers By Ex-Premier

Battle Looms Over 'Failure' of Turkish Assistance to Allies

By the Associated Press

London, June 25.—The apparently calm surface of British politics is masking two of the hotest political fights in a decade, informed parliamentary sources declared tonight.

One revolves around the clamor for the ousting of Former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain from the government, the other around what malcontents call the diplomatic "failure" of Turkish assistance to the Allies.

Chamberlain's presence in the cabinet of his successor, Winston Churchill, is violently opposed by Liberal and Labor members of Parliament as "dangerous" to the nation when invasion comes.

Fear "Peace Offer"

They assert that his position is a promise of appeasement and that he would not hesitate to attempt to form a new government to treat with Germany should the Nazis score a string of successes at the start of the invasion.

Chamberlain, the man of Munich, these quarters are represented as contending, is a key man of interests identical with those which formed France's Bordeaux government held responsible for that republic's "abject" capitulation.

Taking note of Churchill's apparent friendship for the man whose policies he so long denounced, the rebels declare the prime minister retains his power only through Chamberlain's conservative votes. These are numbered at 200 "sure" in the House of Commons.

They believe, according to informants, that with these behind him Chamberlain could overthrow the present government and form a "peace" cabinet if the armies should suffer heavily in the field and the navy fail to prevent large-scale invasion.

Assail Turkish

Disapproval was reported growing in the house over the foreign office handling of Turkey's "passive" acceptance of Italy's entry into the war.

Labor and Liberals alike declare that more encouragement to Turkish interests, especially commercial, during the winter would have secured Turkish entrance into the conflict.

Now, they declare, Turkey apparently is settled on a program of armed neutrality, whether or not Italy enters the Balkans.

Reliable neutral diplomatic sources in London say the Germans have been bidding strongly for Turkish aid in the Near East. They declare Turkey has been offered control of Egypt and hegemony over all Near Eastern Moslems, in the event of a German victory.

Franz Werfel Slain by Nazis, Van Loon Fears

New York, June 25.—Franz Werfel, German poet, playwright and novelist, is believed to have been caught in Paris by the Nazis and liquidated, it was reported today by Author Hendrik Willem Van Loon. Van Loon was unable to reveal the source of his information, but believed it to be reliable.

Werfel is widely known in this country through his best seller, "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh," published in 1934. He was among the Jewish authors whose works were burned in Salzburg on April 30, 1938.

Another German author, Lion Feuchtwanger, whose greatest novel, "Jew Suss" or "Power," became a best seller in England and the United States in 1925, was reported held in a German concentration camp on the Riviera. His most recent work, "Paris Gazette," a novel of the spiritual suffering of the anti-Nazi German refugees in Paris, was published last April.

Mrs. Totten Dies At Home of Son, Former Envoy

Mrs. Lillian Payne Totten, 83, mother of Ralph Totten, former American Minister to the Union of South Africa, died yesterday after an illness of three weeks.

Mrs. Totten lived with her son at 2800 Ontario road northwest. They came to Washington four years ago, upon their return from South Africa, where Mrs. Totten was hostess for her son.

A native of Nashville, Tenn., Mrs. Totten lived there most of her life and was active in the Daughters of the American Revolution and various church groups. She was the widow of James B. Totten.

Another son, Joseph Totten, of Detroit, also survives. Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Gawler's funeral home. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Churchill War Report

By the Associated Press

London, June 25.—Following is a partial text of Prime Minister Churchill's war report to the House of Commons today:

THERE IS NO USE or advantage in wasting strength and time upon hard words and reproaches.

We hope that life and power will be given to us to rescue them (the French nation and people) from the ruin and bondage into which they have been sunk by the might and fury of the enemy and from other causes.

We hope, however, that the French Empire, stretching all over the world, and protected by sea power, will continue the struggle at the side of its Allies.

We hope that it may become the seat of a government which will strive steadfastly for victory and will organize armies of liberation. These are matters which Frenchmen alone can decide.

We find it difficult to believe that the interest of France and the spirit of France will find no other expression than in the melancholy decisions which have been taken by the government at Bordeaux . . .

WE SHALL CERTAINLY aid to the best of our ability and resources any movement of Frenchmen outside the power of the enemy to work for the defeat of Nazi German barbarism and for the freedom and restoration of France. What our relations will be with the Bordeaux government I cannot tell.

They have delivered themselves over to the enemy and lie wholly in his power.

The enemy may do much by blandishments, by severities, by propaganda and by choosing pro-German ministers to make our relations difficult.

We don't know whether we shall be allowed by the enemy to have any British representative in the restricted region called the unoccupied France because it is entirely surrounded by and under the control of the enemy.

Replying upon the true genius of the French people and their judgment upon what has happened to them when they are allowed to know the facts, we shall endeavor to keep such contacts as are possible through the bars of their prison.

Meanwhile, we must look to our own salvation and effective dedense, upon which not only British, but French and European and world-wide fortunes depend. The safety of Great Britain and the British Empire is powerfully, though not decisively affected by what happens to the French fleet.

WHEN IT BECAME clear that the defeat and subjugation of France was imminent and her fine army, on which so many hopes were set was reeling under the German flail Reynaud, the courageous prime minister, asked me to come to Tours which I did on June 13, accompanied by the foreign secretary and the minister for aircraft production.

I see some accounts have been given of these conversations by the Bordeaux government which don't at all correspond with the facts. I don't propose, however, to go into these today at any length.

. . . M. Reynaud (at Tours June 13), after dwelling upon conditions at the front and the state of the French army, with which I was well acquainted, asked me whether Great Britain would release France from her obligation not to negotiate for an armistice or peace without the consent of her British ally.

ALTHOUGH I KNEW how great France sufferings were, and that we had not so far endured equal trials or made an equal contribution in the field, I felt bound to say I could not give assent. But there would be no use in adding mutual reproaches to the other things we might have to bear.

We agreed that a further appeal would be made by M. Reynaud to the United States and that if the reply was not sufficient to enable M. Reynaud to go on with the fight, then we should meet again and take a decision in the light of the new facts.

On the sixteenth, I received a message from M. Reynaud, who had then moved to Bordeaux, to say that the American response was not satisfactory and requesting a formal release for France from her obligations under the Anglo-French agreement.

The cabinet was immediately convened and we sent a message, of which I will not give the exact text, but the general substance. Separate negotiations were for an armistic or peace, which depended upon the agreement made with the French republic, and not with any particular French administration or statesman. They therefore involved the honor of France.

However, in view of what France had suffered, it was nevertheless intimated that provided the Frenth fleet be dispatched to British ports and remain there while the negotiations were being conducted, His Majesty's government would give their consent to the French Government asking what terms of armistice would be opened to them.

It was also made clear that His Majesty's government were resolved to continue the war.

The same evening I was preparing to go and see M. Reynaud and was, in fact, in the train when I received information that he had been overthrown and that a new government under Marshal Petain had been formed, which government had been formed for the prime purpose of seeking an armistice with Germany.

IN THESE CIRCUMSTANCES, we naturally did everything in our power to secure proper arrangements for the disposition of the French fleet.

We reminded the new government that the condition indispensable to their release had not been complied with, the condition being that the fleet should be sent to British ports—think it would have made no difference to the negotiations, for there was plenty of time to do it and the terms would hardly have been more severe than they were—and in order to enforce the earnestness with which we held our view we sent the first sea lord and the first lord as well as Lord Lloyd to establish what contacts were possible with the new ministers.

But everything was, of course, moving into collapse at that time. Many solemn assurances were given that the fleet would never be allowed to fall into German hands. It was therefore with grief and amazement, to quote the words of the government statement which was issued on Sunday, that I read article 8 of the armistice terms.

This article to which the French government has subscribed says that the French fleet excepting that part left free for the safeguarding of French interests in the colonial empire, shall be collected in ports to be specified and there be demobilized and disarmed under German or Italian control.

From this text it is clear that the French war vessels under this armistice pass into German or Italian control while fully armed.

We note, of course, in the same article, the solemn declaration of the German government that they have no intention of using them for their own purposes during the war (laughter) but what is the value of that? Ask half a dozen countries. . . .

FURTHERMORE, the same Article 8 excepts from the operations of such assurances those units necessary for coast surveillance or minesweeping.

Under this provision it would be possible for a pro-German government to reserve ostensibly for coast surveillance any existing units of the French fleet.

Finally an armistice can be avoided on the pretext of non-observance and the terms of the armistice accept further German claims when any peace between Germany and France is signed.

The situation at the present time is so uncertain and obscure that it would be contrary to public interest for me to attempt to pronounce upon it.

STARS 'N STARS. Customers on the Starlight Roof are always being inspired to ask for "star songs." If they aren't asking for "When You Wish Upon a Star," they're yipping for "Star Bright" or even for the nonexistent (outside of nursery rhymes) "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." The Starlight Roof is a great place for falling stars, too. They're the kind you're supposed to wish upon, y'know.

OVERSEAS ECHOES. At least two of our town's night spots are affected decoratively by the blinkety-blank doings in Europe. FAITHFUL CUSTOMERS. Every time you go to the King Cole Room you'll see numbers and numbers of the same faces. They're the folks who swear by the elegant planters' punches that are a King Cole specialty and who know it's impossible to find more frothy diversion than the light-hearted caroling and guitaring of Peggy Wood and Arthur Todd.

TOP OF THE MENU. You'll never see anything handsomer or tastier than Del Rio's planked fried mignon topped with French fried onions and surrounded with an artful arrangement of spiced beets, spinach and browned mashed potatoes . . .

Recipes for well-nourished evenings. Just go to Dick's Grill and order a dozen of those hard crabs, a hammer and plenty of pale ale . . . Or drive down to River Bend this evening to the "Piggy Party," eat a meal every hour and drink beer between times when you're not dancing to George Stein rhythms . . . Or stop at the Lee Stables and order one of their triple-decker sandwiches. You'll feel as though you had a six-course dinner . . . Or drop into the Harrington Tavern and after cooling off over a mint julep, build up your inner man or woman with one of those popular priced dinners that taste so expensive.

NIGHTINGALE LARKS. For more than four years the Nightingale has built up a steadily increasing popularity. The answer lies in the natural attractiveness of the spot, fine management and lively and unusual dance music. Rod Raffell's new orchestra is one of the best presented at Nightingale. And that's saying a lot.

Illinois Youths Give Concert Here

Ninety boys and girls from Illinois, in spruce blue uniforms trimmed with gold braid, played a band concert in front of the Capitol last night—then hopped into buses to compare the Navy Band's playing with their own.

The young musicians from Lockport Township High School in Illinois attended the Navy Band's concert at the World War Memorial in West Potomac Park. In the group were 33 girls, including two who play the oboe and four who manage to cope with French horns.

The band, directed by E. Caneva of the school's music department, will leave tonight for New York to play six concerts in four days at the World's Fair. Three will be at the Illinois State exhibit and the others in the City Plaza band shell, Caneva said.

French Forced To Yield Bases

would not be used during the conflict with England.

"On the conclusion of peace," it was added, "it (Italy) does not intend to lay claim to the French fleet."

As long as the hostilities against Britain continue, the fortified areas and naval bases at Toulon, in France; Bizerte, Tunisia; Oran, Algeria, and Ajaccio, Corsica, are to be demilitarized, this task to be completed in 15 days.

[Except for the geographical differences, and the use of the term "demobilized zones" in place of the German "occupied territory," the Italian terms were essentially the same as Germany's, first disclosed Sunday by the British ministry of information.]

The final article provided that it remain in force until the conclusion of a peace treaty but that it "may be denounced by Italy at any time in the event the French government's not fulfilling its obligations."

Consider Attack

Fascist newspapers subordinated news of the Italo-French armistice to the high command's announcement that war would "continue against Britain until victory."

It was assumed the Rome-Berlin Axis powers will strike their heaviest blows against British power simultaneously, Mussolini hurling ships and planes and men against objectives in the Mediterranean and East Africa while Hitler attacks England directly.

Italy's fight against France, though brief, was "extremely bloody," said reports published here. When the armistice went into effect and the last shot was fired on the Italo-French Alpine front, Mussolini's troops were said to be fighting on French soil on a 60-mile front between Mont Blac and the sea.

Nogues Promises To Resist Italians

Tetuan, French Morocco, July 25 (AP).—In a message "to the people of north Africa," High Commissioner Gen. Nogues said today:

"Armistice has been signed . . . but to abandon to foreigners without fighting all or any part of the territory over which we exercise sovereignty or protectorate is out of the question.

"The possibility of military occupation by a foreign power of any part whatsoever of (French) northern Africa should be excluded.

"This government is not willing to consent to reduction of the contingents (armed forces) stationed in this territory. For the time being the integrity of northern Africa and its means of defense have been assured.

"I again appeal: Keep calm union and disciplane, and trust in the future of our country."

U. S. Cruiser Lands French Gold

verge of capitulating to Germany last week, was sending millions of dollars of the precious metal to this country.

Stocks of gold in France until the time of the blitzkrieg were believed to be well above $1,000,000,000. The French gold hoard was the third largest in the world, topped only by stocks of this country and Great Britain.

Order's Origin Vague

Asked last night who might have ordered the Vincennes to ferry the gold to this country, officials said they presumed that Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, issued the order. They said they did not know whether the order came originally from President Roosevelt.

These officials recalled that last September, at the outbreak of war in Europe, United States naval vessels carried some gold here for the British government.

The secret gold shipment would be expected to intensify rivalry between the Bordeaux government headed by Marshal Petain and the London French National Council, headed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, which have been reported to be contesting the ownership of French assets in the United States. Prior to disclosure of the shipment, French assets here were believed to total more than $1,000,000,000.

Gold is usually transported in commercial vessels, protected by insurance. Only in cases of emergency in the past, have warships been used to carry the metal.

The total of $1,850,000,000, supposedly hidden in the specially constructed vaults of the Bank of France, was computed as follows: $1,250,000,000 belonging to the French government, and $600,000,000 representing shipments from Belgium, Holland and other sources.

As of May 31, the Bank of France reported a gold reserve of $1,693,000,000.

The French Embassy said last night that the gold brought here by the Vincennes may have been in payment for purchases previously made in this country. After the collapse of French resistance Great Britain took over existing French contracts for war material.

British Seek 1,000,000 Pounds of Skim Milk

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—The British Purchasing Commission officially announced that it will buy approximately 1,000,000 pounds of dry skimmed milk and not 10,000,000 as reported on information from the Agricultural Marketing Service yesterday, according to the Chicago Mercantile Exchange today.

Summary of Terms of Italian Armistice With France

ARTICLE ONE. France will cease hostilities in metropolitan (European) territory, in French North Africa, in the colonies and in territories under French mandate. France will also cease hostilities in the air and on the sea.

ARTICLE TWO. When the armistice comes into force and for the duration of the armistice, Italian troops will stand on their advanced lines in all theaters of operations.

ARTICLE THREE. In French metropolitan territory, a zone situated between the lines referred to in Article 2 and a line drawn 50 kilometers (about 30 miles) as the crow flies beyond the Italians' lines proper shall be demilitarized for the duration of the armistice.

In Tunisia, the militarized zone between the present Libyan-Tunisian frontier and the line drawn on an attached map shall be demilitarized for the duration of the armistice.

In Algeria and in French African territories south of Algeria which border on Libya, a zone 200 kilometers wide (about 125 miles) adjoining the Libyan frontier shall be demilitarized for the duration of the armistice.

For the duration of hostilities between Italy and the British Empire and for the duration of the armistice, the French Somaliland coast shall be entirely demilitarized.

Italy shall have full and constant right to use the port of Djibouti with all its equipment, together with the French section of the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railway, for all kinds of transport.

ARTICLE FOUR. The zones to be demilitarized shall be evacuated by French troops within ten days after the cessation of hostilities, except only for the personnel strictly necessary for the supervision and maintenance of fortification works, barracks, arms depots and military buildings, and the troops required to maintain order in the interior as shall be determined later by the Italian armistice commission.

ARTICLE FIVE. Under full reserve of the right mentioned in Article 10, which follows, all arms, supplies and ammunition in the zones to be demilitarized in French territory adjoining Libya together with the arms surrender to the troops effecting the evacuation of the territories concerned, must be removed within 15 days.

Fixed armaments in the fortification works and the accompanying ammunition must, in the period, be rendered useless in the coastal territory of French Somaliland. All movable arms and ammunition together with these to be given up to the troops effecting the evacuation of the territory shall be laid down within 15 days in places indicated by the Italian armistice commission.

In the case of fixed armaments and ammunition in fortification works in the above territory, the same procedure shall be followed as for French metropolitan territory and territory adjoining Libya.

ARTICLE SIX. So long as hostilities continue between Italy and the British empire, the maritime military fortified areas and naval bases of Toulon, Bizerte, Ajaccio and Oran shall be demilitarized until the cessation of hostilities against the above-mentioned empire.

This demilitarization is to be achieved within 15 days.

ARTICLES SEVEN AND EIGHT concern the procedure of demilitarizing the maritime military fortified areas and naval bases mentioned in Article Six.

ARTICLE NINE. All armed land, sea and air forces in metropolitan France shall be demobilized and disarmed within a specified period to be fixed later, except such formations as are necessary to maintain internal order. The strength and armament of such formations will be determined by Italy and Germany.

So far as the territories of French North Africa, Syria and the coast of French Somaliland are concerned, the Italian armistice commission will take into account, in fixing the procedure for demobilization and disarmament, the particular importance of maintaining order in those territories.

ARTICLE TEN. Italy reserves the right, as a guarantee of the execution of the armistice convention, to demand the surrender in whole or in part of the collective arms of the infantry and artillery, armored cars, tanks, motor vehicles and horse vehicles, together with ammunition belonging to units who have been engaged or have been facing Italian forces.

The above arms and materials must be surrendered in the state in which they are at the time of the armistice.

ARTICLE ELEVEN. Concerns Italian or German control of arms, munitions and war material in non-occupied French territories, and the immediate cessation of the production of war material in such territories.

ARTICLE TWELVE. Units of the French fleet shall be concentrated in ports to be indicated, and demobolized and disarmed under the control of Italy and Germany, except for such units as the Italian and German governments shall agree upon for the safeguard of French colonial territories.

All warships not in French metropolitan waters, except those which shall be recognized to safeguard French colonial interests shall be brought back to metropolitan ports.

The Italian government declares that it does not intend to use, in the present war, units of the French fleet placed under its control, and that on conclusion of peace it does not intend to lay claim to the French fleet.

For the duration of the armistice the Italian government may ask French ships to sweep mines.

ARTICLE 13. The French authorities shall render harmless within 10 days all mines in the maritime military area and naval bases which are to be demilitarized.

ARTICLE 14. The French government, in addition to the obligation not to carry on hostilities in any form anywhere against Italy, undertakes to prevent members of its armed forces and French citizens generally from leaving national territory to take part in hostilities against Italy.

ARTICLE FIFTEEN. The French government shall undertake to prevent warships, airplanes, arms, war materials and munitions of every kind belonging to France from being sent to territories belonging to the British Empire or to other foreign states.

ARTICLE SIXTEEN Forbids all French merchant ships to leave port until such time as the German and Italian governments permit a partial or total resumption of French commercial maritime activities.

French cargo boats not in French ports or in ports under French control at the time of the armistice shall be either recalled to such ports or directed to neutral ports.

ARTICLE SEVENTEEN. Concerns restoration of Italian cargo boats together with their cargoes as well as Italian merchandise or merchandise consigned to Italy which has been seized from non-Italian ships.

ARTICLE EIGHTEEN. Bans departure of any airplane from French territory or territories under French control, and places under Italian or German control all airports and equipment.

ARTICLE NINETEEN. Until the Italian and German goverments shall have decided otherwise, all wireless transmission from French metropolitan territory generally is prohibited.

Conditions for wireless communication between France and North Africa, Syria and French Somaliland are to be determined by the Italian armistice commission.

ARTICLE TWENTY. Goods shall be freely transported between Germany and Italy through nonoccupied French territories.

ARTICLE TWENTY-ONE. All Italian prisoners of war and Italian civilians who have been interned, or arrested and sentenced for political reasons, crimes or on account of the war, shall be immediately handed over to the Italian government.

ARTICLE TWENTY-TWO. The French government shall guarantee the good preservation of all material that it has or may have to deliver under the terms of the armistice convention.

ARTICLES TWENTY-THREE and TWENTY-FOUR. Deal with the Italian Armistice Commission entrusted with the execution of the convention, and the French delegation to act as liaison between the French government and authorities and the commission.

ARTICLE TWENTY-FIVE. Concerns the pocedure for enforcement of the armistice.

ARTICLE TWENTY-SIX. The convention shall remain in force until the conclusion of a peace treaty, but may be denounced by Italy at any time in the event the French government does not fulfill its obligations.

There Are Two Ways to Get at Constipation

Yes, and only two ways—before and after it happens! Instead of enduring those dull, tired, headachy days and then having to take an emergency cathartic—why not KEEP regular with Kellogg's All-Bran? You can, if your constipation is the kind millions have—due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. For All-Bran goes right to the cause of this trouble by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this toasted, nutritious cereal regularly—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if your life isn't a whole lot brighter! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Germany Agrees to Let Russia Take Part Of Rumania, Diplomatic Circles Here Say

Reports Say Nazis Are Urging Carol To Yield Peacefully

Copyright by New York Times

Germany has an agreement with the Soviet Union under which the Russians will be permitted to take over Bessarabia, and is urging the recently reconstituted Rumanian government to concede this territory without fighting, it was reported in well informed Washington diplomatic circles yesterday.

The agreement is being soft-pedaled at the moment, according to this information, but the understanding is that Moscow will occupy Bessarabia during Hitler's attack on Britain.

There is no indication, in reports received in Washington, that the arrangement is more than one of convenience. Hitler, it is understood, is willing to pay this price to assure quiet behind Germany when he moves against the British Isles and Stalin is reported as desiring to push Russia's frontiers farther out because fear of an eventual German attack.

Soviet Zone Delimited

From Germany's viewpoint the reported agreement is said to have the advantage of delimiting the zone of Soviet advance. It would prevent massed Soviet troops from spilling over farther into Rumania or into the Balkans which might bring them into collision with Hitler's Axis partner, Mussolini, at a moment when the Germans are busy elsewhere.

From Stalin's point of view, it is asserted, the arrangement would not only provide a buffer against possible German attack later but would strengthen Russia's strategic position in the Balkans. The report has it that Italy has agreed to the move providing Russia does not come farther west.

There is no confirmation here that over 100 Soviet planes Monday made reconnaissance flights over Bessarabia, which voted to separate from Russia and join Rumania after the World War. Neither was there confirmation obtainable that Rumanian and Russian troops had clashed at several points along the Dniester River frontier.

The recent formation of a totalitarian government in Rumania, however, and the inclusion of the Nazi Iron Guard in Rumania's new political organization, have made it easier for Berlin to bring pressure on Bucharest.

It was stressed here that diplomatic reports from Moscow indicate no lessening of the Kremlin's fear of an eventual move against Russia by Germany. But Stalin, it is added, apparently prefers to accept whatever added protection and "position" Bessarabia offers rather than to undertake war on Germany in cooperation with Britain at this time.

He is also said to favor execution of the arrangement on Bessarabia at a time when this step might be interpreted by outside nations as a "block-Hitler" move, rather than right now when it might receive the same unfavorable interpretation as his attack on Finland.

Red Army on Nazi Border

Stockholm, June 25 (AP).—The Soviet army has taken over from Lithuanian forces the guarding of the frontier with Germany, the Kaunas correspondent of the Stockholm Tidningen reported today.

Greeks Fear Thrust

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, June 25.—Continued anxiety prevails in northern Greece about a possible Italian drive toward Salonika. It is generally assumed that if such an invasion ever materializes it would occur through the passes near Florina and Biglichta, southwest of the Yugoslav town of Monastir.

It is reliably reported that Italian movements on a large scale are occurring on the other side of the Albanian frontier. At night giant searchlights were installed in Albania to light up the Greek sky along the entire length of the frontier. Mechanized Fascist detachments are said still to be crossing the Otranto Straits.

bide her time until Germany settles accounts with Great Britain before the German-French armistice is followed up with actual peace negotiations, well-informed Nazi sources said today.

This view, emphasized by the commentary Dienst aus Deutschland, was believed to have made remote any chances of an immediate continental settlement despite recently expressed opinions in Berlin.

Hitler—and Hitler alone—knows exactly when and what steps will be taken toward a European peace conference and right now he is supposed to be concentrating all his energies toward a battle for England.

Britain "the Real Culprit"

Exultant Germany set up machinery for carrying out the armistice with France and began weighing their effects in connection with the campaign against Britain, "The Real Culprit."

Germans, beginning a 10-day period of thanksgiving in celebration of today's cessation of hostilities in France, considered the armistice terms "hard, but not humiliating."

Hitler set up a French-German commission under the chairmanship of Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagel to supervise carrying out of the armistice provisions.

Ironically enough, he chose Wiesbaden, headquarters of the French army of occupation in the Rhineland after the World War, as the seat of its operations.

The area to be occupied was fixed as the territory north of a line from Geneva crossing the communities of Dole, Paray le Monial and Bourges to a point about 20 kilometers east of Tours. From that point the line runs southeast along the Tour-Angouleme Railway, then to Libourne; then over Mont De Marson and Orthez to the Spanish border.

It was provided that those parts of France not yet occupied by the Germans—in the territory to be occupied under the agreement—should be cleared of French troops immediately and taken over by the Germans.

In the event the French government returns to Paris, Germany guarantees facilities for its efficient operation.

Army to Keep Order

The demobilization of French armed forces of the land, sea and air is to be accomplished at a time to be specified later.

France, however, may keep a sufficient armed force to preserve order, with the strength to be subject to the approval of Germany and Italy.

All German war and civil prisoners held in France are to be turned over to the German authorities. France agrees to deliver to the Germans any persons in her colonies or mandated lands whom the Germans want.

French prisoners of war are to be held until the conclusion of peace.

Troops to Leave Arms

French troops in the region already occupied are to be disarmed, withdrawn and demobilized as soon as possible. The departing French troops are to leave their weapons.

Germany may require delivery in good condition of all cannon, tanks, warplanes, infantry weapons and munitions of troops in the occupied section if such a step is necessary to preserve the armistice.

Weapons which remain in occupied territory are to be assembled and placed under German-Italian control. No war materials are to be manufactured in the unoccupied French region. On the occupied area the coast defense, with its weapons, is to be placed at the disposal of the Germans.

The location of land mines and other defense facilities is to be reported to the German high command. The French fleet, except that portion necessary for policing the colonies, is to be assembled in stipulated French harbors, disarmed and kept under German-Italian control.

Agree Not to Help England

The French government guarantees that none of its army remaining in service will be used in the war. It agrees not to send war materials to England. French citizens are forbidden to enter the military service of nations at war with Germany. The French merchant fleet is to be recalled from the seas.

No French planes are to be allowed in the air. In the occupied region the landing fields are to be under German-Italian control. France agrees to turn over in good condition all her military plants, industries, railroads and communication systems in the occupied region.

France agrees to man her railways to the extent normal in peacetimes.

Radio Stations to Close

All radio stations in France are to be closed down. France agrees to take freight from Italy to Germany.

In cooperation with the German authorities, France will arrange to return refugees to their homes in the occupied territory.

The carrying out of the armistice conditions will be in charge of a German armistice commission. France will send delegates to the commission to represent her interests. The German commission in its administration will keep Italy informed of its activities.

France agrees to export securities and materials only with Germany's approval. Germany agrees to assume the responsibility of the material well-being of the French of the occupied region.

The cost of occupation is to be borne by the French government.

The armistice may be terminated at any time by Germany if France fails to fulfill its condition. Otherwise, it remains in effect until the conclusion of peace.

Competent German sources declared that, with France now out of the picture, "all our war economy and resources can be fully concentrated against England.

"As far as the conversion of armament production pertaining to the fight against England is necessary and purposeful, this can be done without any risk after the defeat of France," they asserted.

"On the other hand, resources are available in England only so far as they are already present on the island or have been obtainable in the last few weeks. These are very limited in contrast to those on the continent.

The arrival in England of three former French premiers was announced—Edouard Herriot, Joseph Paul Boncour and Leon Blum.

Nothing was said as to the purpose of their visit, but it was recalled that the British already had looked kindly upon the efforts of French Gen. Charles de Gaulle to form sort of commission form of government in an effort to continue the war on Britain's side.

Hopes Empire Will Fight

"We hope," said Churchill to the attentive Commons, "that the French Empire, stretching all over the world, and protected by sea power, will continue the struggle at the side of its Allies."

An authorized British spokesman said tonight in commenting on the French-Italian armistice terms that if the French Colonial Empire should now cease to resist "it will be pareceled out between Germany and Italy at the bidding of the former, and France herself will be permanently reduced to the condition of a vassal state.

The New York Times declared the Italian terms, calling for demilitarization of all French Mediterranean naval bases, aroused British fears that Italy would occupy and utilize them against the British. Even should Germany and Italy keep their promise not to use France's fleet against Britain, it said, the British Mediterranean fleet must either withdraw, which is unlikely, or be reinforced, which is difficult because of the increasing necessity of keeping strong forces to guard the British Isles.

[A British broadcast heard in New York, said publication of the German terms by the British Sunday, resulted in a softening of the terms of the Italian armistice.]

Marshal Petain told his people in a broadcast tonight that under the terms of the armistice "our airplanes and our fleet are coming under the control of Germany and Italy." It was France's first word of the terms from their own government.

Petain, in the broadcast heard here, said the German advance had shown the Germans to be far better prepared and "overwhelmingly superior" in every department.

He said that in the second batile of the Aisne-Somme, 60 French divisions, without fortifications, faced a "terrible" force of 150 German divisions with motorized units. This would be about 900,000 men pitted against 2,250,000.

"The government decided to remain in France although there were considerations of a withdrawal overseas and continuing the war from there," Petain said. "Then the government asked for an armistice with honorable and reasonable conditions."

British sources denied Britain had promised to send 26 divisions to France in the first month of the war, but declared, in the face of criticism from a French minister, that she actually had sent 400,000 men.

British Failure Charged

Jean Prouvost, French minister of information, said yesterday at Bordeaux that Britain had not lived up to its promises.

(The statement as published in Bordeaux merely was attributed to a "member of the French government." The British identify the speaker as Prouvost.)

The British aircraft contribution, sources here said, was "greatly in excess of that promised and arranged with the French general staff."

It is true, said the British statement, that, due to shortage of equipment, fewer classes were called up in England than in France, but the "hundreds of thousands of volunteers" serving in the British forces were pointed to as proof that the kingdom is committed to a maximum war effort.

Otherwise, it was a bitter day of publicly expressed regrets for England.

Not only did Churchill deplore and the British press attack the actions of the Petain government in France, but in the House of Lords the Labor peer, Lord Strabolgi, took memories back to Manchuria and the days when the United States beckoned Britain to action, but was rebuffed.

Stragolgi said the European war resulted from Lord (then Sir John) Simon's "honest well meaning mistakes" when he was foreign secretary, including his differences in 1931 with the present American War Secretary-designate, Henry L. Stimson, on the United States' desire for a strong Anglo-American stand against Japan's invasion of Manchuria.

Stimson then was America's Secretary of State and Strabolgi, pointing to Stimson's new appointment, exclaimed.

Dangerous Doctrines

A striking address by Solicitor General Biddle in New York on Monday calls for increased executive power in preparation for war. With unity of one will and purpose, he is quoted as saying, war can be waged for the positive ideal of democracy. "We are today waging war," he continued. "We are in a war psychology. We are organizing for war and we should know it."

Such bellicose statements from a high Government official are particularly out of place at a time when the Nation is in need of calm counsel. The hearty support which Americans of all classes and all sections have given the defense program certainly would not be so nearly unanimous if it were generally believed that the Nation is "organizing for war." Hysterical utterances which fail to distinguish between preparation for defense and a state of war do not reflect the view of the great majority of Americans.

War psychology has patently influenced the thinking of Mr. Biddle. That is shown by his proposal to increase the powers of the President, in spite of the obvious "great risks to human liberty." "Isn't that one of the risks we must take," he asked, "if we are to arm and unify our Nation for the thing that must be expected?"

The weakness of our administrative organization today is not due to inadequate executive power but to its failure to discharge its multifarious duties efficiently. We shall not achieve the efficiency so vital to preservation of our democratic institutions by bestowing more and more power upon one indivdual. Such concentration of authority might well mean loss of personal liberties, as Mr. Biddle admits, without any compensating advantages.

Inefficiency in administrative machinery is a weakness characteristic of democratic governments, but it is not an inherent defect. It is merely a challenge to Americans who believe that democracy can be made to work effectively in major crises as well as in normal times.

Instead of imposing more administrative controls upon trade and industry, moreover, we need to remove some of the existing ones that act as a brake upon industrial advance and specifically upon preparations for defense.

The new and difficult problems presented by the defense program can best be met by relying upon the cooperation of free industry and free labor. Expert planning and management are essential to efficient execution, but achievement of those aims does not require abandonment of the system of free enterprise.

Believers in the democratic system must avoid the sophistries of those who advocate totalitarian methods in the name of freedom. It is by such loose reasoning that dictators have risen to power and strengthened their hold on the deluded masses of numerous countries.

Reassuring Contrast

The most striking aspect of the vast training program outlined by the National Defense Advisory Commission is its contrast with the compulsory training camps suggested by President Roosevelt a few days ago.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke of camps where all young men of a given age, and possibly young women, too, would learn to perform useful tasks and would be disciplined for future service to the Nation. In part that service would be military, in part industrial. The President appears to have drawn no distinction between the two.

The plan now suggested by his advisory commission is more in keeping with the needs of defense and with American tradition. Instead of sending young people off to camps, the commission would provide training in schools and industrial plants. "Immediate development of highly trained skilled workers for industry," the commission reports, "can best be accomplished in industry itself through an in-service training program."

Under this plan semi-skilled workers would be advanced as their training fits them for more complicated tasks. Through cooperation of trade and vocational schools with industry young men would be prepared to take the places of other workers who are moving on to more technical work. Training would thus be coordinated with the immediate needs of each industry to the advantage of the Nation and industrial workers alike.

The commission is well aware of the fact that no compulsion will be necessary to secure the type of young men that is needed for this training. Thousands of youths, to say nothing of more mature men who are still unemployed, are eager for an opportunity to learn skills that will permit them simultaneously to earn a living and serve their country. Indeed, the selection of the most promising men from the vast number eager to find places in this program will be a problem.

Republicans are already making capital out of the kinship between the White House proposal and the Nazi labor camps. If the Administration is wise, it will direct a hasty retreat from the labor-camp idea to the practical suggestions of its advisory commission.

Mr. Hoover's Message

It was the task of Herbert Hoover, in his address to the Republican National Convention last night, to instruct the delegates in the philosophy on which that party will wage its Presidential campaign. This task, albeit at a length which proved a little wearying for some of his great audience, he performed extremely well.

In a sense this message from the only living ex-President was more of a keynote speech, as well as a better speech, than the one delivered by Gov. Stassen on Monday night. And it was, in spite of all the partisan overtones and emphasis, a message to the American people which in places took on the quality of a great and permanent contribution to American political thought.

The present crisis for America, Mr. Hoover pointed out, is in no sense an emergency of sudden origin and, therefore, cannot possibly be countered by sudden haphazard governmental reactions, stimulated by a newly-aroused anxiety or fright. For years, the doyen of the G. O. P. told the assembled standard-bearers of Republicanism, "the most gigantic revolution in history" has been steadily undermining the slowly established liberties of mankind. From the ideas which promote and the consequences which follow such a revolution "there is no such thing as isolation." Far from being isolated, indeed, much of the disintegrating force in this revolution emanates from this country and has been actively promoted and encouraged by the Roosevelt Administration.

It has been the work of what Mr. Hoover calls "the totalitarian liberals" to sponsor a steady extension of government controls which, for all their humanitarian purpose, have successfully endangered free enterprise and with it the various freedoms which once it was the goal of government to protect. We, too, the former President asserted, "have been following the suicide road for liberty that led to disaster in Europe." The difference is only that the economic structure of this country is stronger, and, therefore, more resistant to piecemeal demolition. And also that "we are tougher in our fidelities."

It was into this picture, which the historian, the economist, and the political philosopher would alike characterize as accurate, that Mr. Hoover logically fitted the part of his speech referring to foreign policy. Lucid thinking was combined with precise definition here. And the combination has proved influential in affecting the deliberations of the platform committee, which has grown both weary and somewhat acrimonious in its struggles to create an acceptable foreign policy plank.

Mr. Hoover goes further than a large proportion of the delegates in his "belief that we should facilitate in every way" the shipment of "supplies of materials and munitions to those nations who are fighting for their freedom," but he places this position beyond the reach of reasonable criticism by attaching two limitations. One is that such assistance must be kept rigidly within the latitude allowed by Congress. The other limitation is that any assistance given "involves no action which takes us to war."

At first glance this proviso seems equivocal. How can it be determined in advance whether or not an action of assistance to Great Britain will "take us to war?" But on this point Mr. Hoover expands. He means that the furnishing of material assistance must not be accompanied by gratuitously offensive comments or gestures. "It is not the province of the President of the United States to create hate." And "the final realism is that if we are to keep cool and not stimulate war there must be an end to provocative speech by our officials."

This is sound and by no means superfluous advice. It is also good advice if one may judge by the applause accorded in the convention hall last night. Moreover, it is advice which dovetails with the former President's scarcely debatable conclusion that America's highest responsibility is to remain at peace and utilize "our moral force and counsel; our economic strength and our compassion" to assume the position of leadership in reconstruction to which events have called America.

It is the closely reasoned conviction of Mr. Hoover that present governmental policies jeopardize, and that our entry into the war would terminate, the justified emphasis upon the dignity of the common man which is a fundamental of Americanism. In a peroration of high literary merit, of great spiritual beauty, the former leader of the Republican Party last night called upon it to do battle for principles now obviously threatened. It was a speech of a kind which is too rarely heard, and of a merit which will be long remembered.

Belated Resort To Law

President Roosevelt's announcement that the Navy's "mosquito fleet" will not be returned to the builders for sale to Great Britain was merely a formality. Actually this proposed transaction went on the rocks when Representative Case called attention to the fact that it constituted a violation of law.

The case history of this incident is far from being reassuring. For three weeks the Navy Department conducted secret negotiations designed to add to the British fleet these speedy torpedo boats ordered by the United States. Congress learned of the proposal by accident. Many of its members were indignant because of this secrecy and because the policy-making branch of the Government had given the Navy no authority to dispose of its vessels in this manner.

After the Senate, in a tense session, had removed all doubt as to the illegality of the proposal, the President obtained an opinion to the same effect from his Attorney General. In other words, the President disregarded the law until it was thrust before his eyes by Congress and the legislative view was sustained by his own legal adviser. A Chief Executive exercising any reasonable degree of precaution would have inquired into his authority to effect such a transaction before undertaking it.

By its impetuous action the Administration has aroused disappointment in Great Britain and suspicion in the United States. It has not helped but has rather injured the cause of supplying the British with needed weapons for their defense. Nor is this blunder minimized by the Navy's statement that the unfinished boats it was planning to turn in have 18-inch torpedoes—"an obsolete type in the Navy not now in production." This seems to add lack of foresight in planning the boats to ignorance of, or disregard for, the law in trying to dispose of them.

Jackal Victory

Italy went into the war on June 10. It is now revealed in Rome, however, that the first considerable effort made by the Italian army was not undertaken until June 21.

That was four days after Marshal Petain had asked the Germans for an armistice. In other words, Italy was emboldened to strike only when France, by the latter's own admission, was prostrate. Yet the four-day Battle of the Alps is hailed in Italy as a striking military triumph.

"Formidable defenses," says the Italian communique, ". . . the strong reaction of the enemy, who was determined to oppose our advance, and very adverse atmospheric conditions did not slow down the impetuous advance of our troops, who everywhere achieved notable successes."

Even if valid, this claim is—under the circumstances that prevailed in France between June 21 and June 25—a stinging reproach. There is no glory in delivering a knockout to a man already defeated by another opponent. But the Fascist regime has never shown much scruple as to how its victories have been achieved. For three years the Battle of Guadalajara in the Spanish civil war has been cited by the Fascist press and spokesmen as an Italian "victory." Now, apparently, the defeat of France is to be attributed to the valor of Italian arms with, perhaps, the incidental assistance of the German war machine.

Unfortunately for Mussolini's amour propre, the French high command continued to chronicle the progress of the war to the last day. Thus the morning communique of June 24, issued only a little while before the Franco-Italian armistice was signed, tells of further German gains. It also declares: "Italian attacks were renewed but were broken by our advance posts and nowhere breached our line of resistance. The enemy suffered serious losses."

If the Italian people find glory in this pitiful exhibition of Fascist vanity, the prospect confronting Italy is even more tragic than that confronting France.

"Decline Of A Doctrine"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial in The Post of June 22 on the "Decline of a Doctrine" you speak of the "weakening effect of the present war on the doctrine of sovereignty," and you cite as evidence the failure of a number of small nations to defend their sovereignty.

Permit me to say that in the case of Czecho-Slovakia especially (and, in general, of other small nations as well) this failure was not due to any weakening of the "doctrine of sovereignty" but solely to the fact that she was faced with overwhelming military might and abandoned by everybody, including those who were morally and legally bound to assist her. Even the Government of the United States pleaded with her not to resort to military defense of her sovereignty. Everyone was against her and none supported her. Defense of her sovereignty was hopeless.

Then you speak of "Balkanized Europe" and the "riot of nationalism" following the last war, and you say that, "confronted by the excesses of sovereignty, the League of Nations could do little to amalgamate the pieces."

May I point out that the most ardent supporters of the League of Nations and of the principle of collective security were the smaller nations. This was particularly true of Czecho-Slovakia, which not only clung to the League of Nations to the last, but also prepared herself, militarily and otherwise, to carry out her duties in that organization. In addition she organized the Little Entente and entered into other arrangements for collective security.

It was among the larger nations that the "excesses of sovereignty" were most conspicuous and disastrous. These rejected the slightest limitations on their sovereignty and thus made collective security impossible. This, combined with a decline in international morality, not only on the part of the dictatorships but also, to a certain extent, among the democracies, is responsible for the present international situation.

Jehovah's Witnesses

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The wrecking of the meeting hall used by the Jehovah's Witnesses sect in Rockville is symptomatic of the hysteria now sweeping the country. With the President and Administration leaders continually directing our attention toward the Nazi menace and fifth-column activities, self-appointed guardians against "subversive elements" are seizing the opportunity to harass perfectly innocent, unpopular minority groups. It is becoming increasingly clear that the chief threat to democracy in this country lies in the unlawful activities of such self-appointed groups and in their hysteria which has spawned them.

We, in 1940, are witnessing a titanic test of strength between totalitarianism and democracy. The forces of democracy will ultimately triumph, regardless of the outcome of the European War, if we strengthen and improve it, and make it work for the benefit of all the people. This means the fullest regard for civil rights, including the right of minority groups to express their opinions unmolested. Any curtailment of these rights means an abandonment, to some extent, of democratic principles and the adoption to a corresponding extent of those of totalitarianism.

To use totalitarian methods in fighting totalitarianism is to defeat the very purpose of the struggle.

Pleads For "Union Now"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Civilization is on its way out of the world. If we want to keep it with us and to assure its peaceful progress, we must take heed of the best advice I have read in a long time. It is contained in Clarence K. Streit's book, "Union Now."

If we would have peace, jobs, low taxes, and confidence that these benefits will continue in the future, there is but one course open to us. It is, as Mr. Streit points out, the course which was taken by the 13 colonies in 1787—"Union Now." The union which he advocates includes 15 North Atlantic democracies, enumerated in the book. By provision in the constitution which it would adopt, this union would form the nucleus of a world union, the remaining nations to be admitted upon their guaranteeing to their peoples such basic rights as free speech, press, assembly and others as enumerated in our Bill of Rights.

Within its ever-widening borders the union would establish free trade, a union defense force, a union money, a union postal and communications system and a union citizenship. The member nations would surrender their national sovereignties and become autonomous states in the same sense as are the States of this country.

To support adoption of his ideas, Mr. Streit has many powerful arguments, among them the growing interdependence of nations, their ever-mounting expenditures for national defense, the instability of foreign exchange, tariff barriers to trade. To me the most weighty argument in favor of his program is this: "In all that half the earth which the 15 (democracies) govern, what acre causes dangerous dispute among them? . . . No two of the 15 have fought each other since the Belgian-Dutch war of 1830. There is no parallel in all politics to this remarkable and unremarked achievement of democracy in maintaining peace so long among so many powerful, independent and often rival peoples . . ." Can we deny the need for unifying and strengthening such a force for world peace?

Would not the existence of an overwhelmingly powerful peaceful state in the world, ready at all times to disarm the aggressor as no league ever could, make possible the realization of world peace and disarmament eventually?

England has been pressed by the force of events into suggesting a similar plan to include two nations, Great Britain and France. From England that suggestion may have come too late. However, whether the French do or do not accept it, I believe that the time is ripe for an invitation to go out from our President to those 15 democracies, free and conquered alike, to form a union, as described in Mr. Streit's book.

Not only would this union be certain ultimately to stop Hitler, because of its tremendously greater material resources necessary for war, but it would encourage the peoples now suffering under Hitler's domination to organize more vigorous underground activity because of the promise the future would hold out to them without Hitler.

On Land Monopoly

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While European dictators are directly responsible for the murderous warfare inflicted by them, it is well for us to remember that the malignant power which they have been able to exercise must be attributed to three principal sources of social injustice: imperialism, tariff walls and land monopoly. That land monopoly, which nullifies the right to the use of the earth, is the greatest of these evils may be partially understood by considering the following facts.

In Italy more than two-thirds of the land is owned by less than 4 per cent of the landowners. In Hungary one-third of the people owns no land. In Poland 70 per cent are peasants in appalling conditions. One aristocrat owned 340,000 acres. In Spain before the recent struggle 1 per cent owned 51.5 per cent of the land. In Mexico in 1910 2 per cent owned 70 per cent of the land. In Japan, half the arable land is owned by about 1½ per cent of the total population.

In Great Britain, when the last survey was made, some 40,000 people—one-tenth of 1 per cent—owned nearly three-quarters of the country. Some 44,000,000 owned no land whatever. In Scotland 96.4 per cent owned no land. Twenty-five landowners claim to own one-third of Scotland. In Demark, only 5 per cent of the farms are held by tenants.

In the United States nearly 50 per cent of all farms are held by tenants. In the United States 16 people own 47,800,000 acres of timber lands. In Manhattan 1 per cent own about 85 per cent of the island, valued at $4,022,000,000 (1937).

"On The German Model"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial "On the German Model," in The Post of June 20 relative to the President's plan for universal military and technical training shows a rare mixture of realism and tightrope-walking. You are realistic enough to appreciate that, in the face of a world confronted with the menace of dictators, a democracy must have a trained army, but you refuse to face the facts that it must also have a trained army of technicians and laborers to support the army.

We need a citizenry with some training in military tactics and in military discipline, but we also need a body of men trained in artisanships necessary in war to maintain the highly mechanized plant of modern warfare.

I doubt if this ideology will satisfy the men who are drafted for potential use as front line fighters. They are not going to be keen enough to see any difference between the fighting man and the man in the supporting forces in the rear. If one is to be drafted, the other ought to be drafted. If one is to serve optionally, both should serve optionally. Since the young men being trained are not being given permanent jobs, the charge of John L. Lewis and the inference to be drawn from The Post's editorial are equally untenable.

The Post Impressionist

Man With Jug

The old man who lived in the tub and capered for the Athenian populace was not a man to coddle a dictator—even if the Great Alexander had pressed the length and the breadth of the ancient world under the stern rule of his own armed might.

The young Alexander, always busy in his leisure moments inquiring what the intelligentsia was up to, paid old Diogenes of Synope the honor of a personal call to the famous wine jug that housed him outside Athens. The patriarch of the cynics took no notice, however, and continued to bask in the bright rays of the Hellene sun.

Remarked Alexander, finally, in a modest gambit: "I am Alexander, a great king." Diogenes Laertius, Roman namesake who compiled the philosopher's biography, records the accepted version of the interview.

"So? Well, I'm Diogenes—a dog," was the grunted reply. Alexander sensed a conversational opening—one that might lead to a famous epigram.

"Why do you call yourself a dog, Diogenes?"

"Because I fawn on those who throw me bones, bark at those who do me harm and bite rascals."

A silence—uncomfortable for majesty—fell again. "Is there nothing I can do for you, Diogenes?"

"Yes"—and then the answer that sped the length and breadth of the ancient world, and rattled down in history: "Yes, get out of my sunlight."

Alexander wondered—"Aren't you afraid of me, old fellow?"

"Why should I be," replied the unrepentant rogue. "Are you a catastrophe?"

Silenced majesty retired. But as Alexander walked away they say he remarked to his body slave: "Were I not Alexander, I would wish to be Diogenes."

It was a notable admittance for the proud emperor and from then on the impudent fellows who followed and imitated Diogenes added a new cynic characteristic and paid particular attention to insulting rulers. They already followed the master's rigorous program of discarding all property save a double cloak—more acceptable if ragged, a wallet to hold the bread they begged and a staff to belabor their fellowmen. They lived on the land and spat upon the honest citizenry; they embraced snow-covered statues and postured for the public merriment so profitably that some years later vagrancy ordinances were published in many a community largely for the benefit of the army of their successors.

Lately the story of Diogenes carrying a lighted lantern by day about the busy Athens marketplace gained more currency than the better documented stories of the royal interview. Scholars blame this on undue, latter-day editing of the standard account by some translator, or second-hand narrator.

The gaunt Diogenes is quoted explaining his bizarre meandering as a search for "an honest man." Careful students have translated the phrase as merely a search for "a man"—a rebuke of the spreading effeminacy and softness among the once valiant Athenians. The spirit of honesty apparently was injected in the story by some zealot in copybook maxims, and it spread like wildfire.

But Diogenes was an admitted master of the grave caper, the pointed antic and the sharp turn of an edged phrase. Some pompous fellow warned him against spitting among the rich furnishings of his palace. That was too much for Diogenes. Searching around carefully, he deliberately spat in the face of his host.

"There was no meaner receptacle," he apologized.

His most amiable gesture appeared during one of the Athenian wars when the city expected besiegement at any moment. The citizenry bustled about, everyone in preparation. The old philosopher appeared on the scene, busily trundling his wine jug, hooplike, before him.

"I just couldn't bear to be idle," he explained, turning a corner to mock yet another busy thoroughfare.

The rich nuggets of his witty observations are a delight to this day. He called love the employment of the idle. Asked when should a man marry, he replied readily. Said he: "A young man, not yet. An old man, never."

He chided a beautiful youth for a stupid remark. "You should be ashamed," he said, "to draw forth a blade of lead from that scabbard of ivory."

When some Sophist demonstrated there was no such thing as motion, he held his tongue—but rose silently, and strode away.

Between Diogenes and Plato, the elegant and aristocratic, there was scant sympathy. Plato was almost the only man known ever to have worsted Diogenes at his own game of sarcasms. And even with him exceptions occurred.

There was the time Diogenes was engaged in one of his rare bouts with employment. He was washing vegetables when Plato passed by.

"Had you paid court to Dionysius," observed the aristocratic sage. "You would never have had to wash vegetables."

"Had you washed vegetables, Plato, you would never have had to pay court to Dionysius."

The misfortunes of the old rascal carried him to Corinth before his death. Despite capture by pirates and new slavehood he reached yet new honors in Corinth.

He died close by the city gate one morning in 423 B. C. One story has it that, tired of life, the old man held his breath and applied the final discipline of his rigorous existence. The same day in a far city the great Alexander also closed his eyes forever. For Alexander, the whole ancient world mourned. For Diogenes the people of Corinth erected a simple monument—a slender column surmounted by a dog of Parian marble.

Fair Enough

Quaint Americans

Philadelphia, June 25.

THAT SECTION of the American people who call themselves the Republicans are now deeply involved in the incoherent rites known as their quadrennial national convention, from whose atmosphere of suspicion and ill-faith they will presently send forth a man, already condemned by many of their number, as their candidate for the Presidency in a time of emergency and peril.

The Americans have quaint ways. They search the professional, personal and domestic lives of all who have the courage to submit their ambitions to the party conventions, and each party tears to tatters the reputation of every man who comes under its consideration.

If he takes a drink he is a drunkard who might get plastered some night in the little round office at the White House and send the Navy to attack Japan.

If he comes to the convention well advertised after a long preliminary campaign in a private car he is presumed to have bought his delegates at so much on the hoof and to have hidden connections with Wall Street and obligations to enslave the farmer and wage-earner.

IF HE SEEMS to be a spontaneous candidate without a political machine he, too, comes under a suspicion, soon made into a solid conviction, that he is a wily stooge of sinister forces, and the more dangerous because he has been clever enough to conceal cash contributions of fabulous size.

It is inconceivable to the politician that any man should ever be the people's choice.

If he is a Catholic he is a conspirator in the service of the Vatican, if a Jew he is both a Communist and an international banker with a financial stake in a victory for Adolf Hitler, and if he is a conscientious Protestant he is a prohibitionist in human form and probably a dangerous bigot.

If he ever took a retainer from a soulless corporation that, of course, makes him a crook who will represent his old client in the White House, and if he ever said a good word for union labor and civil liberties the man is a dangerous Red.

THERE ARE FEW—in fact, no men who can come through this inspection, amounting in all to scandal-mongering with the slanders written in the sky. So the upshot of the process is that the party nominee must be either a bloodless nonentity with no convictions or a normal successful product of the American way of life whose total unfitness already has been well advertised by the very people who will now support him with passionate faith as the one American qualified to save the Nation.

The Americans also go in for carnival effects in their political conventions, but do them so badly that they depress rather than inspire their countrymen and make them feel that, after all, if band music and parades are a legitimate part of patriotic rallies Hitler and Mussolini do such things better. The music is a listless and, no doubt, unionized jumble of grunts and bleats played by pot-bellied and otherwise grotesque hirelings attired in low-comedy uniforms who march like bums. The bunting and other trappings of pageantry are cheap and half-hearted and suggest only that this phase of the show has been a dreary failure. And the oratory is not only dull but horribly repetitious, with paltry little opportunists from hither and yon bouncing out onto the speaker's bridge for no other reason than to place themselves on record in support of one who might conceivably have jobs to give away next year.

THE REPUBLICANS this year have selected a particularly unsightly and depressing scene in which to fan their optimism. There is no more lugubrious sight anywhere in the United States than the shabby and outmoded ruins, interspersed with a few modern structures which only heighten the contrast, which constitute that stretch of Broad street where the patriots are gathered. These old monuments to civic corruption and democratic indifference are coated and streaked with pigeon lime, and give the impression that they are permitted to stand only because there is no worthwhile difference between the exorbitant taxes and the cost of knocking them down. There are no restaurants or other appointments of a large, living city, and a reek of despondency and decay pervades the air in which the Republicans are damning, each in turn, every man of their political faith whose name is lettered on banners, buttons and souvenir fans as a candidate for their nomination.

The Americans do not criticize or argue with their candidates but heckle them, instead, with mean questions intended only to embarrass and discredit, and are constantly striving for a grand slam in which the whole lot of them are shown up as wife-beaters, thieves, adulterers, dictators and incompetents. Any achievement is at once scoffed away with sneers, and if by rare chance a man's honesty is established he is asked if he thinks he deserves a medal for that.

The Americans seek not the virtues but the faults of their countrymen who run for the Presidency, and make such an ordeal of the process that only the brave or foolhardy dare face it. They then drag them through the queer native rite called the party convention, in which all the important discussions and decisions take place in mysterious huddles in hotel rooms and, finally, wonder why the people seem not entirely confident of the wisdom and motives of their Chief Executive and in the stability of the Nation under his hand.

Facts Of Life

By Dorothy Thompson

The Republican Convention

Philadelphia, June 25.

THERE IS NOT the slightest indication at this convention that the leaders of the Republican Party know the facts of life as they are in the world at this moment.

This party represents the substantial middle classes of this Nation, and the financial and industrial leadership. And if that leadership is expressed in anything we have heard around here so far, then God help the United States of America, and God help that leadership!

THE FACT OF LIFE is that while we sit here in Philadelphia the whole political, economic and financial structure of the world, of which we have so far been an integral part, has collapsed before a revolutionary collectivist movement armed with every weapon that can be forged, a revolutionary collectivist movement which in six short weeks has taken under its sovereignty the entire continent of Europe, consisting of 400,000,000 highly civilized, highly industrialized people. It is now battering at the gates of the last opponent, at the capital of an empire that covers one-fourth of the globe. Europe has been impressed into, and tomorrow a large part of the whole earth may be forced to join, the greatest single monopoly ever set up in all history—a monopoly that will control the entire physical resources, the land, industries, man power and trade of a continent, and the continents controlled by that continent.

At the same time, in the East, another power with precisely the same view of power is rapidly establishing its sovereignty over Asia and has already become the only rival Pacific power to ourselves. And in between them is Russia, another vast continental monopoly of completely controlled production, distribution and trade.

FURTHERMORE, these huge complexes, these vast authorization holding companies, have merged their economic organizations with a political credo, and have organized their followers in every country in the world, including our own. They have a completely integrated economic, political and propaganda program, under which every salesman is a high pressure public relations counsel for the firm.

They have cut themselves loose from the liberal, banking conception of money and profit. They know no limitations upon what can or cannot be "afforded." They can afford anything that they can make with man power or materials, and materials are whatever they can get by the exchange of goods under a rigged and managed international currency. If they have gold they use it; if they do not, they use goods—their own goods, and other people's goods.

Over against a system like our own they have the advantage of the elder Rockefeller against the small oil owners, or of the chain stores against the cracker barrel groceries. They can offer "loss leaders"—just as some stores sell certain products below actual cost in order to attract trade. So they can, and are, selling bicycles in South America below the actual cost of production. They have put their workers on subsistence wages, fully aware that in this anarchic world the average man would rather be certain of three meals a day, clothing and shelter than live in the grueling uncertainty as to whether next week he may eat at all.

The owners of the firms are either the party officials, as in Russia, or the entire German nation, as in Germany, where the Czechs, Poles and tomorrow the French, Dutch and Belgians can be made into the "wage slaves" to serve the German managers.

AND THESE SYSTEMS are spread or protected by universal and compulsory military and work service, promoted under a messianic ideal of world salvation, and instilled into every child from infancy.

These are the facts of life; this is the reality. And over against it, leaders here are debating war or peace, isolation or non-isolation.

The latter debate can be dropped immediately. We are isolated. What the isolationists desired has now been fully achieved, not by what we have done, but by what we have not done. If Britain falls, the Americas are absolutely and completely isolated on this globe—with South America and this country full of salesmen for the super-firms of Germany, Italy and Japan.

If Britain falls, the Atlantic Ocean will run unprotected and without a single strategical outpost right to Boston and New York, and our Navy will have to choose between leaving open the Atlantic or the Pacific.

IN THE FACE of this, Gov. Stassen of Minnesota, who made the keynote speech, came out against universal service, saying that it was an invention of Stalin, Mussolini and Hitler. Presumably he has never heard of Switzerland or, for that matter, of France. And Mr. Hoover came out for Nineteenth Century economic liberalism.

Nobody at this convention seems to have the slightest idea of what is going on in the heads of workmen and youth of this country. None of them seems to have learned the prime social lesson to be learned from the collapse of the French and Belgian morale. Wake up, America, and learn it! Men will work—overtime and gladly; they will suspend many trade union rules; they will rally to a discipline of work; youth will drill and train and fight, and postpone planned careers, to turn a lathe, or dig a ditch, or shoulder a gun—for France, or for England, or for the United States of America.

But they will do none of these things for yesterday's bosses. They will do none of these things to protect the profits of the rich. Not any more. You don't make an American soldier by putting an American into a uniform, nor an American worker by putting a rivet into his hand. First he has to know with certainty for what he is working, and for what he is fighting.

He will work and fight for democracy, when democracy means work, and bread, and human dignity, and brotherhood. He will work and fight to make this country the most beautiful home for men that the sun ever shone upon.

But he won't work and fight to maintain the society sitting at the Republican Convention. You can't make a man into a patriot by putting him in a jail for being a Communist, you can't dissolve the "fifth column" by taking Communists and Nazis off the WPA. We have got to ask ourselves why some of our best and most intelligent youth is Communist, and why workers whisper, "Why should we fight Hitler? We would be just as well off under him as we are now."

Our youth and our workmen will desert the "fifth column" in droves the moment they see a real picture of a great, cooperative American commonwealth.

But they won't lift a finger for nineteenth century liberalism. Because they are too smart. They know a world has died on the battlefields of Flanders.

IT IS WITH positive alarm that I listen to the flow of recrimination and the applause from the floor at every attack on our present Government. I, too, have criticized the New Deal, and continue to criticize it for its red tape, its foolish experimentation with crackpot ideas, its confusion of aims, its attempts to do opposite things at the same time. But who among us dare cast the first stone today? Where has leadership shown itself during the last seven years? Among the Republicans of Congress? Let us face reality by first confessing that every one of us is to blame. Let us forget yesterday, and waste no time and energy on all our previous shortcomings. And let us realize that we shall not preserve the independence and the ideal of America unless we are prepared to throw overboard every single thing except the essentials, namely, that we should remain free of foreign domination, and establish the most intimate fellowship amongst ourselves.

IT IS NOT TOO LATE for the Republicans to take the leadership of this Nation, provided they are willing to pay for that leadership by the greatest sacrifice of party and class considerations, forgetting everything except that the United States of America is at stake. They should cut right across all party lines and nominate Wendell Willkie for President for one clear, simple reason: He is a first-rate industrial organizer with a knowledge of men and materials; he has excellent health and a serene temper.

But at the same time they should make it clear that the Republican Party desires a national coalition government, representative of the Nation as a whole and of all its social classes. If they had imagination, they would insist that Mr. Roosevelt remain in the Cabinet as Secretary of the Navy. They would insist that Mr. LaGuardia become Secretary of Labor. There is no other man in America who understands the problems of labor better, is more sympathetic to workmen, or more hard boiled in dealing with labor production problems.

THEY WOULD SAY that we will retain Cordell Hull in the State Department; they would nominate Robert Jackson for Vice President.

This country needs brains and character, wherever they can be found, and its needs a government that can be instrusted with an authority never granted a government before in this country: The mobilization of our resources regardless of vested interests to save the United States for our children. You cannot promise to save the United States and save the whole existing economic and political system at the same time, while satisfying the ambitions of every party politician and effecting a compromise between every pressure group.

Americans, look at England, look at France, look at Germany, and say with one voice to this convention: These things shan't happen here!

The Sedate G. O. P.

By Ernest K. Lindley

In A Blitzkrieg Age

Philadelphia, June 25.

ATTENDING the Republican national convention is something like watching a baseball team warm up for a game that is to be played in the path of a hurricane. Most of the players and spectators do not know that they may be in the path of a hurricane. Or if they have heard the warnings, they do not believe them. For hurricanes simply do not occur in the part of the world with which they are familiar—and with which their fathers and grandfathers were familiar. Or if they realize that a hurricane is now moving, it seems still a long way off and unlikely to head in their direction.

So the players go about their familiar and traditional tasks. Senator Taft and Wendell Willkie and Tom Dewey and the lesser candidates shake hands with delegates, try to hold their friends and take away each other's friends. And the platform makers try, as usual, to settle complex and highly controversial problems with words which will satisfy men and women who are miles apart in their views, but which, nevertheless, are supposed to embody solemn commitments to be faithfully executed by the Republican Party if it wins the election and inaugurates a President next January.

IN TIMES of stress, it is often reassuring to see men and women going about their appointed duties with calm and diligence. But the Republican National Convention, in its early stages, does not give the impression of men and women bravely going about their work while under fire. It suggests rather the kind of inability to realize what is going on which until recently prevented English workers from foregoing their bank holidays and English statesmen their long week-ends.

The Republican National Convention seems a bit unreal because what happens before next January, or even before November, is likely to have such profound effects on the future of this country.

Whether Great Britain stands or falls probably will be determined within a few weeks. If Great Britain falls, there will immediately arise such questions of crucial importance to this country as the disposition of the British fleet and whether the British Empire fights on, with the Western Hemisphere, Singapore and Cape Town as its bases.

Or there may be within a few weeks a peace proposal which would amount to ratification of the Nazi domination of the continent of Europe and Italian domination of the Mediterranean, while permitting Great Britain to retain its fleet and its more distant possessions.

THERE IS NO ONE in the Republican Party—or in the world—prophetic enough to foresee all of the possible world events of the next few weeks which would vitally affect this country and to write now a formula for dealing with them.

A few Republican leaders, notably Gov. Landon, have prevented their colleagues from rushing out on the end of a limb with a too-specific declaration on foreign policy. As I write, the tentative plank is vague enough to satisfy such a strong pro-ally Republican as former Senator Edge, of New Jersey, and such an extreme isolationist as Senator Nye. If this meant that the ardent interventionists and the ardent isolationists were really meeting on common ground, it would be reassuring. But at present prospect it seems to mean only that the plank is cagey enough to be interpreted in more than one way.

Where it is specific, the tentative plank seems legalistic and unreal. It would bind us to a strict observance of international law in aiding Great Britain. But suppose that one or two little steps over the boundary of international law would mean the difference between the collapse of Great Britain or its successful resistance to a Nazi counter-blockade combined with aerial strafing. Suppose it would mean the difference between the surrender of the British fleet and the preservation of at least part of it in being.

TO BE SPECIFIC, suppose that we could save Great Britain by permitting British naval ships to be repaired in our dockyards. Or by selling 30 or 40 of our old destroyers. We are planning to build what amounts to an Atlantic fleet because the British fleet is imperiled. We would not need this fleet, in all probability, if Great Britain could hold out. And if Great Britain does not hold out, we may not have time to build the new fleet.

Under such conditions it would seem a matter of elementary good sense not to let our actions be restricted by a nice regard for international law. International law may mean a lot to the lawyers with whom Congress and national conventions abound. But it isn't the equivalent of a single machine gun in protecting our vital interests against powers which do not observe international law.

The Republicans are overwhelmingly against sending another expeditionary force to Europe. If they said that and added that they favored doing whatever else might prove necessary to protect our national interests, they would have a plank more nearly in accord with the military and naval realities. And they would be less likely to trip themselves and the Nation between now and the election.

ALF M. LANDON

He is notable, says Ernest Lindley, among leaders at the Republican convention who "have prevented their colleagues from rushing out on the end of a limb with a too-specific declaration on foreign policy"

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Leadership Or Catering?

THE STRUGGLE at Philadelphia is not over policies and programs. For the Republican Party is at present much too divided and confused to take a clear position on any great question; the whole ingenuity of the official orators and platform makers and the political managers is dedicated to inventing combinations of words which can seem to mean all things to all men. This preoccupation with verbal formulae is inevitable in any assemblage of men who have as yet no leaders to lead them.

The party has no leaders now. Everyone agrees that this convention is unbossed. It is no less true that this convention is unled. And since it is both unbossed and unled the preliminary verbal maneuvers serve the same purpose as the brass bands and the songs and the entertainers who keep a crowd in order until the real show can begin.

THE UNDERLYING struggle at Philadelpiha is over whether the Republican Party shall or shall not choose a man to lead it. The struggle is, therefore, over Wendell Willkie. For the essential difference between the Willkie candidacy and that of Taft and Dewey is not in their respective views about foreign and domestic policy, but in their conception of the function and duty of public men. Mr. Willkie stands for the view that a public man must express his convictions and then try to persuade the people to follow him; Messrs. Taft and Dewey stand for the view that a public man must try to find out what a majority of voters are thinking and must conform to the majority and follow it. Under the one conception a party is capable of choosing national policies. Under the other conception it can only make popular promises. Mr. Willkie stands for the principle of leadership in a democracy; the others stand for the practice of inviting random and synthetic and shifting majorities to determine the policies of the state.

THE QUESTION at Philadelphia is whether the party is to offer the Nation a leader in this time of crisis or whether it is going to abdicate the responsibility of leadership and try to win by catering to as many incoherent factions and pressure groups as it can appeal to. Nothing else that is being debated in Philadelphia matters in the least. Neither the foreign relations of the United States nor its internal condition are going to be affected in the slightest by the elaborate ambiguities of the word manipulators; the tide of events is so strong and so swift that in less than ten days there will not be 500 persons in the world who will still be able to remember the formulae that are being painfully contrived in the hotel rooms of Philadelphia.

What will matter is whether the convention has chosen a man who will try to get himself elected by emitting ambiguous rhetoric appealing to petty interests and unmanly fears, and avoiding or ignoring every real issue which might threaten to disrupt his unstable and divided following. What will matter is whether, on the contrary, the convention has chosen a man who is concerned with the destiny of the country and has convictions which he will express, appealing to the sense of the people that they must be great not petty, strong not weak, resolute and not soft, lucid and not confused. The issue, to put it bluntly but accurately, is whether the Republican Party is to choose a leader who can be a statesman or a politican who will play the demagogue.

IF THIS WERE not the real issue, in this convention, Mr. Willkie would not be a formidable contender. He is a formidable contender because he possesses the gift of leadership; he has the insight, the character and the magnetism of which leadership is composed. The proof that he is a genuine leader lies in the fact that he has such an enormous following throughout the Nation and in all walks of life. That following was not drummed up by propaganda. It is as nearly spontaneous as anything we have ever seen. That following is not the product of organization and promises and pledges; it is a popular uprising of men and women who have responded, as free peoples ought to respond, to good leadership when good leadership is available.

The Republican Party ought to be thankful that this has happened. They ought to be thankful as patriots that in a time when leadership is indispensable a leader has appeared. They ought to be thankful as partisans because only a leader of Willkie's quality can hope to contend on equal terms with a leader like Roosevelt. And they ought to realize that if they do not seize this opportunity, if they reject it, if they frustate the men and women who are behind Willkie, they will be faced in one form or another with the certain disintegration of the Republican following and of the moral spirit of the Republican Party. There may be no open schism. But as surely as the sun rises in the morning, the great mass of the ardent and influential people who are behind Willkie will lose interest or they will drift away, looking elsewhere for leadership.

Britain Stands Alone

By Barnet Nover

Approaching The Climax

THERE IS an old saying that England loses every battle but the last.

In this, the very darkest hour in their history, the British people find a measure of hope and encouragement in that thought. They and their allies have literally lost every battle, every campaign, of the war to date. Poland went early in the struggle. Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium were overrun with lightning rapidity. And now, crowning blow of all, France has given up the fight.

Only Great Britain is left to carry on the struggle against Hitler. So the last and greatest and most decisive battle of the war draws near. The British leaders express confidence that this battle, at any rate, will not be lost. But they do not and cannot minimize the difficulties that face their nation.

EUROPE today is a spear aimed at Great Britain. All of the continent's resources are at Hitler's disposal. He does not even have to pay for them. He can take what he wants and there is none to say him nay. Nor will he scruple to employ these resources in his effort to destroy the nation which alone stands in the way of his final triumph.

Various alternatives are open to Germany. She might attempt an actual invasion of England. She might, on the other hand, resort principally to siege tactics in the hope that, by isolating and weakeneing that nation, the British will to resist will speedily crumble. As a third alternative Hitler might offer Great Britain a negotiated peace, holding out the promise of leaving the British Empire wholly or largely untouched.

A direct invasion of Great Britain will not be easy. The English Channel is no more than a ditch. But as long as the British fleet remains it will not be easy for the German troops to cross that ditch in sufficiently large numbers to overwhelm the considerable force which Great Britain can now call on for home defense. Later on, if the British fleet is destroyed or considerably reduced in size such an invasion may become more feasible and may be attempted.

A more likely possibility, at the moment, is that Germany will use her concentrated air power plus submarine warfare to destroy first Britain's offensive power, such as it is, and later her defensive capacity by incessant raids on docks, fuel depots, harbor works, factories, air fields and cities. The far-reaching raids which have been carried out by the German air force on a great many British points suggest that this will be the first phase of the Battle of Britain.

The all-important factor is time. If Britain is to be defeated she must be defeated in a relatively brief period. Should she manage to resist, say, for six months the picture might alter to a greater or lesser extent in Britain's favor.

In the first place there now appears every certainty of famine conditions arising in many parts of the continent. To be sure, whatever food there will be available will be used by Hitler to feed the German forces and the German people. But if Europe starves, the organization of European resources for a prolonged war against Great Britan will not be easy. Furthermore the problem of garrisoning will become more difficult, and, last but not least, it is questionable, assuming that the British blockade can be continued in even partially effective form, whether Italy could survive a winter of war even though that war is fought at long range.

That Great Britain can hold out for six months in the face of the terrible punishment she is certain to receive is, however, anything but certain.

IN VIEW OF her desperate plight, made very much worse by the form which France's capitulation took, some will ask why Great Britain chooses to fight on, why she does not save what might yet be saved in blood and treasure by making peace with Hitler.

One answer to that question is to be found in the terms of the Franco-German armistice. There was nothing in that document which reflects even the slightest measure of generosity. By it France becomes a slave nation, an instrument to aid in the achievement of Hitler's still unsatisfied ambitions.

The Britain that the world has known cannot make peace with Hitler because it cannot live in a Europe dominated by Hitler. He brooks no rivals. He insists on either subjects or satellites. Any peace which Great Britain might make with Hitler at this time, even if she were allowed to retain her fleet and her empire, which is difficult to imagine, would be a capitulation. At the very least it would require the government at London, like the French government of today, to be a government prepared to do the Fuehrer's bidding.

This fact the men who today direct the destinies of Great Britain fully realize as they realize the magnitude of the difficulties facing them. But they have nonetheless announced their determination to fight on. They realize what is involved in this struggle. It is in a very literal sense a struggle for survival, with no compromise possible. This is the lesson to be drawn from the fate of France, of Poland, of Czechoslovakia and all the other subject nations of Europe. It is a lesson which the American people can hardly afford to ignore.

The Mall Gets A Shower . . .

A MAN-MADE SHOWER MOISTENS THE MALL—SPRINKLER SYSTEM WAS TURNED ON YESTERDAY—WEEKS AHEAD OF TIME—TO SAVE THE GRASS

Better'n A Dip—Gene Baker, 7; Jack Harron, 7, and Raymond Fenner, 9, got more fun out of running through the maze of spray than they would have had in swimming

The sprinkling system in the Mall was turned on yesterday at least a month earlier than usual to save the grass from being burned up in the city's worst June drought.

The Weather Bureau provided these statistics on the state of the weather of which lawn-sprinkling Washingtonians have been more or less vaguely apprehensive:

Total rainfall for the month to date is .13 of an inch, 3.08 inches below normal and 1.11 inches less than the rainfall for June, 1894, which heretofore held the all-time dry record. Other Junes in which the rainfall was abnormally low are to be found in Weather Bureau records for 1873, 1.63 inches; 1875, 2.06 inches; 1893, 1.81 inches; 1898, 1.33 inches; 1908, 1.53 inches; 1913, 1.81 inches; 1925, 1.53 inches; 1926, 1.66 inches, and 1931, 2.12 inches.

June, 1940, experienced a respectable shower on only one day, the ninth, when the rainfall was .09 inch. On 11 days of the month there has been a "trace" of rain.

That's why the Mall from Washington Monument to the Capitol was a sea of water plumes yesterday from which the neighborhood children appeared to profit as much as the grass.

No Nazified Paris Styles, Says Antoine

Coiffure Expert Predicts French Creative Spirit Will Prevail

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

FRANCE will always be Paris, and Paris always the artistic center of the fashion and beauty world, according to Antoine, high priest of the coiffure, who is in Washington this week.

"But will Paris not become mechanized and grow static as a result of German occupation?" the silvery haired Parisian was asked.

ANTOINE "Never!" was Antoine's immediate response. "It would be impossible for Parisians to bow to Hitler's regimentation. Even though mechanized in body, their minds will continue as artistic, fertile and creative as in the past. They give out even as they absorb or are absorbed. Their subtlety of mind is superior to any conquerors, threfore they will grow in strength, not weaken.

New Inspiration

This was encouraging news from a man who knows whereof he speaks, especially as he has left behind him in Paris his salons and establishments, and a fortune built up more than a decade ago, when his fame as an original and daring beauty expert was first heralded. His belief in Parisian elegance was touching and his faith in Parisian courage strong enough to make one believe, too, that nothing ever will touch the inherent charm of the French artist. In fact, although neither milliner nor modiste, Antoine seemed particularly happy that the Parisian couturiers were gaining new ambition through deprival. Their prestige may be lowered now, but not for long, he insists, and they will emerge with fresher, more brilliant ideas as soon as they get their second wind.

Chic for the Hausfrau

As for the German frau, even her placid lack of chic may be changed by the Parisian's fund of inspirations, but Antoine doesn't give her too much hope. The smart Italian woman, however, akin to the Parisian in her fondness for high style, will serve as a bond in preserving the traditions of beauty and fashion on the continent, Antoine believes. He cited Cleopatra, who did much to uplift the morale of Egypt when, upon capture, she exercized every effort to be more beautiful and desireble than ever before. "Be assured," promised Antoine, "Paris won't sit on her hair—or her hands. She is not material, but spiritual in her outlook—and has common sense and good taste as well. At this moment her make-up and coiffure is softer and more functional than it has ever been, just deep, natural waves closely caressing a neat headline. Extremes in coiffure will not return until pressure becomes so intense that it will turn into an inspiration."

New Swedish Game

Everybody's playing Swedish Ring Toss, or soon will be, say gamesters in the know. It's a traditional game of Sweden, played by tossing rings from one player to another who toss and catch the rings on wooden swords. Played outdoors or in and ots of fun.

This?——Or This for Paris?

At left is a Nazi frau wearing the regimented standard dress of the German Work Front. With the fall of Paris, the world's fashion capital, will uniform and coiffure remain as uninspired as this woman's? Or will the typical French elegance of Antoine's "cascade" coiffure (above) lay a softening hand on the beauty modes of the invaders? The opinions of Antoine, noted coiffure stylist, on this question, appear on this page.

Fun's Fun, but Editor Balks at Monkey's Making Home in Hair

New York, June 25.

ELITA WILSON, the magazine editor, doesn't want a monkey in her home any more. In fact, she dislikes monkeys with an intensity which amounts practically to loathing. She doesn't crave any part of monkeys at all. And all because of the monkey Vernon MacFarlane gave her.

ALICE HUGHES

Mac is decorator, specializing in cafes and bars, and when he had finished doing the monkey bar at the Elysee Hotel, it was opened with the help of a shower of live monkeys, as a gag. He had one left over, and as I get it, he presented it to Elita, who took it home and kept it in a cage for a few days. The monk's name was, and is, Rufus. Soon she began to let Rufe out to ramble the apartment. On the fatal morning that gave the editor this terrific monk-phobia she let him out while she was dressing to go to business. Whereupon this simian fiend leaped upon her shoulders and grabbed her hair with his front fists, and wouldn't let go.

***

A pretty mess of pickles that was! Elita, living alone, had no one to aid her, and the more she tried to haul Rufus out of her thatch, the more certain it was that most of her hair would come with him. She managed to get dressed, all right, but she didn't feel like going out with a monkey in her hair. After brief hysteria passed, Elita began to figure.

***

She tried to tempt the brute off with an apple, and then with a banana, but it was no go. At last, in desperation, she offered him a handful of uncooked wax beans, and for some reason Rufe went for those with a leap. Once free, Elita bolted herself in the bedroom and buzzed MacFarlane to come get the beast.

Foreign Singers to Be Scarce at Met's New Season

And that's why Elita doesn't go for our simian friends any more—and can you blame her?

***

Prettiest name of the week—Melinda Marling, local girl who got married in London. . . . Two proprietors of small dress shops here have just been fined $50 apiece for advertising rayon articles as genuine silk.

***

Though its season is still far off, our Met Opera is worrying about its foreign roster. It is certain that the company will be nearer all-American than ever in its history. Director Eddie Johnson says he is sure of only three Italian larks—Martinelli, Bruna Castagna and Ezio Pinza. Of the magnificent Wagnerian section, its two brightest stars, Flagstad and Melchoir, are Norwegian and Danish. Or will national feeling turn on the masterpieces of Wagner and Verdi and Puccini? . . .

Your Figure, Madame

Milwaukee Girl Had To Give Up One Because It Was Too Strenuous

By Ida Jean Kain

THE OTHER day, Miss Dorothy Kilgallen, who writes a Broadway column that covers everything from the latest Reno schism to the latest stitch in knitting, came out with the incidental information that Hildegarde—the lovely Milwaukee girl who made good as a Fifth avenue singer and entertainer—had been teaching some exercises to a knitting class down at one of the big department stores.

It seems that Hildegarde had been knitting incognito, but that the other ladies in the class kept admiring her beautiful figure until finally they came right out and asked how in the world she kept so slim, knitting and sitting being the detriments they are! So she up and showed them three exercises which, she claimed, took three minutes and which—she guaranteed this—would keep any woman slimmed down to a sylph. She said she'd had to cut out one exercise because th routine was so strenuous!

Do Them Vigorously

Well, that kind of story just doesn't seem plausible and it occurred to me that somebody was imagining things . . . but I take it all back and apologize all around! If any of you will do the three exercises Hildegarde showed me, and do them as accurately and as vigorously, you, too, can have a 25-inch waistline. And if you're the same build, 5 feet 7½ inches tall and weigh only 126 pounds, you might also have a 34-inch bust and a 34½-inch hipline!

Here are the three exercises.

1. POSITION: Standing erect and stretched tall without hunching the shoulders, feet planted about 18 inches apart, hands on hips.

MOVEMENT: Rotate the hips and waist. Keep the legs straight, tummy pulled up, hips tucked under, chin level, and really rotate, away over to one side, around, and away over to the other. Keep that up for a full minute.

Relax, Then Carry On

2. POSITION: Stand with feet wide apart and parallel and hands down at the side. Still keep tummy up, hips under.

MOVEMENT: As if you were rushing to save your child from a fire, whirl down and touch the right hand to the floor at the far side of the left foot, then stand erect and whirl down to the right, touching left hand to far side of right foot. And keep that up for a full minute.

3. POSITION: Stand erect, with tummy pulled up, hips tucked under—this gets monotonous, but if you don't do the exercise right, don't bother doing them at all!

MOVEMENT: Keeping the hips tucked under, very slowly lower the trunk until the hands touch the floor in front of the toes. You should have the slim, streamlined silhouette of a greyhound when you do this. Then, very slowly, raise the trunk to upright position again, hands stretching high overhead of continuation of a stretch originating at the hips. Let the hands come down to the sides, relax, and repeat, 20 times.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Care of Fingernails

IF YOUR fingernails are brittle and flaky, don't jump to the conclusion that the fault lies in the nail preparation you are using. First check your diet. A lack of calcium and minerals often causes the nails to break easily.

Milk, cheese, orange or grapefruit juice and leafy green vegetables supply the nourishment needed by nails to keep them smooth and flexible. Nervousness and great mental strain are other factors that contribute to brittle nails.

External conditions also affect the nails. Filing cabinets, typewriters and papers often scar the nail tissues. So simple a gesture as tucking a bobby-pin into your hair or opening a compact may easily start a flaky nail. The nails grow in layers and every time you catch them in this manner you are likely to remove a layer at the tip of the fingers. Be careful about the little things that start the nails to breaking.

Nightly use of a nail cream or oil will not only help to lubricate the surface, but the massaging action around the nail base and cuticle will bring nourishing blood up to the nails.

Handmade Rugs Brighten Home

And a joy to see a lovely design to take shape beneath your fingers. It's made with simple French knots—the turquoise blue scallops bordering the ivory center, the bouquet of yellow and pink flowers tied with a bow of light blue.

The actual size of the rug is 22½ by 34 inches. For the pattern, fold in fourths a piece of wrapping paper, 22½ by 34 inches, draw on it the fourth of an oval and cut along this line.

Now, after spreading out this paper pattern, lay it on a piece of burlap 27 by 38 inches and draw around it with a pencil. With a small plate or saucer, draw on the burlap 14 scallops for the border, sketch in the bouquet and, last, ink over all pencilled lines.

For the French knots, bring needle threaded with candlewick yarn through to right side of burlap. Holding yarn down with left thumb, twist needle point three times around yarn. Slide twists down near eye of needle, pulling them fairly tight, and push needle through burlap close to place it was brought out.

To finish your rug, stitch a strip of bias tape around the oval outline and turn back, with any surplus material. Then whip denim or other backing to tape.

Make other fascinating rugs, too—a pretty hooked rug from old garments, a handsome Oriental style rug of yarn.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Their Marriage Plans Thwarted, Youngsters Become Pessimistic, Antagonistic and Indiscreet; Girl Asks Explanation of Boy's Growing Indifference

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 18 years old, and for several years I have been going with a boy who is now 21. We have been engaged for 18 months. One night recently I surrendered to him, in a moment of weakness. I have realized my mistake and almost hate myself for it. I am determined never to repeat the mistake, no matter what the occasion; and this determination has led the boy to think I no longer love him. At least, that is his accusation.

We had planned to be married this month, but decided to postpone the wedding for financial reasons. However, we expect to marry as soon as our funds will permit. My fiance is inclined to be pessimistic and for some time has been obsessed with the idea that something will come between us. And while I am generally optimistic, I, too, have changed lately, and am possessed with the same notion. This fear has both of us in such a state that we are continually quarreling.

For the past two years, my work has prevented my going out much. It is lonely here, and more so recently, since my fiance has been breaking dates continuously for no reason at all, apparently. If it were impossible for him to come, I would think nothing of it. But most of the time he is in my town (he lives elsewhere) when he calls to break the date. I have never known him to break a date with me in order to go out with another girl. Generally, he goes alone to the movies or rides around with other boys.

In your opinion, does this mean that he is losing interest in me? He says he still loves me. In case you think he is losing interest, what do you advise me to do?

WORRIED.

Hope Deferred Corrodes the Spirit

DEAR WORRIED: The average romantic (or courting) relationship is always, to some extent, a tug-o'-war—until it results in marriage or expires of indifference. When a man and woman are significantly attracted, a certain emotional tension is inevitable and even desirable. It is desirable because it sustains interest at a high pitch, gives each "glamour" in the other's eyes, deepens their mental and social feeling of kinship and strengthens the conviction that each was providentially created to complement the other.

Yet, given the avowed intent to marry, and a set of circumstances which continue indefinitely to obstruct that plan, the tension can become keyed too high for the safety or profit of adolescent sweethearts or emotionally unstable persons of any age. Subjected on the one hand to the emotional provocation of continuous association, and on the other hand to the desolating sense of hopeless social frustration, the more dynamically attracted couple is apt either to throw discretion to the winds or else turn on each other in bitter quarreling—just as happened in your case.

And if marriage cannot be quickly negotiated once this ugly situation begins to develop, it is likely that the relationship is entering its death throes—so far as the preservation of its initial spiritual essence is concerned. As you poignantly realize, it was a grievous mistake to have "surrendered"—yet I daresay the mistake was motivated more by the boy's selfishness and your generosity than by any tendency of yours toward moral laxity. This seems indicated by your subsequent staunch determination to prevent a similar mistake in the future, regardless of "occasion."

It is problematic whether the boy is "losing interest" in you. Under happier circumstances, you might be as attractive to him as ever. However, it is safe to say that the association, at its present impasse, has become a source more of vexation than of uplift to him. He cannot marry you, as yet; nor can he persuade you to the mean compromise of becoming his paramour; nor, having once possessed you, can he be content with a morally restrained sentimental exchange (although this is to his damning discredit).

Because, to his limited view and willful type, the relationship as it currently stands represents to him an arena of frustration, he chooses to turn his back on it for the most part. And I daresay that he hopes, in so doing, to take petty revenge upon you for hardily (if belatedly) defending your principles against his unworthy solicitations and irrational, unjust reproaches.

Under the circumstances, and considering his reaction, I think it advisable for you to see him as little as possible; and to ward off loneliness by participating in group activities—of neighborhood, church or club sort. If there is very good reason to believe you might get married later this summer, you might allow the engagement to continue—although, frankly, you are about five years too young to be seriously considering marriage. But if there is evidence to indicate that you must wait indefinitely, then you certainly should cancel the pledge and wash your hands of him completely.

If you give him much more rope, in the way of sufferance, he is going to do the vanishing act, eventually; whereas, if you step out first, you will automatically recapture most of the standing you have lost in his eyes through humoring him too much, for too long.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Theme Prints Are in Favor With Film Stars

Hollywood—No girl need meet her clothes twin walking down the street if she chooses one of the glamorous new summer prints, each design of which is different. This is the opinion of Rosalind Russell, star of "No Time for Comedy," who adores such "occasion" prints as a "fifty" design meant only for the races. Rosalind wears this frock, showing small galloping brown horses straining to a finish printed on soft beige crepe ground, under a brown silk corduroy swagger with matching turban.

Washington Cavalcade

By Hope Ridings Miller

SUMMER EXODUS: With half of Washington in Philadelphia and scores of other residents off to vacation resorts, this town's as dead as a campaign promise after election day. Never saw anything like it. Popular restaurants and cocktail spots that were crowded a week ago are now either deserted or filled with tourists; and even those gayly informal home get-togethers that once enlivened the summertime calendar are so few and far between these days that they are scarcely noticed.

Can't blame the weather. For Washington, this June is as summer resortish as any I've ever noted. Maybe the war has blitzkrieged the Capital whirl at last, and maybe the town will pick up a little speed when the Philadelphia convention is over. Truth is, though, most of our notables attending these will go directly on to vacation locales. Congress, we shall have with us a while longer, but most wives of Senators and Representatives will travel homeward by July 1.

WEDDING NOTES: A marriage of wide interest here will take place in Woods Hole, Mass., on July 6, when Miss Camilla Riggs becomes the bride of John Wister Meigs, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Browning Meigs, of Washington.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrason Riggs, jr., of 61 East Ninetieth street, New York City. She is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George W. Riggs, of New York, and Dr. and Mrs. Jerome Henry Kidder, of Washington. Graduating from Bryn Mawr College this month, Miss Riggs went directly to Woods Hole to join her parents at their summer home. The wedding will take place at the Church of the Messiah and will be followed by a reception at the Riggs home.

Dr. and Mrs. Meigs, who also have a summer place at Woods Hole, are already there for the season and will not return to Washington until September. Their son was graduated from Sidwell Friends School, and from Princeton and Harvard. He is a grandson of the late Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Vincent Meigs and the late Mr. and Mrs. John Wister, of Philadelphia.

HERE AND THERE: Expected in Washington soon are Lord and Lady Melchett, of London, England, who arrived in Canada from Europe last week and are now at the Ambassador Hotel in New York. Lord Melchett is a director of the Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., and of Barclay's Bank, as well as a number of other concerns. A former member of Parliament, he is also a trustee of the Imperial War Museum. Lady Melchett is the former Amy Gwen, daughter of the late Edward J. Wilson, of Parktown, Johannesburg . . . Senator and Mrs. William H. King and their son, David, have returned to Washington after a brief visit with Dr. and Mrs. Huron Lawson at their summer home, Bear Den Lodge, at Bluemont, Va. . . . Mrs. William Howard Taft, who has been the guest of her son-in-law and Daughter, Prof. and Mrs. Frederick Manning, at Bryn Mawr, Pa., since closing her home here, is now in Philadelphia for the convention. She will leave early next week for her summer home at Murray Bay, Canada. . . . Col. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, and Miss Hildreth Dunn, who are at their summer home, Gramercy Farm, Warm Springs, Va., for the summer, have as their guest for a short timee Miss Camilla Edge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edge. Mildreth and Camilla were classmates at St. Timothy's last year. The other two Dunn daughters, Mildred and Lanier, are also with their parents for the summer.

Sisters in Service Set

Adding their share of interest to the local social scene are the Misses Eleanor and Ruth Dailey, daughters of Maj. and Mrs. Raymond E. Dailey. Their father, recently stationed in Brooklyn, will be on dufy at Fort Myer after June 28

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

RAYMOND TARTIERE, of Middleburg, is perhaps the happiest person in the hunt country today.

For several months he had not heard from his son, Jack Tartiere, an officer in the Coldstream Guards. Mr. Tartiere had volunteered for Norway because there was no action on the front. Yesterday his father received a cable from him, sent from "somewhere in the north of England." He is there with all the other French boys who came back from Norway to England and said, "We are sticking to England and are going to fight with the English and are prepared to carry on."

JACK TARTIERE has been awarded the French Croix de Guerre, and the English Military Cross, and naturally his father is very proud of him. He was married in France about a year ago to the former Miss Drue Layton, an American. She is somewhere on the other side.

Raymond Tartiere was in the last World War and was awarded the Military Cross just about 25 years ago, almost to a day. He is so proud of the fact that his son is fighting on with the English and yesterday he and Mrs. Tartiere—Jack's stepmother—held an informal reception for the many friends who called to learn details of the cable. The Tartieres occupy Boxwood, home of the late Brig. Gen. William Mitchell.

AN ATTRACTIVE American refugee is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Hugh Nelson, at her home, Long Branch, in Clarke County near Millwood. She is Miss Page Huidekoper, who arrived on the liner Washington, and was met by her mother, Mrs. Prescott Huidekoper, of Baltimore, and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Rathborne, of Long Island.

Miss Huidekoper has been in London for two years as secretary to Ambassador Kennedy. She sailed from Ireland, bringing back a black kitten which she has named Winston Churchill. Miss Huidekoper motored to Washington yesterday for luncheon and shopping and a call on Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, whom she saw much of when they were in London last year. Mr. and Mrs. Rathborne will come to Virginia shortly for a family reunion. Page will spend the summer there.

MISS FANNY NELSON LYON, of Purcellville, is in Baltimore this week to attend the many parties in honor of her cousin, Miss Helen Gill Lyon, and Carroll Van Ness, jr., who will be married Saturday at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Garrison Forest, Md.

Miss Fanny Lyon will be a bridesmaid and little Frances Moncure Hall, daughter of the James Lyons Hall, and the bride's cousin, will serve as flower girl.

ERNEST REDMON, of Middleburg, sold two of his show horses yesterday to Ray Shoemaker, of Harrisburg, Pa., who saw them at the recent Upperville horse show and "couldn't get them off his mind." One is a lovely chestnut filly 2-year-old named St. Mary and the other a bay yearling named Good News.

Miss Mary Nelson, Edward MacDonald Are Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Prosser Nelson, of Halltown, W. Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Ethlyn Nelson, to Edward Leavell MacDonald jr., of Charles Town, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. MacDonald, of Lexington, Ky. The wedding will take place later in the summer.

The future bride is a graduate of St. Hilda's Hall, Charles Town, and of Stratford College, Danville, Va. She is related to the Randolph, Carter and Peyton families, of Virginia.

Mr. MacDonald, a grandson of Maj. Edward H. MacDonald, of Media, Jefferson County, W. Va., is a descendant of Col. Angus MacDonald, of Winchester, and related to the McGuire and Yates families of Virginia and the Aglionby family of England. He is a graduate of the Massie School, in Lexington, Ky., and the University of Virginia, where he belonged to Delta Tau Delta.

Peterses Return From Visiting Relative in N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Peters have returned from a visit with an aunt of Mrs. Peters at Biltmore, N. C. While there they attended the many parties given for Princess Dolly Obolensky and David Morgan, who were married in Asheville last week. The bridegroom is a brother of Mrs. Abell Smith, the former Miss Peggy Morgan who made her home here for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Peters will motor to Baltimore to attend the wedding on Saturday of Miss Helen Lyon to Carroll Van Ness. Mrs. Peters hopes to go to Bar Harbor later in the season.

Friends of France Will Hold Sale

The American Friends of France will hold a rummage sale tomorrow at their headquarters, the old Magruder building, at Eighteenth and M streets northwest.

Mrs. Mondell Gregg is in charge of the sale, assisted by a committee which includes Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mrs. Harold Loomis, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. Helen Kokoyannis, Mrs. Moran McConihe and Mrs. Sidney Lee.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

THE FORMER Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring have just become the proud owners of a shiny, new station wagon. To them it is a modern "covered wagon" and into it they pile their three children and luggage and head West this week. The Woodrings' traveling slogan will be "Kansas or bust," but, as they are planning a leisurely trip, one trusts that it will not be the latter.

The Woodrings have bought a farm in Kansas near Lecompton. There is an old farmhouse and farm buildings which they will restore and furnish and the result should be very fine under the artistic, guiding hand of Mrs. Woodring. While the work is in progress the Woodring family will live on another farm, which they have rented, near Topeka.

LECOMPTON, which will be the Woodrings' home postoffice once they are settled, is a little town of 250 people. It has an interesting history dating back to the time when Kansas was a Territory and Lecompton was its capital. The old square frame building which was the Capitol still stands in the main street, and Mr. Woodring has plans afoot for acquiring it. He will give it to the State of Kansas for restoration and preservation as a memorial of the State's history.

MRS. ANTHONY COLEBY has returned from Cape Cod to spend a few days with Commander Coleby at their house on Tracy place. During her absence the house which the Colebys and the Rumbolds share at Marion will be turned over to the latter while Mr. Rumbold takes a well-earned short rest with his family.

Cape Cod is teeming with Washington people this summer, even more than usual. Also at Marion are Mme. Weiser—Col. Weiser is air attache of the French Embassy—Baroness Baeyens, whose husband is also of the same embassy, and the Chauncey Parkers.

ANOTHER WASHINGTONIAN established on the Cape for the summer is Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, who, with her two little boys, has a most attractive house at Centerville. The house is in a pine woods overlooking the water and is within easy visiting distance of Washington friends. Mrs. Dewey expects to have Prince and Princess Hohenlohe as house guests later in the season.

Not far away at Nonquit is Mrs. Hoyer Millar with her children, and also her mother, Mme. van Swinderen. The latter is staying with the Carroll Glovers and having a real family reunion, as Carroll Glover is her brother.

Mrs. David Barry is also a summer resident of Nonquit, which is an ideal place for the Barry children. The post-debutante daughter of the house, pretty Alice Barry, joined the rest of the family the first of the week.

THE ROLAND HARRIMANS are giving a gay house party, beginning this coming Friday, at their home at Arden, on the Hudson. The entertaining is in honor of the Harrimans' daughter, Phyllis, who is a number of friends among the younger set in Washington. Two pretty debutantes of the current Washington crop, Anne Bryan and Peggy Lansdowne, are going up for the house party as is Bobby Blair, elder son of Mrs. Arthur Krock.

AT A SMALL cocktail party in Georgetown yesterday I saw Mrs. Chase Donaldson, who said that she is off next Monday to spend the fourth of July with her mother at Rehoboth Beach. After a week at the Delaware resort Mrs. Donaldson will take her children out West for the remainder of the summer.

At the same gathering Chase Donaldson, jr., recently home from his studies at St. Paul's School, was having a glass of iced tea in the garden with a school pal. One of them was reminded of the case of a third St. Paul's boy to whom tragedy had brought success and in the following manner.

The lad in question fancies himself as a poet and had submitted a sonnet which he had composed, and which was dear to his heart, to the school magazine for publication. Now comes the tragedy. The author overheard two of the magazine's editors discussing his poetic effort. They said it was "full of cliches and applesauce."

The accidental eaves-dropper bard was so crushed by what he heard that he retired to his room and spent the night pouring out his soul in a verse entitled "Dejection." This heart-throb was accepted by the same editors and published with much eclat, the happy ending to tragedy.

Party Honors Miss Eustis And Her Fiance

Miss Amonett Gordon Serves Cocktails At Parents' Home

Miss Amonett Gordon gave a cocktail party yesterday in honor of Miss Jane Eustis and George Wheeler, who will be married Saturday. Their wedding is being preceded by a party—sometimes two—a day.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. Fairfax Randolph, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hight, Thomas Turner, Mr. and Mrs. A. Y. R. Garnett, jr., James Garnett, the Misses Sylvia and Louise Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Arnold, Miss Jane Davis, Miss Nancy Hoskinson, Miss Lila Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich Dudley, jr., Harold Clagett, Calvert Bowie, Randall Hagner and Miss Aileen Harris, who will be maid of honor.

Also Laidler Mackall, Alex Hagner, John and Frank Hamilton, John English, Harrison Brand, Leonard Nicholson, Miss Nancy Lee Masten, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Miss Yolanda Alfaro, Thomas Moorhead, Tinsley Adams, Ord Preston, Grant Boss and Britten Brown.

Son Is Born To Mrs. Quinn

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Quinn are receiving congratulatoins on the birth of a son, Joseph C. Quinn, jr., on Monday at Columbia Hospital.

Mrs. Quinn is the former Miss Phyllis Hight, daughter of Mrs. Frank Hight and the late Mr. Hight. Her mother has come from her home in Fitchburg, Mass., to spend a month with her.

Miss Bunker Here To Visit Parkers

Miss Adele Bunker arrived in Washington yesterday from New York to visit Miss Mary Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Parker.

Widely known in Washington, Miss Bunker is the daughter of Signora Rosso, wife of the Italian Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

I'VE JUST COME back from Philadelphia with aching feet, a "Fan With Van" cardboard fan, a Taft carnation, a "Win With Willkie" pin, a Vermont State badge, and memories of organs, bands, Klieg lights and tired women slumped in chairs beside potted palms all over the first floor of the Bellevue Stratford Hotel.

So great is Republican cordiality that a visitor to the convention finds herself swept into enormous teas with only the vaguest idea who the hostess is. Badges are thrust at her from every side. Looking innocently in on Willkie headquarters, I was given a friendly push by two enthusiastic young greeters and told to "Step right in, he'll be there in just a minute."

So I ended up in the living room of the Willkie suite with a delegation from Nebraska. Mr. Willkie, who had an appointment to see them, started off with "I owe a lot to Iowa. I'm always glad to see my Iowa friends." He recovered himself when someone shouted, "This is Nebraska."

MILLING AROUND in the Bellevue Stratford lobby just before luncheon were Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Robert Woods Bliss and Mrs. Frederick Brooke. Mrs. John Pratt, former Representative from New York, was smart in a navy blue dress with white figures and a matching hat with a white visor.

Mrs. Bacon was here, there and everywhere all day long. Senator Austin lunched off a lettuce leaf and a piece of cheese with his son, Warren Austin jr., of Burlington, Vt., and several friends. The Senator wore a Taft ribbon (he will second the nomination), and his son laughingly pulled a "Win With Wilkie" button out of his pocket. Mr. Austin said that when Dewey spoke in Burlington last week the crowd was wild about him and every Vermonter was for Dewey; the very next day, all had switched to Wilkie.

AT CONVENTION HALL, packed for Gov. Stassen's keynote speech, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg was wandering around an hour before the talk was scheduled. She wore a silver fox cape over her black dress and a flower turban. Accompanying her were two old friends from Michigan. The Senator, of course, stayed home; candidates aren't supposed to appear on the convention floor.

Young Hamilton Fish, jr., sat with his parents at the keynote meeting and took movies of the scene. Nearby were the Brazilian Ambassador and Senora de Martins, the latter in a black street-length dress and a little black skull cap with a pink rose atop. They were the only diplomats I saw—though the Polish envoy, Count Potocki, boarded a late train from Philadelphia that evening.

The top journalists of the country crowded the press section. Dorothy Thompson, with a black snood over her hair, chatted with Mrs. Ogden Reid.

"MRS. TAFT OUGHT to be President," I heard a woman say at the super-colossal tea given for her by Mrs. Katherine Kennedy Brown and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. Mrs. Taft shook hands as enthusiastically with the three hundredth guest as with the first. She knew most of them by name and had a lot to say to all. She topped off her simple green and white print with a flower hat and a Taft carnation and ribbon. Refreshments were red and white peppermints and fruit punch. Pretty young assistants approached guests resting on sofas to say, "Have you met Mrs. Taft yet?"

• • • •

SO GREAT WAS the demand for tickets to Convention Hall that on Sunday night the office of Henry Fletcher was broken into and all his pasteboards stolen. A political bigshot from the West, I'm told, who is dying to contribute several thousand dollars to the G. O. P., is having a hard time wangling an extra ticket.

Harold Mason, Vermonter and secretary of the national committee, designed the badges for his delegation and had them made at his own expense. In his office he carefully unlocked a cupboard and showed me the gavel, engraved in silver, which was to be presented to Chairman Joseph Martin the next day.

Bettie Rosenthal And C. B. Stein Are Married

Rabbi Gerstenfeld Officiates; Couple On Trip to Canada

The wedding of Miss Bettie Annette Rosenthal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar A. Rosenthal, of the Westchester Apartments, and Colman Bres Stein, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Stein, of Washington, took place at 12:30 p. m. yesterday in the ballroom of the Mayflower. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld before an improvised altar of palms in an arbor of white calla lilies flanked by standards of white gladioli and larkspur.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Molyneux model of white satin with a heart-shaped neckline and a train. Her long veil was caught with a coronet of rose point lace and she carried a trailing bouquet of white English stepheno and lilies of the valley with a center of trailing orchids.

Mrs. Otis Springs Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. Otis Springs, of Washington, was matron of honor, wearing hyacinth blue mousseline de soie with bowknot insets of pink lace and a picture hat to match trimmed with pink streamers. She carried an arm bouquet of blue delphiniums and pink roses. Miss Marjorie Rosenthal, who was maid of honor for her sister, was attired in similar fashion. Another sister, Miss Sally Rosenthal, who was flower girl, wore long pink net and a hat of natural straw trimmed with hyacinth blue flowers and carried a basket of pink roses and forget-me-nots. Seymour Mintz, of Washington, was best man.

Reception Follows At Mayflower

A reception in the Chinese room of the Mayflower followed the ceremony, after which the couple left for a month's trip to Canada. For her going-away costume, the bride wore a pale blue crepe costume with a long coat and benedictine trimming. Her off-the-face felt hat was of matching shade. Upon their return they will live at the Westchester.

Sewing Machines Hum as New Red Cross Unit Goes to Work

Georgetown Group Is Directed By Mrs. Peter

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The hum of sewing machines—40 of them—has replaced the sound of music and dancing in Linthicum Hall, 3116 O street, Georgetown. Under the leadership of Mrs. Walter Peter, whose husband is chairman of the board of trustees for the building, the Georgetown Auxiliary to the D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross has been organized with headquarters there.

In the big ballroom, where she learned to dance as a little girl, Mrs. Peter has set up equipment where women are now learning to make surgical dressings and clothing for the people of war-torn Europe. The 40 sewing machines are lined along the east side of the room, which is larger than the workroom of the D. C. Red Cross Chapter House.

Eight long surgical dressings tables are on the west side and will accommodate 72 workers at a time. The room, with eight large windows on each side is cool and airy and so large there is no crowding nor confusion as the different kinds of work go on.

In an adjoining room, is the administrative office where yarn and garments for home work are issued.

Although the Georgetown Auxiliary was started only a week ago, many groups already are working there. Monday night Junior League members under the direction of Miss Lucy Woolley worked from 7:30 to 9:30, hours during which the rooms will be open every Monday evening. They are also open daily from 9:30 to 4:30 except Saturdays when they close at 10 p. m.

Women of St. John's Church, Washington, work on Tuesdays; members of one of the P. E. O. chapters and of St. John's Church, Georgetown, on Wednesday mornings; the Georgetown Convent Alumnae, Thursday mornings; Christ Church, Georgetown, Friday afternoons and Georgetown Presbyterian Church women expect to work all day on Tuesdays, bringing their lunch.

Mrs. Barton K. Yont is giving instruction in the making of surgical dressings. Mrs. Lillian Hadley is in charge of the garment production; Mrs. T. Blackwell Smith, the knitting; Mrs. Sterling Eagleton, of the staff work, and Mrs. J. B. Gordon is assisting generally.

Associated with Mrs. Peter in starting the auxiliary were Mrs. S. Percy Thompson, Miss Katharine Dougal, Mrs. Lloyd Shippen and Mrs. James Young.

Any women in the Georgetown section of the city who desire to assist with Red Cross work will be welcome at the Linthicum Hall work rooms. The groups now working there are only a start, says Mrs. Peter, who expects within a few days to have volunteers enough to keep every machine busy.

It is appropriate, she pointed out, that old Linthicum Hall should be the center for such war relief work. It was built in 1887 by trustees under the will of the noted Georgetown philanthropist, Edward Magruder Linthicum, who in 1889 founded the Linthicum Institute, a night school for white boys of that section. It has been the center of philanthropic and social life of the community since. The Georgetown Assembly has met there for many years and countless Georgetown residents, like Mrs. Peter, can look back half a century or more and recall attending their first dancing class in the ball room which now serves as the Red Cross headquarters.

New Maryland Chapter For Gamma Phi Beta

More than 500 persons yesterday afternoon attended the Red Cross war relief benefit sponsored at the Manor Club by the Silver Spring Branch of the Montgomery County Chapter. The total proceeds of the affair are expected to amount to $650.

Luncheon was followed by bridge and bingo for which tables were arranged in the clubhouse and on the terrace. At 4 o'clock an international auction was held of articles which had been given by the embassies and legations of the Allies. The auction was conducted by Benjamin S. Bell, of the Washington Art Gallery, and, instead of regular bidding, each person contributed the amount of the raise he offered. This brought high prices for some of the small articles, among them a pair of Dutch dolls with little wooden shoes, given by the Minister of the Netherlands, which had attracted several doll collectors.

Mrs. Henry E. Adams, of Silver Spring, was the final bidder for the first article sold, a handsome wooden tea caddy, given by Leander McCormick-Goodhart, attache of the British Embassy. It dated from 1800 and had been in his family since then. This piece brought more than $40.

The three Girl Scout troops of Silver Spring sold cake and candy which also added to the proceeds.

Mrs. James Wilson, chairman of the war relief campaign, was in charge of general arrangements for the auction. Among those who attended were Mrs. F. Eliot Middleton, chairman of the Montgomery County Chapter of the Red Cross; Maj. L. L. Dye, chairman of war relief for the chapter; Mrs. Joseph B. Matre, chairman of the Silver Spring branch, and Mrs. Roger Whiteford, chairman of the Chevy Chase branch.

Catholic Alumnae Meet

The Washington Circle of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae met last night at the Mayflower Hotel to discuss the progress of the Red Cross knitting the members are now doing and initiate plans for a war-relief benefit to be given in the autumn. Mrs. John Riley is chairman of the circle, which includes in its membership graduates of Roman Catholic colleges in other cities.

Kappa Beta Pi Alumnae to Install Officers at Party

Eta Alumnae Chapter of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority, will install officers at a garden part yto be held at the home of Mrs. Clare T. Willison, 4767 Twenty-fourth street North, Arlington, on Saturday afternoon from 4 to 7.

Miss Carolyn Just, the new province dean, and the members of the auxiliary chapter, composed of husbands, brothers and friends of the alumnae members, will be guests at the garden party.

Gamma Phi Beta Delegates Hold 'Old Virginny' Banquet

Skits Are Presented After Dinner; Nominating Committee to Offer Slate Today and Election Will Follow

Members of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority, holding their national convention at the Wardman Park Hotel, were entertained with skits following their "Old Virginny" banquet last night, while they looked forward to the serious business of electing officers today.

The nominating committee headed by Mrs. Samuel Thomson, of Baltimore, will report this afternoon and election will take place immediately following. On the committee with Mrs. Thomson are representatives of each of the provinces. Mrs. Howard Pope, of Montreal; Mrs James Soper, Chicago; Miss Dorothy Jennings, St. Louis; Mrs. Cecil Burnham, Minneapolis; Mrs. Ben Payne, Dallas; Mrs. Roy Wood, Portland, Oreg.; Mrs. W. E. Roodhouse, Berkeley, Calif., Miss Mary McCurley, Baltimore.

There has been little convention gossip as to the likely successor to Mrs. William Dehn, grand president. It is expected that the slate presented will be elected without opposition but no hint has come about the choice of the nominating committee, which meets this morning.

The "Old Virginny" dinner last night was a cotton-dress party like the luncheon Monday. The menu included peanut soup nad Virginia baked ham, as well as candied sweet potatoes and other Southern dishes. A feature of the program, in addition to the skits, was the group of songs by the celebrated Hampton Institute Quartet.

Four skits were presented. Zeta Chapter, of Goucher, of which Janet Root is president, entertained with a melodrama, "The Fatal Necklace." Alpha Chapter, of Syracuse, gave a take-off on the Southern girls attending the convention. "We just can't get used to people who say you all'," the New Yorkers explained.

Alpha Chi Chapter, of William and Mary College, presented "Little Nell" and the Nashville Alumnae, "Famous Women From History—Gamma Phi Beta."

A Panhellenic round-table was conducted yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Harold Hartman, of Seattle, who urged closer interfraternity cooperation to serve a larger college population.

Mrs. Hartman advocated as a means to this end the limiting of the size of chapters on the many college campuses in the United States and Canada. She also emphasized the need for strengthening Panhellenic feeling through more active city and college Panhellenic organizations.

There was also a round-table on publicity conducted by Mrs. Lester M. White.

The convention newspaper, The Crescent Moon, which is being issued daily, containing pictures, general laws of the convention and the delegates, is edited by Miss Alice E. Thomsen, who was graduated from Syracuse University, in 1939, and now secretary to the dean of the School of Journalism there. Dr. Winifred Willard is associate editor, Miss Helen Bliss, of this city, in charge of printing, and the reporters are: Peggy Whitley, of Washington; Elizabeth Roark, Nashville; Eleanor Connor, Baltimore, and Jean Blair, Grand Forks, N. Dak.

Tonight the climax of the convention will be the annual banquet at which three of the sorority's most distinguished members will entertain. They are Jean Dickenson, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who arrived late last night; Miss Grace Weymer, head of the harp department at Syracuse University, and Alice Ringling Coerper, of Milwaukee, monologuist.

The local alumnae chapter is hostess, with Mrs. Paul C. Whitney, president, and Mrs. H. A. Mathieson, acting as toastmistresses.

This morning Mrs. R. E. Fitzgerald, of Wauwatosa, will preside at the round table session on expansion of the sorority, and the methods and policy this program will adopt. At 10 o'clock both the active college chapters and the alumnae chapters will go into separate meetings, to discuss their cultural programs for the coming year, their musical endeavors, and other projects pertinent to membership in both groups. Tonight's carnation banquet is formal and final event on the schedule.

Arts Club Has Opera Program After an Out-of-Doors Dinner

Two-Act Version of 'Mirielle,' an Early Gounod Work, Begins Presentation by Tuesday Evening Chorus of Mrs. Howard's Students

The Arts Club, giving appropriate emphasis to music, with Dr. Hans Kindler as its president, last night had an operatic program for its club dinner.

Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, president of the Friday Morning Music Club, and her sister, Miss Jean C. Stier, were hostesses for the dinner which was planned for the garden, with the program out-of-doors following it. All preparations were made in case of rain, however, to move both the party and program inside, where they could proceed uninterrupted.

The program, under the direction of Florence Howard (Mrs. Frank Howard) was presented by the Tuesday Evening Music Club, a chorus composed of her students. This group was assisted by Tatiana Gnoocheff Barton, and her dancers; Katherine Riggs Burcahrd, program annotator; Marjorie Davis and Dorothy Radde Emery, accompanists, and Alden Emery, jr., flutist.

The first part of the program comprised a variety of selections, and the second was a two-act version of "Mirielle," an early opera by Gounod. It was first given in Paris in 1864 and was produced in five acts at the Metropolitan Opera in New York in 1918 and 1919. Last season, Mrs. Howard saw it at the Opera Comique in Paris. It deals with peasant life in southern France and romances between the magnanarelles, who are cocoon gatherers, and the baniers, who are basket-weavers. The costumes last night were colorful and the music gay and tuneful.

Soloists in "Mireille" were Grace Holmes, Ina Holtzscheiter, Helen Perry, Selma Last, Elna Dotter, Eleanor Catron and Margaret Warthen.

The opening chorus of "The Bartered Bride" by Smetana, Bohemian composer, was the first number on the first part of the program. Solos were taken by Eleanor Brall and Myrtle Barnes. A group of gypsy dances by Miss Gnoocheff followed. The next number was a scene from "La Favorita" (Donizetti) with Frances Tucker in the role of Leonera. The chorus of priestesses from "Iphigenia in Aulis" (Gluck), followed and a group of flute solos, closed this section of the presentation.

Mrs. Byrnes and Miss Stier had in their party of guests at the dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Staley, Mr. and Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Burchard, the reader, and her husband, Russell Burchard, Miss Lucy Brickenstein, C. C. Cappell, Mme. D'Aulby, and Norman Frauenheim. Also at the head table were Mrs. Miriam B. Hilton and her guests, the Surgeon General of the Army and Mrs. James Magee Mr. and Mrs. Carl Droop, Mrs. Sallie Hunsaker, and Mr and Mrs. Emmett McGrann.

Eastern Star Fete Opens Tonight

The garden party and mart under auspices of the General Temple Auxiliary Board, order of the Eastern Star, opens tonight at the Temple property, 2600 Sixteenth street, and will continue tomorrow, Friday and Saturday.

In addition to the usual features of a garden party many unusual attractions are announced by Herbert S. Middlemiss, general chairman of the fete. Hot dinners will be served each afternoon from 4:30 until 7, with a complete change of menu daily. Outdoor dancing will be provided. Two programs will be held each evening, one at 7:30 and another at 9:30. Friday, Kiddies' Day, will be conducted in the afternoon and everything from a grab bag to a pony will be in evidence.

The officers of the General Temple Auxiliary Board are Miss Anne Guilford, president; Mrs. Elise Douglas, first vice president; Mrs. Carrie B. Batson, second vice president; Mrs. Hester Maschmeyer, secretary, and Herbert S. Middlemiss, treasurer. Mrs. Minnie E. Burdine is the present grand matron of the order, and Mr. Edward C. Steagall is grand patron.

Phi Delta Delta Picnic To Be Held Saturday

Members of the Phi Delta Delta alumnae and their husbands will enjoy a picnic at the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Sebree, on Cobb Island, Md., Saturday afternoon. This will be the last party of the season.

The members of the committee on arrangements for the outing are Miss N. Faye Woodward, chairman; Miss Clara N. Noyes, Miss Margaretta Campbell, Miss Elfie C. Carlson, Miss Margaret M. Kelly, Miss Mary C. Senart, Mrs. Samuel C. Nichols and Miss Bessie Phelan.

5th-Column Peril Could Have Been Averted, Says Mrs. Schelly

IF THE organized patriotic groups in this country had been given a fair hearing during the past 16 years—expression in the press and uncensored time on the radio—there would not now be a fifth column in this country needing a Congressional investigation.

This was the opinion expressed by Mrs. Percy Young Schelly, of Philadelphia, national president of the United States Daughters of 1812, Monday afternoon on a brief business visit to headquarters here. Mrs. Schelly declared the objective of her organization is to "make its members conscious of their tremendous responsibility as Americans."

"We don't exploit our ancestry," she said, "but it is a bond of blood and sacrifice that carries with it a solemn responsibility to preserve what our forefathers established."

She pointed out that eligibility for membership in the organization rested on having ancestors who served the United States from the time of the close of the American Revolution to the close of the War of 1812, which was the critical reconstruction period in this country.

MRS. PERCY Y. SCHELLY

The Daughters of 1812 put chief emphasis on national defense and patriotic education in their national program. Mrs. Schelly has chosen Mrs. Grace L. H. Brosseau, past president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, as national chairman of the committee on national defense. She has named Mrs. A. Lee Smiser, of Kansas City, Mo., as chairman on patriotic education.

The other national chairmanships, which will be announced in the July issue of the News-Letter, quarterly publication of the society, are distributed throughout the different sections of the country.

Mrs. Schelly was here to look after details of the News-Letter, of which she became editor with her election as national president.

FLORAL NOTE—Tonight the Gamma Phi Betas will close their convention with their annual carnation banquet. More than 500 carnations, the sorority flower, will be used in the decorations.

Saturday night, at the opening dinner of the conclave, which was addressed by Senator Millard Tydings, Mrs. Tydings and Mrs. Wilburn Cartwright, wife of Representative Cartwright, of Oklahoma, were initiated into the organization.

Policy of Neutrality, Better Understanding With Russia Likely

By the United Press

Istanbul (Wednesday), June 26.—ment to reorientate foreign policy A shakeup of the Turkish governtoward strict neutrality with a better understanding with Russia was forecast today in informed circles.

It was understood Premier Dr. Refik Saydam, Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu and Interior Minister Faik Oztrak would be removed because of pro-Allied sympathies.

Saracoglu was believed certain to go as his lack of sympathy with Russia has prevented Turkish-Russian understanding.

It was noteworthy that both Tass and Anatolie, the Soviet and Turkish news agencies, denied reports that Saracoglu was going to Moscow but said nothing about a Turkish delegation visiting the Russian capital. At the same time reports were published in the Bulgarian press that Soviet Premier Molotoff had requested ambassadors of Rumania and Turkey to inform their governments that the moment was opportune to start negotiations to solve outstanding problems.

Istanbul June 25.—Nuri el Said, foreign minister of Iraq, arrived at Ankara this morning for conversations with Turkish officials, presumably regarding the common attitude toward possible developments in the Near and Middle East.

There are two immediate problems in that region. The first is what is to become of Syria now that the Mittelhauser government has declared allegiance to the newly formed French committee in London, thus exposing Syria—long coveted by Italy—to Fascist attack. The second is what will be Iraq's attitude should Egypt formally declare war.

There is an increasing belief in Turkey that when war against England opens actively there will be a powerful Axies drive in the eastern Mediterranean aimed at cutting off Suez, as well as the overland and air routes of the north Arabian Peninsula; also to grab strategically placed harbors in hte rich oil districts of that region.

3 Nazi Planes Shot Down in Large-Scale Bombing of Britain

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), June 26.—At least three enemy planes were shot down today in southeastern Scotland where large numbers of bombs were dropped in an air raid that extended over most of England, Scotland and Wales.

British fighter planes swarmed up to meet the bombers, dogfights were seen high over the English countryside and antiaircraft guns blazed away along the coast.

The planes started before midnight, then kept coming, flight after flight, covering an area from southeastern England to far north in Scotland.

Fires started by incendiary bombs were extinguished quickly. Explosions were heard in midland and southwestern England.

Gunfire was heard in the southeast and northwest. Planes were heard high over Wales, but there were no immediate reports of bombing there.

Trade Bomb for Bomb

Copyright by New York Times

London, June 25.—Great Britain is obviously carrying out its threat to trade bomb for bomb with the German air force. The Air Ministry announced tonight that while Nazi raiders were over this country last night a large formation of British bombers successfully attacked military objectives in Holland and Germany, setting fire to a large airplane factory at Kassel, and scoring hits on airports, oil depots, and troop concentrations in the Ruhr district.

There is a great deal of evidence piling up here to indicate that these attacks are beginning to have some effect, too, not only on the production of stores, but upon the morale of the German people. For example, Germans who have always in the past relied upon antiaircraft fire to defend themselves against night raids, have now introduced fighter patrols which are using up the Reich's limited supply of gasoline, in order to try to intercept British bombers.

Despite these new precautions, however, the air ministry communique tonight states that all the British bombers returned safely from both the day and night raids of yesterday, though these raids were among the most extensive of the war.

An official checkup of this morning and last night's widespread German air raids over Britain, showed today that three people had been killed outright by exploding bombs, two elderly men had died from shock, and that two women were missing, while 20 persons were injured.

Authorities, however, withheld exact news concerning the extent of the damage, confining themselves to the statement that a number of bombs burst in the Midlands and the eastern counties but that most of them dropped on the open countryside, causing no serious harm. There were no casualties or damage in the London area which had an alarm lasting a considerable time.

The admiralty today increased by 10,000 tons its estimate of German mercantile loss since the outbreak of war, bringing the total up to June 23 to 847,000 tons.

Italian mercantile loss to the same date, according to the admiralty estimate, is 724,000 tons.

The British themselves up to June 16 lost ten vessels totaling 47,015 tons, this excluding the losses off Dunkirk.

The total British, Allied and neutral merchantmen lost during that week comprised 24 vessels, of 101,730 tons—apparently excluding the loss of those vessels engaged in the evacuation work, which British do not list in their own total. It is admitted that Allied losses were eight vessels, totaling 31,574 tons, and six neutrals totaling 23,170 tons.

50 Italian Planes Destroyed

London, June 25 (AP).—Fifty Italian warplanes have been destroyed by British raiders in ten days of African fighting, a British statement said tonight.

A Royal Air Force communique issued at Cairo said today British bombers had attacked the Italian Birel Boggi military encampment in the western desert yesterday.

"In a raid on the Asmara airdrome, considerable damage was done," said the communique.

"Our Blenheims raided the Diredawa airdrome. One of our aircraft failed to return."

Italy Claims Sub Victory

Rome, July 25 (AP).—Italy's high command, today reported "one of our submarines has sunk an enemy steamer of 8,000 tons.

"In an enemy air raid over Tripoli no objective of military importance was hit.

Japan Acts 'by Force' to Cut Supply Route From Indo-China

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Wednesday), June 26.—The newspaper Asahi reported today that Japan shortly would issue a sweeping pronouncement amounting to an Oriental Monroe Doctrine warning all powers against interference of any kind in all territories in East Asia.

The newspaper said Japan now is prepared to establish and guarantee autonomy in East Asia.

The proposed pronouncement, it said, would apply to Italy, Germany and Breat Britain as well as neutrals in the European conflict.

The newspaper reported the new policy would oppose the transfer of territories or alteration of the status quo in East Asia either through cession or actual force.

[The New York Herald Tribune reported from Shanghai that British officials today are going to Singapore with his archives of the Hongkong colony, following a report that four Japanese divisions were proceeding toward Hongkong.

[The British defense force at Hongkong was erecting barbed-wire defenses on all beaches and anchorages of Hongkong Island, apparently fearing a Japanese invasion.

[Hongkong officials were said to fear that Japanese naval units being sent to French Indo-China might be heading for Hongkong, instead.]

Japan, meanwhile, fastened a watchful military and naval grip today n France's rich holding in the Oriend—Indo-China.

A cryptic announcement disclosed that crack Japanese troops, nine days ago, acted "by force" to cut the supply route from Indo-China to the central Chinese government at Chungking.

It was not disclosed whether these troops actually entered Indo-China territory, which lies alongside Japanese-occupied territory in Kwangsi Province of South China.

An undisclosed number of Japanese warships have gone to the Indo-China port of Haipong to "observe the movements" of vessels which might slip out with contraband for Japan's Chinese enemy, Chiang Kai-shek.

Today, moreover, Maj. Gen. Issaku Nishihara, chairman of an "inspectorate" for Indo-China, flies with his staff to the French colony, charged with seeing that no Indo-China munitions get to Chungking.

The French have agreed to this.

Informed neutral observers here believe Japan will keep a toe-hold in Indo-China, despite official assurances that the warships will come home upon arrival of the Japanese "inspectorate."

Then, they predict, Japan will bide her time, awaiting a suitable opportunity for further inroads. Predictions continue that a Japanese protectorate is contemplated both for Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies, after Japan can talk this over with Germany and Italy.

Moreover, the Japanese press is calling for the "elimination of pro-Chiang influences" from the British and French concessions in China and even Hongkong, the British crown colony off the south Chinese mainland.

300 More U. S. Citizens to Flee From France

By the Associated Press

San Sebastian, Spain, June 25.—United States diplomats arranged today for removal of 300 more Americans from France.

They estimated at least 400 or 500 others were waiting in the little southwestern corner of the conquered country. Seventy entered Spain this morning.

Persons crossing the border said probably 10,000 people were trying to get into Spain.

Many were turned back. Portugal announced that Portuguese visas granted at Bordeaux were invalid, and Spain was permitting bearers of these documents to enter only in exceptional cases.

Most Americans seeking admission were long-time residents of southern France. Among newspapermen reaching Spain today were Edgar A. Mowrer, of the Chicago Daily News; William Henry Chamberlain, of the Christian Science Monitor, and his wife; William Bird, of the New York Sun, and Mrs. Bird; Robert Casey, of the Chicago Daily News, and Hazel MacDonald, of the Chicago Times.

Waverly Root, of the Chicago Times; Fred Abbott, of Paramount News, and Victor Lusinchi, of the Mutual Broadcasting System, remained at St. Jean de Luz because their French wives were unable to get visas.

P. J. Philip, New York Times correspondent, went to St. Jean Pied de Port for his wife, but no word has been received from them. Philip and his wife are British subjects.

Madrid, June 25 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor told newspaper men at the British Embassy today they "dined" on sardines in the last few days before their fight from France.

GOLDEN WEDDING "BRIDE AND GROOM"—Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy, married 50 years, cut golden wedding cake at their home, 1507 Park road northwest

As members of the family looked on, William Murphy and his wife last night cut a three-tired wedding cake.

It represented the crowning achievement in the lives of Mr. Murphy, retire local builder and civic leader, and Mrs. Murphy. They were married a half-century ago in Lynn, Mass., where the native Washingtonian had gone to get a start in the building business. They were both 20.

When still a young man Mr. Murphy organized the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, one of the oldest citizens units in Washington. Mrs. Murphy paralled her husband's civic accomplishments in active church work.

She was also kept busy bring up her four children who with their families congregated at the Murphy home, 1507 Park road northwest, for the party last night. They are Cristopher Murphy, depty coroner; William C. Murphy, Peter S. Murphy, and Mrs. George H. Mihm. Also present were 18 grandchildren.

Susan B. Anthony Becomes Bride

Susan B. Anthony is no more. The young Washington suffragist, grand niece of America's most picturesque woman suffrage leader, yesterday gave up her famous name to marry Henry H. Collins, jr., a Labor Department economist, in Easton, Pa.

The couple left Easton for Canada last night. They will return to Washington July 15, friends here said, and will make their home at 3116 Rodman street northwest.

A former research assistant in the National Youth Administration, Mrs. Collins took part in suffrage demonstrations of the Washington Youth Council and the League of Women Voters.

A graduate of the University of Rochester, Mrs. Collins leatured in Holland, England and France two years ago as a delegate to various peace conferences.

A graduate of Princeton University, Collins came here to work for the NRA in 1933. Later he was with the Soil Conservation Service.

Lemke Aide's Auto Hit by Police Car

Whether a citizen runs into the law, or the law runs into a citizen, the citizen must foot the bill. At least, that was the experience of William O. Skeels last night.

A police car, hot in pursuit of a speeder, crashed against Skeels' automobile on Sixteenth street at the entrance of Walter Reed Hospital. But since the police were in performance of their duty, it appears that Skeels can sue neither the police nor the city, and will have to foot the $50 to $75 bill himself.

Skeels, who is 48, and lives at 1121 New Hampshire avenue northwest, is the secretary of Representative Lemke (Republican), of North Datoka. He was proceeding north on Sixteenth street when a police car ran aganst his coupe.

Private Robert W. Baker, of the Sixth Precinct station, who was in the cruiser with Private Roland P. Goode, said the police car, traveling at about 60 miles an hour, had swerved to avoid a broadside collision with another car, which entered Sixteenth street from the hospital grounds.

Skeels said that Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, who appeared at the accident scene, informed him that neither the police nor the municipal government was liable for the damage since the police were acting in the line of duty.

In the confusion the speeder escaped.

F Street's Antidote for War Fever

MRS. VIRGINIA JACOBSEN
She Acts As Referee

Tulip,, Daisy, Pansy and Gladiola put on a show for the folks again yesterday.

Tulip is a cat and Daisy, Pansy and Gladiola are kittens, and in spite of those pacific sounding names they are all tough guys with a wallop.

Each day their owner, Mrs. Virginia Jacobsen, takes them out in front of a flower shop in the 1400 block of F street and lets them go to it.

First Daisy swaps punches with Gladiola or Pansy, then Pansy squares off at Gladiola, and then they all gang up on Tulip, who cuffs them good and proper.

The kittens are 5 weeks old. Maybe when they get to be Tulip's age they won't be so fractious. But now 20 to 30 persons a day stop and look and laugh at their fights and for a moment forget all about things like offices, jobs—and war.

California Night

Tonight will be California night at the Glen Echo ballroom, Paul Kain, orchestra leader there, announced yesterday. Guest of honor will be Mildred W. Martin, secretary to Representative Clarence F. Lea (Democrat), of California.

Wage Rise Pact Ends Bus Strike

A strike of 110 drivers for three bus companies operating between major cities, including Washington, was settled yesterday by a compromise increasing wages, according to the Associated Press.

Negotiations leading to the agreement in New York between the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the bus companies —Safeway Trails, Eastern Trails, and Northern Trails—were supervised by Commissioner L. J. Smith, of the Federal Department of Labor.

The strike, which began June 4, affected bus service between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit and Chicago.

4 D. C. Boys Rob Another, Aged 13

Thirteen-year-old Richard Vine, of 707 Kentucky avenue southeast, was beaten and robbed yesterday by a gang of four boys his own age. He told police they jumped upon him in Fairlawn Park near the Pennsylvania avenue bridge, and ran off with his hoes, stockings, belt, eye glasses, and 25 cents.

Gunman Holds Up G St. Liquor Store

"Several hundred dollars" loot was taken by a coatless, disheaveled gunman who held up the Greenbrier liquor store at Fifteenth and G streets northwest early this morning.

Community Chest Admits 60 Agencies

Membership of 7 Others Is Not Renewed for 1941; HSA Withdraws

Applications of 60 welfare agencies in the District and nearby areas for membership in the Washington Community Chest were accepted yesterday by the board of trustees. Membership of seven agencies for 1941 was not renewed.

The action was taken at the board's final meeting of the summer held in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium, with Coleman Jennings presiding.

Notable progress in the volume of volunteer personnel organized in readiness for the fall campaign was reported by leaders in all campaign units. More time to select carefully the volunteer workers and work with them on plans and policies before the autumn pressure, is a result of the early recruiting of personnel, A. G. Neal, chairman of the group unit, declared, in reporting for the general campaign committee.

Others Report

Other major campaign chairmen reporting were Bruce R. Allen of the public relations unit; John S. Gorrell, for the headquarters committee.

Capt. Chester A. Wells gave the second section of the report on his committee's survey, which covered the everhead expenses of the Council of Social Agencies and the Social Service Exchange, in comparison with those of other member agencies. "Our study shows that the expense of operating this council is not excessive when compared to that spent by councils in other cities," Capt. Wells's report declared.

It was also recommended "that the cost to operate this agency (the council) should not exceed the relationship that exists between the present cost to that of the amount raised by the Chest unless some unusual situation arises in the community."

The service of the Social Service Exchange, the committee found, "is fundamental to a community welfare program in preventing a duplication of effort and promoting team play and cooperation between the social agencies."

John A. Reilly gave the treasurer's report, and Col. William O. Tufts reported as chairman of the budget committee.

Holiday House, according to the report of the executive committee, did not reapply for membership because it has become practically self-supporting. Although several of the five Alexandria member agencies tentatively applied for renewal of their membership, it was felt that it was not feasible to recommend any of them for membership in the Washington Chest because of plans now under way for a separate chest in Alexandria.

HSA Cancels Application

The Health Security Administration, it was reported to the trustees, requested that its application for membership in the chest for 1941 be withdrawn, pending further study. The hospitalization fund, it was made clear by Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the chest, will continue as part of the chest 1941 budget, regardless of whether the Health Security Administration remains a member.

President Jennings announced that the completed personnel of the chest's executive committee for the year 1940-1941 would include the following members:

Alvin W. Hall, first vice president; Thomas F. Morgan, jr., second vice president; Morris Cafritz, third vice president; Mrs. Clarence A. Aspinwall, fourth vice president; John A. Reilly, treasurer; John F. Victor, secretary; Col. William O. Tufts, chairman, budget committee; Chauncey G. Parker, jr., chairman, campaign committee; J. S. Gorrell, chairman, headquarters committee; Bruce R. Allen, chairman, public relations committee, and Dr. Dorothy B. Ferebee, Charles C. Glover, jr., Benjamin W. Thoron, Mrs. Frederick Altemus, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Richard H. Wilmer, Rev. Oscar P. Blackwelder, Col. Robert H. Fletcher, Mrs. Reginald S. Huidekoper, William G. Ilich, Joseph D. Kaufman, Col. 2,000 Attend Summer Festival Opening at Sylvan Theater

THE NIGHT WAS FILLED WITH MUSIC AND DANCING—Crowds (left) watch Marian Chace's pupils dance to the music of the Elks Boys' Band at the opening of the Summer Festival season at the Sylvan Theater. They saw Eleanor King (right), daughter of the Senator from Utah, dance the Tango Tzigane

The majority of the crowd spread the day's headlines from Europe on the grass, and sprawled on them at the opening of the Summer Festival season at the Sylvan Theater last night.

The program itself—even one of its gayest dances—served to remind the crowd what a privilege it is to gather peacefully under the night sky in 1940. A gay folk dance from Middle Europe by a group of Marian Chace's pupils in peasant costumes contrasted sharply with the headlines which fluttered on the grass.

About 2,000 persons collected on the sloping Monument grounds for the concert by the Elks Boys' Band and the program by Miss Chace and her dance group.

The dances cut across centuries and boundary lines. Eleanor King, daughter of Senator King, of Utah, soloed in a tango from Spain. Ten-year-old Odga Gazda played on the piano her own composition, "At the Watergate," while a group of her fellow dancers in flowing multi-colored robes portrayed the flow of the Potomac River.

Perhaps the most unusual part of the program were the dances in unison with the singing of Negro spirituals by Lawrence Wissonant. Dancers in long plain blue dresses, topped by red bandannas, seemed living symbols of supplication as they followed out the theme of the songs.

Miss Chace herself presented several solo dances, ranging from an East Indian nautch to a portrayal of Lucrezia Borgia and to two of the dances in the series of spirituals.

The Elks Boys Band, directed by James L. Kidwell, played a program with a patriotic flavor and with numerous marches.

The Community Center and Playgrounds Department of the District and the National Capital Parks Office are sponsoring jointly the series of festivals on 10 Tuesday evenings.

New Gasoline Price War Looms in D. C.

Dealer's Organization Dissloved; No-Discount Agreement Banned

The District's 700 gasoline retailers last night were faced with the possibility of a new price-cutting war as the Justice Department announced the dissolution of the retailers' association and the rupture of a program which ended a 2-cents-a-gallon discount for cash.

The Justice Department's statement revealed it had suspended an investigation of the alleged price-fixing program as a result of a move by the Washington Retailers, Inc., to break up its organization.

On May 20 a meeting of the retailers voted to halt a price war and stop the practice of allowing a discount of 2 cents a gallon for cash sales.

This agreement, the Justice Department maintained, was a violation of the Sherman Antitrust laws.

With the no-discount agreement banned by the Justice Department, and its organization dissolved, the retailers were threatened with a renewal of the price war which for the past several years forced 75 per cent of the filling stations to sell gas at the cut-rate price.

Effect of the discount has been disastrous for the retailers, according to James D. Gouldin, former president of the association. "The cut rates cost the retailers $1,800,000 a year," he said.

On the other hand, the Justice Department declared on opening its investigation, that the end of the discount system virtually raised the price of gas by 2 cents, at a cost of $2,000,000 to local consumers.

In a letter to Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division, the retailers' association said:

"It has always been the purpose and intent of our association to act within the letter and spirit of the law. After conferring with members of your staff, we have decided to discontinue . . . the program. Steps will be taken forthwith to effect the dissolution of our corporation. . . ."

D. C. Salesman, 92, Awarded Divorce From Wife, 70

Arthur Henry Clayton, who is 92 and still active in business as a map salesman, was awarded a divorce yesterday from Mrs. Annie Lee Smith Clayton, 1644 Newton street northwest.

Clayton told Justice Jennings Bailey that he and Mrs. Clayton were married January 18, 1937, and that his wife deserted him a few weeks later. Mrs. Clayton is nearly 70, her husband said. The divorce will not take effect until December 25.

Clayton, who lives at 1213 L street northwest, is a native of Root, Lincolnshire, England. He came to America in 1871 after serving a long apprenticeship in the dry goods business abroad. He has one son, a World War veteran, who is a member of the Norfolk, Va., fire department. Clayton was represented by Attorney Culver B. Chamberlain.

New Water Gate Seating Plans Make Every Spot a Good One

Barge Moved Back 40 Feet So All Can See; Special Bleacher Built For Road to Accommodate Larger Crowds

Improvements in the Water Gate seating arrangements so that there will be more and better seats available for the summer's sunset symphonies were announced yesterday by Harold A. Brooks, chairman of the summer concerts committee.

The new seating arrangements will go into effect Sunday evening, July 7, when the National Symphony Orchestra presents the first of its summer concerts, with Hans Kindler conducting.

A major chanfe affecting the audience is the increase in visibility of the stage from the waterfront seats which was accomplished by moving the orchestra barge 90 feet from the shore, instead of 50 feet as in the past.

Visibility Good Everywhere

"There is almost no spot on the entire Watergate site," Brooks pointed out, "from which every part of the floating stage is not completely visible. This will enable us to increase to an appreciable degree the number of medium priced waterfront seats, and I believe that the patrons will find that with this new placing of the barge, even the seats at the extreme sides will be almost as desirabe as those directly in front of the barge."

A temporary inclined flooring has been built for the lower roadway where the 50 cents seats are placed. Twenty-two sections, each eight by ten feet with a rise of eight inches, have been constructed which will be placed on the roadway on concert nights. The construction of the inclined flooring was carried out through the cooperation of the Welfare and Recreation Association of Public Buildings and Grounds, under the supervision of Frederick Stone.

Tickets on Sale Now

Other improvements are the lowering of the gangplank from the shore to the barge, which is now floated on pontoons below the level of visibility; and the addition of two more floodlights in the 25 cents seats area on the Watergate steps.

All arrangements for the National Symphony's Watergate concerts are carried out with the cooperation of the Natinal Capital Parks Service through the Summer Concerts Committee, which includes Brooks, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. Barton K. Yount, A. F. E. Horn, John R. Hill, Milton King, L. E. Rubel and L. Corrin Strong.

Season tickets for the eight weeks' series of sunset symphonies are now on sale at the Symphony Box Office in the Homer L. Kitt Music Store. Single tickets will go on sale next Monday.

Motorcyclist Injured in Crash, Four Others Hurt in Traffic

A motorcyclist and bicyclist were seriously injured yesterday, and three other persons were hurt in traffic accidents.

William Cramblin, 21, of 1409 Fourteenth street northwest, suffered a concussion and face injuries when his motorcycle crashed with an auto driven, according to police, by David Gaskins, 21, colored, of 735 Second street northwest. Cramblin was taken to Casualty Hospital, and Gaskins was charged with reckless driving. The accident occurred in the 1200 block Frst street northeast.

Fourteen-year-old Addie Holcomb, colored, of 1827 Riggs place northwest, ran her bike into an auto, police said, at Seventeenth and N streets northwest. At Freedmen's Hospital she was said to be in serious condition, suffered from a possible fractured pelvis.

Hit by an auto as she was crossing at Mills street and Rhode Island avenue northeast, Florence Hanger, 51, of 3060 Thayer street northeast, received minor injuries. Police listed the car operator as Samuel W. Butler, 21, of 1312 R street northwest.

Georgia Turner, three, colored, of 2721 Rock Court northwest, was struck by an auto when she ran from behind a parked car in the 1200 block Twenty-seventh street northwest. She was treated at Georgetown Hospital.

A wrenched back was suffered by Joseph C. Powden, 26, colored, of 416 Franklin street northwest, when the truck overturned as he backed into a cinder pile at Seventh and T streets northeast.

Belgian Seaman Misses Boat Home

Maurice Oscar Niemegeers, 31-year-old Belgian seamon, had no aversion to returning to his native land, but "just missed the boat," he told immigration authorities yesterday.

Arrested near the Dalecarlia Reservoir by patrolmen at 1 a. m. yesterday, he was held for immigration investigation because of his ilability to speak any but his native tongue.

He said he had docked at New York aboard a freighter last week. Granted shore leave, he said he failed to return to the boat by sailing time and was left ashore.

Authorities, giving police permission to release the man, said no action could be taken against Niemegeers.

Court Employes Called to Testify On Judge Bentley

What may be the final hearing on the renomination of Juvenile Judge Fay Bentley will be held at 10 a. m. today in the Senate Judiciary Committee room.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday issued summons to several employes of the court and municipal institutions to testify in cases which have been cited by complainants.

The corporation counsel's office yesterday submitted to Senator McCarran a report on sentences imposed by Judge Bentley in the last several years. The records will be studied by the subcommittee.

Sect Member Lays Threat To Orme

Jehovah's Witness Says Chief Declared He Would Break Up 'These Meetings'

Threat that "we would break these meetings up every time they got started" was alleged to have been made by Police Chief Charles M. Orme, according to a sworn statement by John N. Fraley, of Derwood, Md., member of the Jehovah's Witnesses, whose meeting was broken up last Wednesday by a mob in Rockville, Md.

The statement was revealed yesterday by the Montgomery County commissioners at their meeting in Rockville when a number of county pastors and residents appeared to urge reinstatement of Chief Orme, who was suspended Saturday pending "complete investigation" of his part in the riot.

The commissioners also disclosed that investigators had learned that there were four men and 21 women and children in the meeting when it was broken up by the mob.

In his sworn statement, Fraley, 23-year-old member of the religious body, stated that Chief Orme had asked him his name and if "I was John Fraley's son."

Fraley continued: "I told him I was. He said 'I give your father credit to have better sense than to be in such an organization.' Then he said: 'Boy, you better get out of this organization.' He also said that 'we would break these meetings up every time they started.' I told the chief I had made my mind up."

In the delegation seeking Orme's reinstatment were the Rev. W. J. Elliott, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, Gaithersburg; Luther Thompson, W. C. Gloyd, the Rev. Fred A. Van Sickle, pastor of the Free Methodist Church, Rockville; John A. England, former Republican clerk of the board of election supervisors, and Frank B. Severance, Gaithersburg business man and former banker.

Members of the delegation praised Chief Orme and his work in the police department and asked that he be reinstated forthwith.

Board President Thomas Earle Hampton told the delegation that the board of commissioners had been trying to give the county good police protection and would continue to do so. He said Chief Orme had not complained to him that there had been any political interference with his work and that surely Chief Orme would have complained to the board had such been the case.

"We will complete our examination and I can assure you that if it is necessary to dismiss any members of the force, it will be done without fear or favor by this board," Hampton said. "We are determined to get proper law enforcement and to give protection to the people of the county."

Washington I. Cleveland and Theodore G. Parkman appeared on behalf of the executive and advisory committee of the Montgomery County Civic Federation to present a resolution adopted by that organization asking that Chief Orme be given a fair and open trial with benefit of counsel.

Cleveland said that his organization had heard rumors that the chief was to be dismissed for political reasons.

400 Dealers Urge Changes In Liquor Law

Pass Resolution For Price Fixing By Commissioners

Sweeping revision of local liquor regulation exerted by the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, including a resolution for price fixing by the Commissioners, was urged last night by 400 Washington liquor dealers.

In a meeting at the Washington Hotel, the dealers approved eight recommendations of a report by the special Eberharter House subcommittee which recently made an investigation of the ABC board's administration here.

The objects of most heated discussion were the resolution that the Commissioners be given "the authority to stabilize the industry by controlling prices" and a proposal to eliminate all liquor advertising.

Adopted, Then Beaten

The price fixing resolution, interpreted as a weapon to combat local price fixing, was approved while the advertising resolution was first adopted, then defeated when reconsidered.

Other action included approval of a revision of hours of sale to allow class C stores to sell whiskey until 2 a. m. Sunday morning to cater to the Saturday night trade while discontinuing sale of liquor between midnight and 2 a. m. Monday morning.

Class A licensees under another resolution would have their hours of operation cut down to 10 p. m. on week days and would be allowed to operate until midnight only on Saturday and the night before holidays.

Other resolutions asked the legalization of the stand-up bar would provide for appeals to the District Court from decision of the ABC board in license cases, and would put the enforcement of liquor laws in the separate precincts rather than in Lieut. Earl Hartman's special investigation squad as at present, and provided for screening off of whiskey stock in combination stores.

'Glamour Girl' Pays

A Los Angeles judge yesterday characterized a Washington woman as a "new type of Hollywood glamour girl—the mother of a juvenile star," and sentenced her to 3 years in jail and 10 years' probation on the charge of passing a bad check, according to the Associated Press.

The woman, Mrs. Virginia Jean Garner, pleaded guilty to passing a $45 check to a Hollywood fur shop.

"The only reason I'm not sentencing you to Tehachapi Women's Prison," said the Superior Court judge, "is that your young daughter, is beginning a career in the movies and would have to live under a stigma."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Another Stage Comedy Is Made Into Ace Film

Joan Crawford Scores in 'Susan and God;' Public Poll Acclaims Tucker and Bonnie Baker; This, That and the Other About the Theater

NOW JOAN CRAWFORD KNOWS what it is like. That is, she ought to. In "The Women"—the screen version, that is to say—she was the predatory "perfume-counter girl," who poached on private marital preserves with a handsome increment of jewels, gowns, fur coats, Park avenue apartments and whatnot. Now in the spooled version of Rachel Crothers' comedy of "Susan and God," she is on the receiving end of most of the heartbreak caused by her own scatter-brained blundering.

BELL

It is, of course, the Gertrude Lawrence role Miss Crawford plays in this latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer transcription of a popular stage success to the screen. There are even a few of the Lawrence gestures and inflections in her performance, but they only serve to accentuate what might be termed a "new Joan Crawford."

In her screen adaptation of the Crothers whimsy, Anita Loos has adhered with conspicuous fidelity to the original work. It is, as goes without saying, greatly amplified in scene and action. Altogether it is as successful a job of transplantation as was done with "The Women." This may be due to the fact, and probably is, that Hunt Stromberg was the producer and George Cukor the director of them both.

Without irreverence, it must be said that God plays a tremendously important part in the development of the comedy. It seems a little late, however, to suggest that this may strike a jarring note upon the consciousness of any audience. It never has done so yet.

Of one thing the guys and gals of the press were unanimously sure at yesterday afternoon's preview—the piece has been ideally cast, with Fredric March opposite Miss Crawford and Ruth Hussey, John Carroll, Rita Hayworth, Nigel Bruce, Bruce Cabot, Rose Hobart, Constance Collier, Rita Quigley and Norma Mitchell leading the support.

The tragic circumstances of the Washington premiere of the stage version of "Susan and God" probably never will fade from the memory of Capital theatergoers. It was on that opening night, only a few hours after the fall of the final curtain, that Osgood Perkins died of a heart attack in his hotel room. Producer John Golden immediately set about a Nation-wide search for his successor in the role opposite Miss Lawrence, only to find him already in the cast, in the person of Paul McGrath. In the light of yesterday's revelations, somebody should have thought of Freddie March, back there in those somber days.

That indefatigable wanderer and incorrigible of the drumsticks, Jack Powell, is still ambassador-of-good-willing at the Casino Atlantico, in Rio de Janeiro. A postcard just to hand pictures him wandering around among the cash customers, tapping out his rhythms on everything from drinking glasses to the senoritas' shiny noses! "Was held over," says the drummer boy of siphons, "and am going very big." Incidentally, the Casino Atlantico looks as if it might be the Brazilian Shoreham Terrace.

Tonight's the night when Paul Kain and his orchestra, most of whom hail from California, will honor the Golden State by playing host to its Washington residents. Mr. Kain has announced that his guest of honor will be Miss Mildred W. Martin, secretary to Representative Lea. This is slightly double-barreled. While Miss Martin is a Californian by adoption, she actually is a native of this city.

After their reception at Loew's Capitol Theater this week, the tabulation is hardly necessary to prove it, but there must be something about Orrin Tucker's Orchestra and his fabulous little songstress, "Wee" Bonnie Baker. A radio popularity poll conducted over a period of weeks by the Milwaukee Journal, ranked Miss Baker first among the girl-singers of the day. Among the bands, Orrin Tucker's aggregation was nosed out in the last week of the balloting by Kay Kyser. In the same newspaper's poll of 1939, neither "Wee" Bonnie nor Mr. Tucker and his boys finished in the first ten in their respective classifications. And if you were to address "Miss Baker" as Evelyn Nelson, she'd probably know whom you meant, since that is her honest-to-gosh name—and a very nice name, if you ask me!

These film colony "mayors" are getting thicker than Lew Lehr's dialects. The latest to be elected is the "Honorable" Smiley Burnette, second-best cowhand on the Republic lot, who has just succeeded "Woo-Woo" Hugh Herbert as head-man of Studio City, San Fernando Valley community, where many film stars make their home. That puts him in bitter rivalry with Republic's ace Western star, Gene Autrey, "mayor" of North Hollywood. The banquet inducting "His Honor" into his new job, on June 24, was an occasion of high dignity. The other "guest mayors" included Andy Devine Bob Burns and Jack Oakie!

Putting-It-Over-With-a-Bang-Note

There is a naughty word in "Susan and God," but Fredric March slams the door so hard you can't hear it—but it's there. More "GWTW" influence?

The Texan Comes to the Rescue

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of Screen Snapshots.)

Hollywood, June 25 (INS).—It took exactly two story conferences to convince Richard Dix that he wasn't a producer. Dix, who announced not long ago that he was forming his own company, says he soon found out how little he knows about the production end of pictures and he's grateful that he learned the lesson without cost. He'll stick to acting and will let Harry Sherman have the production headaches. Dix and Sherman are talking terms for a two-year four-pictures-a-year deal. In addiltion to the popular "Hopalong Cassidy" series, Sherman makes several bigger budget specials for Paramount and the Dix starrers would be in that class.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Rich is now making "Cherokee Strip" for Sherman and if the contract deal goes through he'll follow with "The Roundup," Macklyn Arbuckle's old-time stage hit. It's already in preparation and Announcer Don Wilson, who's becoming quite a screen personality, has been signed for an important comedy role.

Pretty Osa Massen, who scored in Paramount's "Honeymoon in Bali," will have an important role in Warner's "Honeymoon for Three." Osa, who's married to Jean Hersholt's boy, Allan, has just been cast as Ann Sheridan's rival for George Brent's affections. (Quite an assignment considering the way Ann and George feel about one another.) Although the trade papers have announced Claire Trevor for a top spot in "Honeymoon for Three," it is not definitely set. Claire does have a one-picture commitment with Warner's, but there's a chance she'll go into "Santa Fe Trail" with Errol Flynn, Olivia De Havilland and John Wayne, instead of the Sheridan-Brent epic.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Maybe you think there wasn't a lot of choking and wrong-way swallowing among the luncheers at the Hollywood Derby when Lana Turner, Artie Shaw and Greg Bautzer walked in together and proceeded amicably to have lunch; nobody seems to know that Phillips Holmes and Betty Rich, 22-year-old Bev-Hills gal, were quietly wed at Tia Juana last week and immediately flew to Chicago, where Phil will do a big air show; much hilarity at that downtown burlesque house when Mischa Auer, Edgar Kennedy and Eddie Quillan got on the stage and held forth for hours. Quillan danced and Mischa did a strip tease.

Alex Korda got back in town Sunday, and so did the Gary Coopers; Marcel Rogez, Wes Ruggles' heart, is here, too, after stopping over in Tucson to visit Wes at the "Arizona" location. Marcel has been in France visiting her mother and she tells friends conditions there are already beyond belief; Anita Louise and Buddy Adler move into their new Westwood home Wednesday. They've been living in an apartment since the wedding; Binnie Barnes is down with the flu; Helen Parrish showed up at Casa Manana with three escorts—not including Forrest Tucker, who was at Ciro's with Martha O'Driscoll.

This week's benefit matinee at the Esquire is sponsored by Olympe Bradna. Proceeds every Wednesday afternoon go for French war relief; Bart Marshall lunched with his ex-wife, Edna Best, at the Warner commissary; Eugenie Leontovich is back in town after a trip East to see with her own eyes how "Four Sons" is doing; Marjorie Weaver has been going with Donald Briggs, a business lad from Monrovia, and Isabel Jewell has been stepping out with Donald Briggs, the actor. What with the resulting confusion in the press, Marjorie decided they all should meet, so she tossed a cocktail party for the Briggses and Isabel.

That's all today. If I sound nervous, it's because L. O. P. keeps looking over my shoulder. Shoo, Ma! Go take a sunbath or something.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 25.

MAYOR LaGUARDIA: The President's former brain-truster, Rex Tugwell—whom you favor as your successor at City Hall—will resign from his city-administration job, to accept a Federal post. Tugwell's new assignment is expected to keep him in New York.

PRESIDENT VARGAS: For the past few years, Carlos Davila, former president of Chile, has been trying to interest our State Department in a plan for economic domination of South America, as a means of combating Nazi influence there. Now that Roosevelt announced such a plan a few days ago, Davila at last is being recognized. He lunched in Washington, Sunday, with Sumner Welles . . . JOHN BARRYMORE: A Barrymore finally has accomplished something without publicity. Your daughter, Diana, rescued Hiram Sherman from drowning recently when the canoe in which they were riding tipped over.

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT: Monty Woolley, who portrays you in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," also will emulate you in the field of letters. Woolley is writing a book called "The Phelps Family," a story about a typical American family. Then he hopes to adapt it into a play, for Broadway presentation . . . BOB JACKSON: Because the new defense appropriations brought increased taxes on liquor, your Department of Justice will be asked to initiate a drive against bootlegging, which still flourishes and escapes taxation. The National Retail Package Store Association, in behalf of its members, will press this move.

GENE TUNNEY: If Jack Dempsey wins his fight against that wrestler, he'll repeat such bouts in a cross-country tour—but not in New York, where he doesn't believe he can get a license . . . BARBARA BENNETT: Charles Sabin, your former dancing partner, has found a new one. She's the socialite Merle Rutherford, former wife of the late Jack DeRuyter.

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER: This is a new collegiate slant: Louis Calhern, the actor, was guest of honor at some University of Michigan sorority meetings—which were so well attended that Calhern has received an offer to become a member of the faculty . . . WILLIAM KNUDSEN: Corey Ford is flying to Alaska, via the new clipper, to inspect our defenses there, and write a series of articles about them.

JOHN ROOSEVELT: You're the only one of the family, so far, who's not planning to attend the Democratic convention. Your brother, Jimmy, last week made his arrangements to be there . . . FELIX FERRY: Your friend and prize-customer, William Rhinelander Stewart, will help finance a rival cafe on the East Side, in the fall. He'll back Monte Proser's new "Zombie" club . . .

CORDELL HULL: A diplomatic mess was avoided along Broadway Sunday night when Fernando Contreras, son of the president of Venezuela, escorted his mother and family in a tour of the night clubs. Col. Gonzalo Gomez, the publicized playboy whose father was dictator of Venezuela, made his usual rounds also. But to avoid an embarrassing meeting with the family of the current ruler of his country, Gomez first sent reconnoitering bodyguards into each club.

WILL HAYS: Harry Edington, the new head at RKO, has been very much touched by the war's effect upon the motion picture industry. A few days ago he told someone: "Last night, before I went to sleep, I decided upon a new policy for my company. From now on—only entertainment" . . .

JOHN D. M. HAMILTON: Concerning my story of Wendell Willkie's pledge to appoint only Republicans and to support whatever candidate the Republicans nominate, Willkie wired me Sunday: "I have made no pledges of any kind to any person as to whom I would appoint to public office, if I am elected President of the United States. I have said that I would support for election the nominee of the Republican convention" . . . HARRY WOODRING: Louis Johnson, your Assistant Secretary of War, is expected to remain in office, after Stimson is confirmed as your successor . . . LILLIAN GISH: As soon as Oscar Serlin, producer of "Life With Father," returns from Hollywood, he'll start arranging for your sister, Dorothy, to appear in the Boston company of that show.

Director's Child In Screen Debut

Anna Marie Schunzel, daughter of Director Reinhold Schunzel, will make her debut in "Escape" and at the same time will change her name for professional purposes to Ann Loring. Miss Loring will be seen as Helene, student at the finishing school conducted by the Countess, played by Norma Shearer. Robert Taylor costars with Miss Shearer, the featured cast including Naximova, Paul Lukas, Bonita Granville, Felix Bressart, Albert and Elsa Basserman and Edgar Barrier.

Also cast as students at the school are Janet Shaw as Maria; Greta Rozan, Anya Taranda, Marianne Mosner and Christina Madrid.

Real Battle

The fight in "One Came Home" is short, but it was no place for softies. Robert Young and William Gargan pitched in for a good old-fashioned slugfest. Even Director S. Sylvan Simon winced at the sound of the blows, but Gargan came up smiling.

*X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26, 1940 19

Nats Throttle Chisox Rally in 9th, Win, 7 to 6

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Ill., June 25.—This is the year when the National League must get even for past indignities at the hands of the American League in All-Star games or its excuses will sound pretty hollow. If, on the evening of July 9, the National League has not won the eighth annual All-Star game it will be rather plain that the N. L. is simply outclassed.

POVICH

Only twice has the National League triumphed in the seven previous All-Star affairs and it has always had a ready excuse. They were playing the Yankees—not a representative American League club. And that has been more or less true. A. L. teams have been packed with Yankees in the All-Star games. Toss the Yankees out and the National League was a better league from top to bottom than the A. L., it was claimed.

Well, this is another year, and the fact is that there is no reason for a single Yankee player to be in the American League's line-up in the July 9 game at St. Louis. Actually, on records this season, none of the Yankees qualify for a place on the American League club. This year there can be no excuse for the National League All-Stars. The A. L. team won't be packed with Yankees. It's doubtful if more than three Yanks get into the game, in contrast to seven Yankees who played in the American League's triumph at Washington in the 1937 game.

If any of the fourth-place Yankees are named to the American League's starting line-up by Manager Joe Cronin it will be more of a courtesy gesture than anything else. Joe DiMaggio is admittedly a great ball player, but the bare fact is that he isn't hitting .300 and Cronin has his pick of a half dozen outfielders who are outhitting DiMag by 40 points. Charley Keller, another Yankee star, is hitting a mere .302 and on that record he has no claim to a place on the club despite his reputation as a slugger.

Catcher Bill Dickey has always been a fixture on American League All-Star clubs but how is Cronin going to nominate him in preference to Frankie Hayes of the Athletics who is outhitting Dickey by nearly 100 points; or Birdie Tebbets of the Tigers who is almost as good a catcher and is also out-hitting Dickey; or Rollie Hemsley of the Indians who is hitting .305 and catches very nicely.

There isn't a man in the Yankee infield who deserves a place on the All-Star team on the face of the 1940 records which is supposed to be the medium of selection. Joe Gordon is a fancy Dan in the field and a home run hitter on occasion but most of the league's second basemen are outhitting him from 30 to 50 points. Babe Dahlgren and his .225 batting average is definitely out as a first baseman and Frankie Crosetti and his average of less than .200 certainly is not All-Star timber this year. Neither is Red Rolfe, who is having his worst year at third base and at bat.

And there isn't a Yankee pitcher whose presence on the 1940 All-Star club must necessarily be deemed vital. That goes also for Red Ruffing, one of the stand-out pitchers of the league. Cronin can have his choice of pitchers—a half dozen of 'em—who have records far better than Ruffing. Buck Newsom and Tommy Bridges are a pair; Al Milnar and Al Smith of the Indians have outperformed big Red; Bob Feller is a natural choice, and Dutch Leonard, too, rates better than Ruffing.

Of course there'll be some Yankees in that ball game on July 9. DiMaggio and Dickey and Ruffing are pretty certain to see action and it will be a tribute not to any spectacular success they are having this year but to their reputation as "money players." But the National League won't be meeting any solid Yankee cast and the Yankees they will be meeting up with are having off-years.

Thus it can be no Yankee stampede of the National Leaguers in this All-Star game. It will be a representative A. L. club on the field and the National League had best win this one or the suspicion will be confirmed that—Yankees or no Yankees—the better big league is the American League.

Indian Safe at Third but Bites Dust Because He Forgot to Touch Second

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Al Milnar, Cleveland pitcher, slides past the Yank's Red Rolfe at third safely as Second Baseman Joe Gordon fumbles Lou Boudreau's grounder and gets the umpire's okay. But it was called off in the next breath when Al was pronounced out for failing to touch second in his hurry from first, where he alighted after a single. Indians beat the Yankees, 5-3

Team Leaves 8th; Hudson Stops Rally

Rookie Enters Final Frame Pitching 4-Hit Ball; Greeted by Home Run and Triple

By Shirley Povich.

Chicago, June 25.—Under the staggering leadership of young Sidney Hudson, who weathered a ninth-inning storm of White Sox hits, the Nats fetched a 7-6 victory out of the fire and themselves out of the league cellar tonight.

Hudson was on the brink of another spectacular pitching performance in his first outing since his one-hit triumph over the Browns when his little dream-world started to collapse about him in the ninth. He entered the inning with a five-run lead and all but pitched it away to the suddenly obstreperous White Sox.

He had been holding the White Sox to four hits in the first eight innings and the 21,233 night customers were marveling at the league's newest pitching sensation when his luster vanished in a White Sox assault that scored four runs and put the tying run on base with one out.

Julius Solters launched the ninth for the White Sox with their fifth hit, a single to center, and Eric McNair move dhim home with a tripie against the rightfield wall. Mike Tresh delivered a single to right and Pinchhitter Larry Rosenthal delivered the fourth consecutive hit—a tremendous home run into the rightfield stands.

Harris Looks at Bullpen

That blow cut Hudson's lead to 7-6 but Manager Bucky Harris, with a quick glance at the doubtful caliber of pitching in the bullpen, motioned the rookie to continue.

Cecil Travis lent a powerful hand at this point by darting behind third base to come up with Kennedy's smash and throw him out, but the rally was on in full cry again when Kreevich singled to center. Still Harris made no move to remove Hudson.

It was just as well. The rookie took another hitch in his belt and proceeded to save the ball game. He did that by forcing a pair of former Nats, Joe Kuhel and Taft Wright, to raise short flies to the outfield for the final outs.

Gelbert's Triple Counts

In contrast to the White Sox's nine hits, the Nats unloaded a 15-hit attack against three Chicago pitchers, driving Starter Johnny Rigney to cover in six innings, Charley Gelbert's sixth-inning triple with two on base was the Nats' important blow of the ball game and figured in three Washington runs.

Two cheap runs scored by the Nats on a pair of wild throws by Luke Appling and Joe Kuhel in the eighth inning proved the margin of victory.

The Nats scored all of their seven runs at a time when two were out in their three scoring innings—the fourth, the sixth and the eighth. A four-hit attack on Rigney in the fourth broke a scoreless tie and moved Washington into a 2-0 lead. Cecil Travis' single to left scored Lewis who had singled, and Jake Early and Buddy Myer contributed singles that scored Travis.

In the sixth, Gelbert was the hero of the occasion. With two out and Travis and Myer on base after getting singles, Gelbert whaled a three-bagger against the score board in right center.

The White Sox gave up two more runs in the eighth on some dizzy proceedings. After Case doubled to left center with two out and Lewis drew a walk, Appling threw wild to first on Walker's grounder and Case scored. Clint Brown trapped Walker off first base and when Kuhel threw wild to second, Lewis scored from third and Walker reached that base.

Until their ninth-inning uprising, the Sox had only two runs to show for their efforts against Hudson—both the result of Joe Kuhel's homer into the right field upper deck after Kreevich reached base on Gelbert's fumble.

3-Run Homer Fails, Phils Bow to Bucs

Pittsburgh Wins, 9-7, On 6-Run Rally in 7th; Convention Ruins Gate

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 25.—Johnny Rizzo blasted a three-run homer today against his former teammates from Pittsburgh, but the Phillies never quite caught up and lost the opening game of a series, 9 to 7.

Competing as an attraction with the Republican National Convention, the game drew only 1,000 spectators to Shibe Park as Pittsburgh picked up where it left off in the last appearance here a month ago, and the Bucs swept the series.

Two Pitchers Chased

The Pirates landed on Kirby Higbee for 15 hits, while the Phils got 14 bingles of their own, driving Max Butcher and Johnny Lanning from the mound.

Pittsburgh jumped away to a one-run lead in the second, with Al Lopez singling Elbie Fletcher home after Vince DiMaggio hit into a double play. The Phillies came back with two runs in their half of the inning on three singles and a walk.

Seventh Clinches

In the third, Pittsburgh scored twice on a walk and doubles by Bob Elliott and Maurice Van Robays. The Bucs put on the clincher in the seventh with a six-run splurge featuring safeties by Elliott, Bill Brubaker, Arky Vaughan, Joe Bowman, Lopez and Frankie Gustine.

With the help of Rizzo's homer, the Phils counted four times in their half of the seventh, and with two out in the ninth scored another and had the winning runs on bases when Bobby Bragan grounded out.

Harold Newhouser Allows Only Four Hits in Nightcap

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 25.—The Detroit Tigers kept their hold on second place in the American League race today, splitting a double bill with the Boston Red Sox before a crowd of 26,169.

Youthful Harold Newhouser scattered four hits in the nightcap to give the Tigers a 5-to-1 victory after Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe suffered his first defeat of the season in the opener which the Red Sox won, 11 to 7.

The 19-year-old Newhouser, in winning his fifth triumph as against four losses, pitched brilliantly, striking out seven. He retired the side in the fifth inning on strikes and in five innings held the Red Sox hitless.

Boston scored its lone run in the first when Dominic DiMaggio led off with a double, took third on a fielder's choice, and came home on an infield out.

From then until the seventh the Red Sox failed to get a blow off the Tiger rookie, while his teammates, hitting opportunely, routed Starter Denny Galehouse in the third with a three-run rally after scoring twice in the first. Maurice Harris and Joe Heving followed Galehouse, charged with the defeat, to the mound.

Johnny Burke Wins N. C. A. Golf Medal

By the Associated Press

Manchester, Vt., June 25.—Johnny Burke, of Georgetown, youngest member of a Newport, R. I., golfing family, rushed under the wire with the late finishers in the qualifying round of the National Collegiate A. A. Golf Championship today to gain the medalist honors with a 36-hole total of 143.

Burke, who won the Intercollegiate Championship two years ago and the Metropolitan Amateur only last week, topped his opening 71, one over par for this 6,565-yard Green Mountain course, with a 72 to lead 145 representatives of 30-odd colleges.

Pressing Newport Johnny, who finished in a second-place tie at the end of yesterday's opening round, were Bert McDowell, of Louisiana State, finalist with him in 1938, and Harry Haverstick, of Swarthmore. Each had 144. Haverstick with the tourney's first sub-par round, a one-under 69.

Other Survivors

Two Easterners, Bill Clark, of Dartmouth, and Jack Selby, of Princeton, wound up in a fourth-place tie with 145s, thanks to their steady play over the 36-hole route. Rennie Kelly, of Southern California, and Warren Tansey, of Michigan State, rated outstanding title threats, were deadlocked at 146.

The first day's leader, Neil Croonquist, of Minnesota, the association's retiring president, put a 78 on top of his opening par 70 to gain one of the 64 match play berths. Ten players who scored 158s played off for the last four brackets.

Among the other outstanding entries to survive were Warren Berl, of Stanford, last year's runner-up, with 151; Bill Hall, of Iowa State, another 1939 semifinalist with 150, and last year's quarter-finalists, "Skip" Alexander, of Duke, with 156, and Lee Ramsel, of Louisiana State, who emerged safely from the 158 playoff.

The competition for the team championship, won last year by Stanford, ended in a deadlock when the four lowest scores from Louisiana State and Princeton each wound up with 36-hole totals of 601. Georgetown placed third with 606, the Duke team of four was fourth with 612 and Illinois finished fifth with 616.

The other low team scores were Southern California 617, Iowa State 618, Stanford 619, Michigan State 620, Yale and Northwestern 621, Ohio State 623, Michigan 625, Dartmouth 626, Harvard and Virginia 627, Texas 628, Amherst 631, Wisconsin 645 and Union 651.

The 64 qualifiers will compete in the first round tomorrow morning and the tourney's schedule calls for two rounds a day until the sur-

Browns' Late Surge Beats Macks, 12-10

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 25.—The St. Louis Browns climaxed a long uphill battle with five runs in the eighth inning to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics, 12 to 10, tonight and take fourth place in the American League standings.

After getting only one man past first base in five frames while the Athletics were assuming an eight-run lead, the Brownies drove Nelson Potter from the mound with four tallies in the sixth and garnered three more in the seventh before the big eighth-inning climax.

Johnny Berardino who drove in six runs with a triple and two singles paced the attack which brought the St. Louisians their thirtieth victory of the season against 33 losses for a percentage of .476.

The triumph gave the Browns fourth place by a margin of 1 percentage point over the New York Yankees who dropped a nine-inning 5-3 decision to the Cleveland In-

Dodgers Lose To Cubs, 8-3, In 13th Inning

Phelps' Homer Ties Score for Flock in Ninth But in Vain

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 25 (AP).—Chicago's Cinderella Cubs scampered off Ebbets Field with five runs just as the clock struck midnight tonight to take an 8-to-3 thirteen-inning victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Cubs spoiled Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin's return to a Dodger uniform by knocking him out in the sixth inning. But Brooklyn battled back to tie the score in the ninth on Babe Phelps' fifth homer of the season and then the clubs struggled fruitlessly until the Dodgers blew up in the unlucky thirteenth.

Chunky Dominic Dallessandro played a major role in Chicago's conquest, getting four hits, including a triple and two doubles.

In the final inning after Bill Nicholson led off with a walk, Dallessandro drove him to third with a single and the important run crossed the plate when Pete Coscarart's throw home on Phil Cavarretta's grounder was too late.

Passeau Checks Dodgers

Al Todd singled another run across and after Bob Mattick fouled out, Pitcher Claude Passeau beat out a bunt and Dolph Camilli threw the ball into rightfield, letting two more runs score and Passeau reach third, from where he too scored on a fly.

Passeau, third Chicago pitcher, checked the Dodgers without a hit in the four extra innings to get credit for the victory. The defeat was charged to Newt Kimball, last of four Dodger pitchers to see service.

Lexington, Ky., June 25 (AP).—J. C. Myers, manager of the Kentucky Men's Amateur Golf Tournament starting today telephoned United States Senator A. B. "Happy" Chandler at his home in Versailles and asked him to present trophies to the winners Saturday.

"Present the trophies," exclaimed the former Kentucky governor. "Hell, I'm going over to play in that tournament and aim to win one of them myself."

Milnar Wins Eleventh, Tribe Beats Yanks, 5-3

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 25.—With Hal Trosky hitting his sixteenth and seventeenth home runs of the season, the pace-making Cleveland Indians pounced on the New York Yankees again today for a 5-to-3 victory before rain halted the game at the end of the fifth inning.

It was the fourth consecutive defeat for the Yanks and their ninth in ten games, dropping the world champions ten games behind the leaders and jeopardizing their berth in the American League's first division.

The Indians scored three runs off Monte Pearson in the first inning on a two-run homer by Roy Weatherly and the first of Trosky's round-trippers. Trosky's other clout along with a walk and two singles brought two more runs in the third.

This was enough for Lefty Al Milnar's eleventh victory, although the Yanks roughed him up in the third with three runs on Frank Crosetti's double, a walk, Charley Keller's triple and a single by Joe DiMaggio.

The triumph raised the Tribe to 2½ games over the Detroit Tigers.

School All-Star Lineup Chosen for Red Cross Baseball Benefit

Littman Pleased With Squad's Drill

Approves Bill Fisher As Starting Hurler Against Heurich In Post Game

By Bill Burnett

As hard-hitting and peppery a high school all star baseball team as ever took the field in Washington will square off with the District Champion Heurich Brewers Saturday when "Sandlot Day" is staged at Griffith Stadium for the benefit of the Red Cross war fund.

Morton Littman youthful coach in charge of the All-District Schoolboy nine in The Washington Post-sponsored twin bill, yesterday selected his starting lineup following a two-hour drill on the Ellipse. And after seeing the scholastic stars in action, Littman expressed himself as "tickled to death with the way they look. I think we'll take Heurich," he predicted.

The same confidence in victory was expressed by Vic Baratte, coach of the softball all-stars from the Sport Center League who will face Senate Beer, thrice D. C. titlist in the stadium opener at 2 p. m. Both games will present youth against age—as diamond ages go—the softball clash featuring a mound duel between Senate's veteran Abe Rosenfield and 18-year-old "Bump" Simonds.

Indorses Fisher

To the surprise of nobody, Littman heartily approved of Billy Fisher, of Central as starting pitcher. The big right-hander was the best in the recently concluded interhigh series, and he was responsible for Central taking its second straight title. As the only vaguely weak hitter on the club, he was assigned last place in the batting order.

Lead-off man Saturday will be Ches Ciomei, Tech second baseman, who held the same spot in the Trainer line-up. Hal Mitchell, Western shortstop, and Elmer Raba, Gonzaga centerfielder, come next in that order. And the clean-up position will be given Montgomery-Blair High's Johnny Norris. The gangly star will play rightfield unless needed on the mound, at shortstop, second base or backstop—he plays them all.

The remainder of the schoolboy batting array will be in this order: Art Faircloth, Anacostia, left field; Bob Leach, Western, first base; Sam Di Blasi, Central, third base, and Harry Martin, Central, catcher. Martin's backstop choice will add further to the teams' chances, the clever youngster having been Fisher's regular battery mate until he became ineligible late in the season.

Utility Players

Other stars asked by Littman to report with trousers and spikes Saturday are Zello Lagos, Central, utility; Elmer Leukhardt, Anacostia, first base; Martin Green, Tech, shortstop Bob Mulvihill, Gonzaga, utility; Vinny Kirchner, Washington-Lee, utility; Joe Soresi, Anacostia, utility, and Ed Murnane, G. W. High, pitcher.

Because they are playing league ball in Newport News, Va., at present, Central's stellar Benny Steiner and Pat Fenlon will be unable to compete. Another pair of stars, W. L.'s "Shanty" Shepherd and Roosevelt's Les Wicklein, also will be out of action. The first has a sprained ankle and the latter a previous engagement.

Red Cross officials have given their full support to the event and first balls in both games will be thrown out by luminaries of the body. After one day on sales, tickets, priced at 50 cents each, with no reserved seats, were reported going fast.

Brewers Bow To O'Donnell Nine, 5 to 2

Fail in Crucial Test; Loss May Force Post League Play-Off

With a chance to terminate the first half of The Washington Post-Industrial League season and take the title, Heurich Brewers ran into a vengeful O'Donnell nine yesterday on the Ellipse and lost its second start this season, 5-2.

Final standings now hinge on the Brewes' playing of a postponed game with Russell, Motors tomorrow. A victory earns the crown, but another loss sends the Brew club into a playoff with Cameo, second-place team.

An indication of O'Donnell's will to win was given in the first inning yesterday when the Grillmen pushed across a single run. They added another in the third, but the Brewers came back to tie it up at 2-2 in the fourth. Three Grill tallies in the fifth settled things once and for all.

Via and Ciomei started the cucial innings with singles, after which Robey flew out. Senge then bunted safely, and Xander sent home the first inning run with another clean blow. After Pitcher Bill Liggett's single Heurich's Archy Schriverner was removed from the mound, and Relief Pitcher Downs' first act was to walk Mizell and another O'Donnell run across. The inning was ended when Bonifant hit into a double play.

Besides his important single, Liggett registered a brilliant mound job. He issued only two bases on balls and seven hits. O'Donnell's accounted for 12 singles off Heurich's two hurlers.

Pepco diamonders of the U. S. Government League took the first step toward their second straight loop championship yesterday when they won the second game of a playoff with Gas Light nine, 12-0, for the first half title. The first game Monday was won by a 5-0 margin.

Helmer hurled the full seven-inning route for the winners as every man on the Pepco bench saw action. He allowed eight hits but voided those with 11 strikeouts. His mates garnered seven runs in the first inning and from there in were never in danger.

'Beaning' Spread May Disrupt Major League Baseball Races

May Change 'Here Comes Stretch, Pitch' To 'Here Comes Pitch and the Stretcher'

By Whitney Martin,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, June 25.—The recent epidemic of "beanings," which threatens to change the stock expression of "Here's the stretch; there comes the pitch," to "Here's the pitch; there comes the stretcher," again emphasizes the major role injuries play in baseball races.

First it was Pee-Wee Reese; then Ducky Medwick; then Bill Jurges—all National Leaguers, incidentally. Fortunately none of the accidents had tragic results, although the Jurges incident might be tragic from a Giant standpoint.

Medwick had not been with the Dodgers long enough for his absence to be felt. Skipper Leo Durocher stepped into Reese's shoes so there was no lost motion there.

But in the case of Jurges, the Giant shortstop is the key man of his infield, a clutch hitter, and an all-around valuable man. It is recalled that any pennant hopes the Giants might have cherished last year vanished when he was suspended in July for 10 days after his moist argument with Umpire George Magerkurth.

Jurges may not be out that long this time as a result of being felled by one of Bucky Walters' pitches last Sunday, but it might be long enough to destroy the delicate balance of the Giants.

For the Giants are a team of balance. Bill Terry isn't working with a team of stars this year. He has some men of better than average ability, such as Harry Danning, Jurges, Burgess Whitehead, and, currenily at least, Jo-Jo Moore, but it has been the team play as a whole which has kept the club near the top and confounded the critics.

N. Y. Commission Fixes 54 Days Of Horse Racing

By the Associated Press

Aqueduct, N. Y., June 25.—It was announced here today by the New York State Racing Commission that the autumn dates for the four racing associations which held meetings in the metropolitan section had been fixed and approved at a meeting of the commission held last Monday.

There will be 54 racing days, exclusive of amateur racing, between September 2 and November 3. Aqueduct has been assigned 18 days from September 2 to September 21; Belmont Park will have 12 days between September 23 and October 5; Jamaica will have 12 days between October 7 and October 19, and Empire City will race 12 days between October 21 and November 2.

Ann Powell Gains Finals In Girls' Play

Wrist Better; Meets Margaret Parsons For Title Today

Heat appliances having eased the pain in an injured wrist which had twice postponed the match, Ann Powell yesterday gained the final round of the City of Washington tennis tournament, beating Mary Brookings, 10—8, 6—1, at Friends School.

Both players were unseeded. Miss Brookings had eliminated top-seeded Betty Jacob en route to the semifinals, but was unable to do much with her opponent yesterday after a hard-fought first set.

Miss Powell, who had feared her wrist was broken until X-rays taken yesterday morning proved that fear groundless, will meet unranked Margaret Parson for the title today at 2 p. m. The consolation singles final between Ann Cullen and Miriam Kreiseman will be staged at 1, and the doubles final between Betty Jacobs and Miss Cullen and Ruth Johnsen and Marjorie Snowden at 3 o'clock.

Outsider Surprises In Boys' Net Tourney

Unranked Jack Timothy Upsets Third Seeded Ned Sacks and Gill, Jr.; Bensinger and Wadden Win Impressively Among Juniors

By Jack Munhall

While the battle for the City of Washington junior tennis title remained clear cut yesterday, with all favorites advancing to the semifinals at Columbia, the boys' division was thrown into a turmoil as an "outsider" let loose with a double-barrelled upset.

Diminutive Jack Timothy, stocky, unranked entry from the Army and Navy Country Club, eliminated G. Bach Gill, jr., in the second round, 6—1, 6—0, and with scant rest returned to the courts to surprise third-seeded Ned Sacks, of St. Alban's, in a thumping 6—0, 6—1 victory.

By his double triumph, scored at the expense of a pair of formidable appoinents and with loss of only two games in four sets, Timothy became a dangerous dark horse threat for the title vacated by Bobby Bensinger.

Bensinger Threatens

Advancing to the round of four, together with Timothy, were top-seeded Peter Fratt, of Leland Junior High, who beat Julian Richards, 6—3, 6—3; second-seeded Sam Doyle, of Friends' School, who overcame Don Forman, 6—1, 6—4, and unranked LeRoy Morgan, of Chevy Chase Country Club, who defeated Harry Ong, 6—2, 6—3.

Meantime, the junior division, recovering from the upset Monday of fourth-seeded Arthur Farrington, settled into stride with all indications pointing to a final-round match between Bensinger, pre-tournament favorite, and second-seeded Tom Wadden.

Bensinger, rebounding sharply after his scare Monday in the second round by Bob Threadgill, walloped Murdough Madden, 6—1, 6—1, while Wadden, the University of North Carolina freshman star, showed power to spare in blasting red-thatched Sterling Lee to 6—2, 6—4 defeat.

Bensinger, his fine all-around game functioning with usual efficiency, outclassed Madden, who earlier in the day had dispatched Emmet Sheehan, of Gonzaga, in the first round, 6—4, 6—1.

Impressive though he was, Bensinger did not, however, obscure the performance of Wadden, hard-hitting former District boys' champion, who looms as this city's most promising bet to win senior national ranking in a few years.

Possessed of one of the fastest services and most smashing forehands in local circles—junior or senior—Wadden overpowered Lee despite the fact that the Edgemoor Club representative was playing good tennis, especially in the first set.

Fisher, Wait Win

Wadden faltered momentarily in the second set to fall behind, 4—1, but then with a chance to square the match, Lee slipped and Wadden simultaneously rallied to win five consecutive games and close out the victory in straights sets.

In the other two junior quarter-finals, third-seeded Ben Fisher, of Roosevelt, staged a courageous comeback to eliminate Central's Carl Maier, 3—6, 7—5, 6—0, and John Waits, jr., unseeded, beat Charley Hackney, Western't No. 3 player, 6—3, 6—4. It was a coveted victory for Waits since Hackney Monday had accounted for fourth-seeded Farrington.

Singles will be delayed to Thursday while doubles open today at Columbia, with Bensinger and Wadden odds-on favorites to win the junior championship, and Delos Smith and Gill almost as heavy choices in the boys' section. Seeded second to Wadden and Bensinger is the Roosevelt High School combination of Eli Gottlieb and Fisher. Second choice in the boys' tournament are Fratt and Forman.

Results:
JUNIOR
Second round—Murdough Madden defeated Emmet Sheehan, 6—1, 6—1.

Guggino Signed For Semifinal Bout On Monday's Card

Carl (Red) Guggino, Washington lightweight, will fight in the eight-round semifinal on Monday night's card featuring Wild Bill Boyd and Danny Hasset, heavyweights, in a 10-rounder at Griffith Stadium.

Guggino will meet Johnny Miller, Baltimore colored 135-pounder. Billy Banks, local colored featherweight, will fight Jackie Carter, Wilmington lightweight, in a six-rounder, and Art Lind, middleweight protege of 160-pound champion Ken Overlin, fights Tiger Jack Flowers, Ben (Evil Eye) Finkel's latest "find," in another six.

The winner of the Boyd-Hassett bout will get a July 29 shot in the ball park at Mello Bettina, former world's light heavyweight champion.

Tiger Owner Asks Bid on Light System

Detroit, June 25 (AP).—Owner Walter O. Briggs of the Detroit Tigers announced today he had asked for plans for a lighting system at Briggs Stadium.

"The system will probably be installed so that we can play night baseball if we desire during the season of 1941," Briggs, who has always been opposed to night games, explained.

Expensive Rookie Put on Retired List by Pirates

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 25.—Johnn Gee, rookie hurler for whom the Pittsburgh Pirates reputedly paid $75,000 in cash and players last year, was placed on the voluntarily retired list today.

Gee injured his arm in spring practice and never pitched an inning for the Bucs this season. He was optioned to Syracuse, but the Syracuse club today informed William Benswanger, president of the Pirates, it had canceled the option.

With the Pirate club already carrying its limit of 25 players, there was no alternative except to put Gee on the retired list, Benswanger said. The retirement will last at least 60 days, and Gee, who came here to discuss his future with Benswanger, confidently predicted he would be in shape by that time.

Mrs. Meckley Wins Maryland State Medal With Record 79

Six of Seven D. C. Entries In 1st Flight

Mrs. Walper, Stokes Tie for 2d at 82; Defending Champion Fails to Make Grade

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
A Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, June 25.—Washington's seven-woman delegation to the Maryland State championships here at Hillendale copped six first flight qualifying berths, including the medal, as the two-time former champion from Kenwood, Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, broke the course record with a 79.

Mrs. Meckley, also medalist in two previous tournaments, was three strokes better than two other district representatives. Capital's Mrs. Leo Walper, runnerup in this tournament last year, and Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, Middle Atlantic champion from Manor. They tied with 82's.

Mrs. Pray Has 84

Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor Club champion, sunk an approach shot on the eighteenth hole for an 84, fourth best score of the day. First Baltimorean among the low scorers was Jeanette Myers, of Suburban, with an 83.

Mrs. Harvey J. Cooper, Kenwood, second flight runnerup in last week's District championship made the championship flight grade by a three-stroke margin with an 88 while safely in the first 16 was Congressional titlist, Mrs. Myron Davy, who posted an 89. The only other Washingtonian entered was Mrs. George Goetzman, Congressional, who qualified for the third flight with a 206.

Biggest upset of the day was the failure of the Baltimore City champion and last year's medalist, Mrs. T. Chluderberg, of Fivefarms, to make the first flight. She was one stroke too many with a 92. Defending titleholder, Mrs. Jerome Sloman, suburban tied Mrs. Cooper's 88.

Out in 42

Mrs. Meckley's record round included a trio of three-putt greens, one that led to a big 7 on the sixth hole. However, she played the last three holes of the first nine even with men's par, 4-4-3, to be out in 42. Coming back she was only 2 over men's par with a 37, including a birdie 3 on the thirteenth, where a 6-footer found the cup.

Mrs. Stokes was worried about qualifying after starting poorly with 6-5-6 and to go out in 44. She had the second best back nine of the day, however, a 38, that included a birdie deuce on the twelfth, where her tee shot rimmed the cup, just missing a hole-in-one. She sunk an 8-foot putt on the sixteenth for a birdie 3.

Mrs. Walper's 82 was fashioned from nines of 43 and 39. The finalist in the District Championship last week ran into real trouble on the sixth and one-putted for a double-bogey seven after finding the woods in two. Her back nine of 39 was featured by a spectacular birdie on the thirteenth where her approach shot took one bounce on the green and on the second bounded into the cup and stayed there.

Five Playoff 91's

Five tied at 91 played off for the last three places in the championship flight with Elizabeth Bonthron, Hillendale, Mrs. H. C. Trace, Terra Mariae, and Effie Bowes, Elkridge, winning out over Katherine Heuisler and Mrs. Fred Lines. Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. Walper also played off for the preferred No. 2 spot in the championship flight pairings, with Mrs. Walper winning on the first hole with a par four.

The Washington players all drew Baltimoreans for first-round opponents, with Mrs. Meckley opposing Effie Bowes.

9:40—Mrs. Betty Meckley (Kenwood) (79) vs. Effie Bowes (Elkridge) (91).
9:45—Gladys Greiner (Elkridge) (86) vs. Mrs. Regina Downs (Hillendale) (89).
9:50—Jeanette Myers (Suburban) vs. Mrs. Myron Davy (Congressional) (89).
9:55—Mrs. L. G. Pray (Manor) (84) vs. Mrs. Redmond Stewart (Greenspring Valley) (89).
10:00—Mrs. Leo Walper (Capital) (82) vs. Elizabeth Bonthron (Hillendale) (91).
10:05—Ann Milke (Hillendale) (88) vs. Mrs. Harvey Cooper (Kenwood) (88).
10:10—Mrs. Walter R. Stokes (Manor) (82) vs. Mrs. H. C. Trace (Terramariae) (91).
10:15—Mrs. Jerome Sloman (Suburban) (88) vs. Mrs. M. Louise Bell (Terramariae) (89).

District-Owned Stable Ready for Senator Reynold's Visit

In a good-natured controversy over a District racing bill, George E. Allen, then commissioner, offered to give Senator Bob Reynolds, of North Carolina, his horse, Worthowning. The solon looked the horse over and said he would rather have the goat, a mascot. This year Worthowning won some $2,800 in purse money and was sold for $300. Among the horses under his care at Charles Town, Trainer Frank James, of Washington, has several owned by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen. Should Senator Reynolds return to the stable he will have a variety of mascots to steer him away from a gift horse. Strange as it seems, there are, living in one stall, a dog with nine puppies, a baby skunk, two white rats, a chicken, and William, the faous goat. Oscar Carrington, formerly groom of Worthowning, holds the rats while Dumps, the dog, nurses her family. The skunk, named "Barrymore," and "Pickie," the chicken, are on the mother dog's back. Such gatherings of mascots are not uncommon at Charles Town. Mrs. Al. J. Boyle's Dalmatian dog is raising a family of six pups unconcerned about the presence of two mother cats and their litters of kittens

Bolton Wins Junior Golf Title in Upset

Bethesda High Graduate Beats Maryland State Field by Five Strokes With 146; District Entries Win All Four Trophies

Baltimore, Md., June 25.—Freddie Bolton, 17-year-old graduate of Bethesda High School, turned the Maryland State Junior Championship into an upset rout at Terra Marie today, winning the 36-hole medal tournament by a five stroke margin with a 146 total.

The 6 foot 3½ inch representative of Kenwood Club, led at the end of the morning round with a 71 and he was around in 75 in the afternoon to top the favored players by a comfortable margin. His total was six over par.

Washington entries won all four trophies, including the runner-up cup that went to the District amateur champion and favorite, Ralph Bogart, who won a four-hole, three-way playoff over District Schoolboy Champion Earle Skinker and Jimmy Downey, of Hillendale. They tied with 151 totals. Bogart was one under par in the playoff. Downey was one over and Skinker two over.

Vass Wins

George Vass, 17-year-old Western High student and also a Kenwood member, won the 16-17 year age class trophy, also by the playoff route. He had 76-77, 153 and was tied by Robert Keene, Bethesda basketball star, with 78-75. Vass was even par in the four-hole playoff and won by three strokes.

The under 16-years class cup went to Arthur Myers, Roosevelt High student and Manor Club member, whose 79-81, 160 total won by several strokes.

Dick Burgess, captain of the Tech High team, went home with the day's hard luck story, but it was his own fault. Dick posted a morning 72 and was still within striking distance when he played the first nine of the afternoon round in 39. However on the tenth he missed a short putt, lost his head for a minute and picked up the ball, a move that carries a disqualification penalty.

Worked Hard

Bolton had his eyes on this championship since his defeat by George Vass in the schoolboy tourney. He has been practicing daily and his efforts were rewarded with the one-sided victory. He hit the ball like a champion all day including a great out-of-trouble shot on the fourteenth hole that saved him at last two strokes. His five birdies included two on the short par three thirteenth, one by chipping in the cup from off the green and the other resulting from a 15-foot putt.

Bogart was 76-75 while Skinker's rounds were reversed but he lost four strokes to Bogart on one hole in the afternoon. He lost a ball on the fourteenth hole, carrying a two-stroke penalty, and he also found a ditch and ended up with a big eight.

The Baltimore boys had a bad day, with Downey's 151 the best effort of the host city entries. Bill Cassedy of Argyle Club in Silver Spring, was out of the prize list but he had the distinction of making two eagles, both on the fourth hole.

Bolton is undecided as to whether he will enter the District Junior Championship that starts today, as is George Vass.—WHITTLESEY.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald
Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Sidney Hudson makes a large gain in the race for man of the month honors following his performance last night against the White Sox. Points were distributed as follows:

To Hudson, ten points, because he kept the Nats in the ball game with four-hit pitching in the first eight innings and because he held them in check after they put the tying run on base in the ninth. He also drove in a run with a hit.

To Charley Gelbert, five points, because his sixth-inning triple figured in three Washington runs and because he played a brilliant game in the field despite his error.

To Cecil Travis, five points, because he made two of the Nats' hits, drove in their first run, scored two himself, and helped to stop the ninth inning rally with a spectacular play on Kennedy's hot smash.

To Buddy Myer, four points because he made a double and two singles, drove in a run and scored a run.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because one of his two hits led to the Nats' first run.

To George Case, two points, because he singled and doubled.

The totals:

Dutch Leonard	57	Johnny Weiaj	23
Sidney Hudson	45	Gerald Walker	21
George Case	44	Jimmy Pofahl	15
Zeke Bonura	42	Al Evens	12
Buddy Lewis	36	Joe Haynes	10
Walter Masterson	35	Buddy Myer	9
Ken Chase	33	Charley Gelbert	9
Cecil Travis	28	Sammy West	5

Loomis Takes Mallory Cup Race Lead

Connecticut School's Crew Scores 26¼ Points at Annapolis

By the Associated Press

Butler Whiting, jr., skippered the Loomis crew, from Windsor, Conn., to a third in the first race and a clean first in the second race. Donald Bachem and Courtland Ames are crew members.

Crews from 14 prep schools participated in the two eight-mile races which will place seven crews in final competition for the Mallory Cup. Three-man crews from each school used Naval Academy "knockabouts" to sail under a strong wind over the leeward-windward course.

Deerfield Second

Second to Loomis' 26¼ points was Deerfield school, of Deerfield, Mass., with 24¼ points. Deerfield's skipper Arthur Pounds and crewmen James Starkweather and Bourne Upham won the first race but placed fifth in the second trial.

Belmont Hill school, from South Byfield, Mass., took third with 23 points by taking fifth in the first race and second in the other race. Belmont Hill has twice laid claim to the Mallory Cup by regatta victories in 1934 and 1937.

One more preliminary race will be held tomorrow morning to decide the entries for the three final races to be held tomorrow afternoon and all day Thursday.

Finishers Listed

The remaining schools finished the first day in this order: Kent School, Kent, Conn., 21; Tabor Academy, Marion, Mass., 17; St. Andrew's School, Middletown, Del., 16; St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and Hotchkiss School, Lakeville, Conn., 14; Choate School, Wallingford, Conn., and St. George's School, Newport, R. I., 13; St. Mark's School, South Borough, Mass., 10; Hill School, Pottsdam, Pa., 9; Cheshire Academy, Cheshire, Conn., 8; Avon Old Farms, Avon, Conn., 2.

The order of finish:

First race — Deerfield, Tabor, Loomis, St. Paul's, Belmont Hill, Kent, St. Andrew's, Hotchkiss, Cheshire, St. Mark's, Choate, Hill, St. George's, Avon.

Second race—Loomis, Belmont Hill, Kent, St. George's, Deerfield, Choate, St. Andrew's, Hotchkiss, Hill, St. Mark's, Tabor, St. Paul's, Avon.

Nobody Loses In News Hawks' Golf Tournament

By the Associated Press

It happened in the Richmond Newspapermen's Golf Association tournament over the Glenwood Golf Club course when the press of news cut the field to 14.

Every player won at least one award, and after distribution of the prizes the executive committee discovered that there were two left over. The two committeemen awarded the trophies to themselves for "diligent and meritorious efforts" in conducting the tournament on one of the hottest days of the summer.

Golf Victors Rewarded

With the assurance that the event will take place annually from this year on, Commerce Department golf tournament winners yesterday received trophies from Undersecretary of Commerce Edward J. Noble. T. Welby Kines, of Coast and Geodetic Survey, took first prize with a 72, and Thomas Diggs, of National Bureau of Standards, was second. A total of 71 golfers turned out for the event at Kenwood.

Grace Torreyson Paces Aces' 24-6 Victory

Grace Torreyson with five hits in five times up, including two homers, paced the Arlington Aces to a 24-6 victory over Internal Revenue in a Metro Girls' Softball League game on the Jefferson Memorial Field last night.

Pitcher Wants Team

Kavakos Wins

Oklahoma U. Stars Signed By Pro Rams

2 Former Gridders Join Cleveland Eleven For 1940 Campaign

Cleveland, June 25.—Two former Oklahoma University backfield stars, who were obtained by Coach Earl "Dutch" Clark in trades, have signed to play with the Cleveland Rams National Football League team this fall.

Dick Favor and Hugh McCollough, both halfbacks, are the former Sooner stars, who will be reunited as Rams this season. Coach Clark obtained the right to negotiate with Favor, an Oklahoma star, last year and the Philadelphia Eagles' third choice in the 1940 draft, by trading Chuck Cherundolo, former Penn State star and one of the league's top-flight centers, to the Eagles.

McCollough came to the Rams in a deal with the Pittsburgh Steelers in which Coach Clark surrendered his 1940 draft rights to the Steelers on Berlyn Condit, Carnegie Tech backfield star, last year. McCollough was Pittsburgh's fourth choice in the 1939 draft and he was the Steelers' best ball carrier last season. McCollough and Favor were teammates on the 1938 Oklahoma championship team.

Favor, the outstanding blocker in the Big Six Conference last year, and McCollough are expected to take up the slack in the Rams' backfield caused by the retirement of Corby Davis, former All-American fullback at Indiana University. Davis, after playing two seasons of brilliant football with the Rams, obtained his masters degree in physical education at Indiana this spring and signed as athletic director and head football coach at the swanky St. Charles, Ill., High School.

Rassle Cards At Riverside And Turner's

Stadium Bouts Tonight, Arena's Tomorrow; Battle Royal a Feature

Ernie Dusek heads the Riverside clan in a battle with Frank Sexton, while brother Rudy comes back to waltz with Warren Bockwinkel. The feminine interest lies in a hair-pulling tussle between Doris Dean, of Atlanta, Ga., and Lola Lopez, from old Spain.

In the Riverside preliminaries, Ed White faces Bob Russell and Ed Newman meets Ralph Garibaldi in the curtain-raiser at 8:30 p. m.

Tomorrow's affair at Turner's Fourteenth and W street arena is a benefit, with a portion of the proceeds going to the fund to send needy youngsters to summer camps nearby.

In the free-for-all, Zim Zam Zum, The Irish Angel, John Bognar, Juan Olaguivel and Al Norcus will cavort. Two other special bouts on the card bring out Matros Kirilenko against Michele Leone and Felix Slovikowski against Karol Krauser.

Cochran Scores K. O.

Newark, N. J., June 25 (AP).—Red Cochrane, 141, of Elizabeth scored a technical knockout over Maurice Arnoult of France, 138, in 1:30 of the fifth round of the scheduled 10-round feature bout at Meadowbrook Bowl tonight.

"THANKS FOR INTRODUCING ME TO the Perfect-taste cigar"

I can't forget that night, John. It was perfect—everything about it. I was delighted with the moonlight and the music—and you were so pleased with your Robt. Burns cigar that father introduced to you.

And then you said, "What a night—what a girl—and what a cigar! There's nothing like a Robt. Burns with its all-Havana filler to give you perfect taste. And I notice that you seem to like its fragrant aroma . . ."

Then I knew what you meant by "Perfect taste"... A Robt. Burns Cigar tastes perfect—and it's in perfect taste everywhere—any time.

Intelligentsia Wins First Purse, Pays $25 at Charles Town

4-Year-Old Just Misses Track Mark

Beats San Salvator By Length to Wire; Light of Morn Wins Easily to Pay $59

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 25.—Intelligentsia, long on name and generally short on running ability, picked today to turn in the best race of her career. With George Cardoza, a little colored jockey, who rides far out on a horse's neck, doing the booting, the 4-year-old daughter of Caid and Hot Brain won her first purse in her life, defeating N. J. Fillman's Sun Salvator by a length with Mrs. J. B. Belk's Walter Light a like distance from second money.

Racing in the colors of A. E. Pierce, Intelligentsia was an outsider in the betting and brought her backers a pay-off of $25. Her time of 1.20 was brilliant and was only four-fifths of a second over the track record.

Sun Salvator, an 18-1 shot, appeared headed for a runaway victory. Jockey Bernhardt sent the veteran to the front in the run to the first turn and drew him out on the backstretch. Pandoramint, which had stumbled directly after the break, was second with Intelligentsia third and steadied.

Won 'Going Away'

Approaching the stretch, Sun Salvator saved ground and Intelligentsia came to the outside. Bernhardt went to the whip and tried with all his might to keep the leader going. But Intelligentsia was not to be denied. Cardoza kicked the filly along and she won in true "going-away" fashion.

After a pair of rather dull efforts, a 2-year-old maiden gave the fans something to talk about when she won by 12 lengths. Light of Morn, a daughter of Our General, paid $59.40.

When friends of Raymond Tartiere, owner of Light of Morn, went to his box to congratulate him, one made bold inquiry about his apparent lack of interest in the victory. "Oh, that," responded Tartiere, arousing himself with obvious effort from what his friends thought to be a mental fog. "Oh, yes, of course, I'm pleased. But you know, I can't think much about the horse, much as I'm fond of her; I can't get my mind off the news that has just come to me."

Son Decorated

The friends, knowing that Tartiere, a native of France, has a son in service "over there," were prepared for tragic news. But it was anything but tragic, the message Tartiere had received. It was news that his son, Jack, who is laision officer with the Coldstream Guards, has been decorated with the Croix de Guerre, and with the military cross, the latter an English award for bravery that corresponds with the French decoration. Young Tartiere, who speaks English as fluently as he speaks his native French, had seen service in Northern France and, for weeks his father, who resides on his farm near Middleburg, Va., there breeding and raising thoroughbred horses on a modest scale, had no word from him. The message announcing the decorations for brevery came from England, indicating to the anxious father that his son was among the Allied soldiers evacuated from French soil.

Tartiere, a comparative newcomer to American racing, has his stock in the hands of the veteran Virginia horseman, L. C. Leith.

MILL RUN	(Root)	114	1	8	8	7h	7h	63.50
MISS POOL	(Cardoza)	106	7	7	7h	8	8	33.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED WINGS, $3.80, $2.60, $2.20; GOLD SWEEP, $3.60, $2.60; SQUAWKER, $2.60.

RED WINGS had keen speed to draw out to long lead and was kept to pressure to stave off closing bid of GOLD SWEEP. The latter had to be hustled to hold forward position early, saved ground and closed gamely under punishment. SQUAWKER was hard ridden to force early pace and weakened gradually. MORE GRAND went evenly. BUCK BENNY pulled up lame.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:06. Off 3:06½. Winner, R. Tartiere's ch. f. (2), by Our General—Soft Lights. Trained by L. C. Leith. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	Stretch	Fin.	Straight

NINA'S BOY	(Keller)	112	5	4	7h	7	8	58.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIGHT OF MORN, $59.40, $14.20, $6.40; MR. JIM, $3.60, $2.40; TELLEMOFF, $6.00.

LIGHT OF MORN, showing brilliant speed, went to front in opening furlong, opened a long lead and was galloping at end. MR. JIM was hard ridden on inside while closest to pace and closed gamely. TELLEMOFF, tardy at break, saved ground and closed full of run. GALLO DIPPER could not keep up early and closed some ground. MISS ROXIE and VALENTINE ANN had early foot.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36½. Off 3:37. Winner, Mrs. J. Goodwin's br. h. (5), by Ed Crump—Zellie. Trained by J. Goodwin. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:31⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZUMP, $9.40, $3.80, $3.40; BRAIN CHILD, $4.00, $3.40; ROUGH BUDDY, $5.80.

ZUMP, excellently handled, was allowed to settle into best stride, moved up gradually on outside, responded to punishment and wore down BRAIN CHILD. The latter raced STAR ON into defeat, took command and was tiring at end. ROUGH BUDDY was hard handled and showed good effort. STAR ON was hustled to front and weakened after 3 furlongs. TULEYRIES STAR was not a serious factor.

Daily Double, LIGHT OF MORN and ZUMP, Paid $381.40

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:04. Off 4:05. Winner, Mrs. M. Knierem's b. f. (4), by Chestnut Oak—Lena Rinehart. Trained by C. Wade. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:27⅘.

STAR TURN	(C. Kirk)	111	7	6	6h	7h	8	8	8	32.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LENA GIRL, $5.00, $3.00, $2.40; CONNAMISTA, $5.40, $3.30; CORA KAY, $3.00.

LENA GIRL, well up from beginning, responded willingly when put to hard drive and was up in concluding strides. CONNAMISTA raced LADY DOCTOR into submission, drew clear and just failed to last while under good handling. CORA KAY, away slowly, came through on inside entering homestretch and closed gamely. HIGH ROSE, steadied going to first turn, was put to drive and raced on own courage thereafter. CHILLY EBBIE never a was a factor.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:31½. Winner, J. E. Simmons' b. g. (4), by Mowlee—Rea. Trained by C. A. Cranford. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:16⅘.

MISS KANTAR	(Bernhardt)	106	4	8	8	8	8	8	78.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REMOLEE, $18.80, $6.80, $5.00; OSOFREE, $3.40, $3.00; DEODO, $5.00.

REMOLEE was closest to pace of OSOFREE, responded to take command when placed to drive, drew clear gradually and was under pressure at end. OSOFREE assumed command at once and held on gamely when challenged. DEODO could not threaten seriously while forwardly placed. ASTERISK saved ground and closed gamely. ELTONHEAD stumbled leaving gate and tired after reaching contention.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:59½. Off 5:01. Winner, A. E. Pierce's b. f. (4), by Caid—Hot Brain. Trained by E. Marshall. Value to winner, $430; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:20.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INTELLIGENTSIA, $25.00, $8.40, $3.60; SUN SALVATOR, $20.20, $5.20; WALTER LIGHT, $2.80.

INTELLIGENTSIA, rated while closed up in early stages, came to outside approaching stretch, responded gamely when shaken up and wor down SUN SALVATOR to be opening gap at end. SUN SALVATOR took command under hustling tactics, was hard ridden while saving ground and weakened under punishment. WALTER LIGHT had no excuses. HEEL DUST was off slowly and closed some ground. PANDORAMINT stumbled after break, was rushed to contention and tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:27. Off 5:27½. Winner, J. E. Crider's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KENNER, $37.40, $12.40, $8.00; BLUE CYCLONE, $5.60, $4.40; BLIND BROOK, $4.60.

KENNER assumed command at once, drew out, saved ground and had to be put to pressure to barely last. BLUE CYCLONE was within striking distance from start, came out for racing room and closed gamely. BLIND BROOK moved up menacingly along rail and finished in close quarters. TEE OFF dwelt at break and came with bold rush in stretch run. SUGABOOT lacked early speed and closed boldly. WAR RUMOR was steadied while closest to pace and weakened.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:57½. Off 5:58. Winner, Mrs. F. L. Furr's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNTER PASS, $14.80, $6.20, $3.20; PENCADER, $5.20, $3.00; JUDGE'S BID, $2.80.

COUNTER PASS, going in greatly improved form, was allowed to settle into best stride, moved to outside of horses gradually, improved position and closed with rush to be up in final strides. PENCADER took command after an eighth, got good pace, but could not resist winner. JUDGE'S BID was shut off in opening quarter while attempting to take command, came through on inside and finished in close quarters.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

I understand that the ancient mare, Counter Fass, will be retired any day now for breeding purposes. Speaking of breeding, Al J. Boyle yesterday purchased the 4-year-old daughter of On Watch and Fizzaz, Well Aware, from Benjamin Cittadino, of Long Branch, N. J. This filly is a half sister of Attention, the 2-year-old Equipoise colt which won the recent National Stallion Stakes, and she has been racing here. Mr. Boyle plans to breed her next spring. Bryan Field, Delaware Park publicity chief, writes to remind us not to forget Governor's Day tomorrow at his plant. Today's Charles Town feature is named for Gabe Murphy, graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown University. Several of the Hilltop staff took a sneak preview of the races yesterday. The cast has drawn six real good distance horses. Cy Butler, sent Myron back to Delaware and returned with Banberry Belle, a 2-year-old. I hope that rider doesn't think he was fooling anybody with that ride on High Rose yesterday. I thought Hacker was the champ. Glen Frye, local representative of Stevens, Inc., reports that his wife is recovering from a successful operation Sammy Palumbo's victory on Zump was his thirty-third of the meeting. He is five behind his record of last year when he averaged one a day. However, he had to take two days off at this meeting because of sickness. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First Race—Sail By could be the right one in this affair, particularly on a fast track. Gets an outside post position that should help. Happy Hostess has several good races to her credit and is dangerous. Prince Turley is as good as his ailing legs. If they hold up he will be close up.

Second Race—Super John has shown ability at this route and appears nicely placed. Needs only the right handling. Col. Hatfield turned in a fine performance in that recent outing and is a threat. Last Revue could awake at good odds.

Third Race—Miss Pilgrim has been knocking at the door and deserves a top selection in a field of this sort. Congo Prince is a fair horse and belongs close up. Camela, with a change of riders, could be prominent.

Fourth Race—Sea Boy could be the right one here. Has been racing over his head and this company provides a nice spot. Wam is as good as those recent fine efforts. Romney Royal to take care of the minor award.

Fifth Race—Sunny Rose has been threatening behind the best around these parts. Gets comparatively light weight and I'm going to string along. Dulie has done about everything asked and may be hard to beat with 125 pounds. Palkin should be a factor.

Sixth Race—Butterman is in good hands and will get a fine ride. Likes the route and I see no reason for mistakes. Time Her turned on the heat last out and is

Commodities Plunge With Cotton in Van

Wheat Off 1⅜ to 1⅞; 'War Staples' Show Sharpest Losses

By the Associated Press

Commodity prices tumbled in all futures markets yesterday while traders uneasily read into Prime Minister Churchill's speech the threat England had been deprived of French sea power.

Wheat at Season's Low

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—Wheat futures sold off from 1⅜ to 1⅞ cents under Monday's closing levels today and final prices were virtually the lowest for the season.

The weakness of the grain market was influenced by favorable crop and weather reports, lower security prices, uncertainty over the war situation in Europe and lack of demand in the face of selling by houses with eastern connections.

Wheat opened ⅛ to ¼ cent off from yesterday's final prices and continued to drift lower throughout the session. The close was 1⅜ to 1¾ cents off; July, 77⅛@79; September, 78⅛@78¾.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¾ lower at Winnipeg, 1⅛ to 1⅜ off at Minneapolis, and 1⅜ to 2¼ down at Kansas City. All Canadian deliveries were at the minimum pegged levels.

Range follows:

Cotton Futures Slump

New York, June 25 (AP).—Cotton futures broke 19 to 25 points today as traders' nerves tightened over the more ominous view of the war opened by Prime Minister Churchill's speech.

Closing near the day's bottoms, final quotations were lowest in more than a week. All deliveries from December forward slipped below the 9-cent a pound mark.

Sugar off 6 to 9 Points

New York, June 25 (AP).—Speculative and July liquidation undermined sugar futures in a thin nervous market today.

The world list lost 6 to 9 points on turnover of 5,300 tons; July 95 cents bid, September $1.50 bid. European uncertainties were the chief deterrent to buying.

Raw sugar sold at 2.70 cents a pound when 1,000 tons of Philippines due July 12 traded. Prompt Cubas were offered at 2.72 to 8.85 cents duty-paid.

No. 3 range follows:

Boston Wool

Boston, June 25 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—The Boston wool market was very active today. Trading was confined mostly to small quantities of fine wools needed for immediate consumption. Some interest was being shown in country-packed medium bright fleece wools at 39@40 cents, in the grease, but it was very difficult to find any offering below 40 cents. Sales of fine Ohio delaine were reported at 38@39 cents, in the grease.

Fabricated Steel Orders Up in May

New York, June 25 (AP).—New orders for fabricated structural steel in May jumped to 117,789 tons from 67,104 in April but lagged far behind 158,848 tons in May, 1939, the American Institute of Steel Construction said today.

May shipments declined to 109,191 tons from 115,869 in April and 125,818 in May last year.

Exchange Market

New York, June 25 (AP).—Free sterling advanced 3 cents in relation to the dollar today and swiftly cancelled Monday's decline.

Support foreign exchange men said was attracted by the ruling contracts made prior to June 8 could be settled with free sterling instead of sterling brought at the official rate.

The Canadian dollar advanced ¼ cent to 81⅛ United States cents. The Swiss franc dipped .03 of a cent.

Official Canadian control board rates for United States dollars: Buying, 10 per cent premium; selling, 11 per cent premium; equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying, 9.91 per cent; selling, 9.00 per cent.

Canadian dollar in New York open market 18⅜ per cent discount, or $1.25 United States cents.

Hanes Named To Directorate Of Martin Co.

Former Treasury Aide Rejoins Plane Firm; $1 Dividend Voted

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 25.—Election of John W. Hanes, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, to the board of directors was announced today by the Glenn L. Martin Co.

MR. HANES.

Hanes was a Martin director until his appointment to the Security and Exchange Commission in 1937. He resigned as Undersecretary of the Treasury last December.

Directors voted a dividend of $1 a share on capital stock payable July 19 to stockholders of record as of July 9, 1940.

Glenn L. Martin, president, reported contracts on hand totaled $110,000,000, with $25,000,000 represented by United States Government orders, plus an undisclosed amount "on a new type bombing plane for the English government."

The board was notified the British government had declared it would carry out all existing French contracts which the French had assigned to the English.

Tobacco Review

Baltimore, June 25.—Maryland tobacco receipts here for the last week were 658 hogsheads. Sales totaled 1,368 hogsheads, which leaves only small stocks, mostly greenish tobacco, unsold in first hands. Prices were somewhat higher, especially for medium to good grade, of which the offerings were limited.

Crop Prospects

Maryland—Since the last report of June 6, transplanting has continued, and, excepting in the northern part, most of the work is now completed. Dry weather prevailed during the last week and rain would now be welcome. 1939 crop (price per 100 pounds): Firm leaf—Nondescript, 4.50@5.00; dull and greenish, 5.00@15.00; sound to good common, 8.00@25.00; short to medium bright, 20.00@34.00; good to fine red or bright, 35.00@40.00. Seconds—Common, 5.00@10.00; medium, 10.00@20.00; good to fine, 21.00@38.00. Badly mixed hogsheads, from $2 to $8 per 100 pounds lower.

Share Prices Break as Wall Street Registers Gloom Over Terms of Franco-German Truce

New York, June 25.—Share prices broke severely today and there was an accompanying fall in commodity quotations as Wall Street registered gloom over announced terms of the Franco-German armistice and exuded disappointment because of old guard opposition to Wendell L. Willkie as the Republican Presidential nominee.

The break in stocks, which extended to four points in some issues, was highlighted by the descent of the aircrafts to a new average low for the year. From their highs recorded on April 16, the air section now has lost approximately one third.

Steels, metals, munitions and other of the war stock also took severe punishment although trading was moderate. The turnover on the big board was 694,270 shares. The 100 key stocks in the New York Herald Tribune average lost 0.67 point while the independent aircraft compilation showed an average dip of 1.68 points for the 10 issues which are components.

German Issues Firm

In the bond section there was further firming of German and some of the Italian issues with domestic corporates showing few price changes of note. The foreign exchange market was orderly and sterling gained a little. War news, crop news and lack of demand put cotton and wheat prices on the toboggan, the former closing 19 to 25 points off while wheat sank 1¾ to 1⅞ cents a bushel.

Today's reaction in stocks was a progressive affair. The list started weak and continued so throughout the day with last quotations for the most part at or near the lows for the session. Selling was induced by fears and uncertainties.

Among aircraft issues which recorded new lows were Douglas, down 4; Glenn Martin and Curtiss-Wright. Loft, the speculative favorite which frequently moves against the trend, moved with the runs of stocks, declining 2½ on the second largest turnover of any issue, Commonwealth & Southern being at the top. Steel common was off 2⅛, Bethlehem 3½ and Republic 1¾.

General Motors gave up 1½ and Chrysler more than 2 in a soft motors group, while Kennecott, American Smelting and International Nickel all lost more than a point in the metals section. Railroads, utilities and oils lost relatively less than in other sections, although active shares in all three showed small losses. New York Central was off ⅜ at 11⅛. Standard Oil of New Jersey and the Texas Co. each were a point or more lower. Public Service Corporation of New Jersey and North American dipped 1¼ and 1⅞ points, respectively.

Allied Chemical gave up 3 and losses of 3¾ and 4⅝ were recorded respectively in Du Pont and Commonwealth & Southern preferred. Other issues to give up a point or more included Sears Roebuck, American Telephone, General Electric, Goodyear, Great Northern preferred and Pacific Gas & Electric.

Among business news of the day was the forecast by a Chrysler official that very active business with plenty of money in circulation is in prospect; that demand for building materials is holding; that the British will take delivery of steel ordered by the French in this country, and a forecast that 1941 model automobiles may be higher priced than the 1940 cars.

Bond Prices Easier

Generally easier prices prevailed in bond dealings here today with volume on the Stock Exchange reaching $5,747,000, against $3,789,000 on Monday.

United States Treasury issues participated in the easier tone, final prices in the over-counter trading showing declines of 1/32 to 11/32 point in quiet dealings.

Few features were apparent in the foreign section in a small increase in turnover. German agricultural bank 7s and Rome 6½s were up more than 2 points and United States Steel works 6½s sold up 5½ points. Canadian bonds, including Canadian National Railway issues, were inclined to be lower.

Domestic corporate issues also sold off. Rail issues were among the rier loans selling down 0.09 point and the more speculative bonds sagging 0.28 point in the averages. Appreciable improvement in May earnings figures had little bolstering effect in this section. Losses in the more active of the rail loans ranged up to a point or more.

The average of industrial bonds showed a decline of 0.22 point on the day and public utilities were down 0.03 point.

80% Assents Asked Before Oct. 1 to Make Compromise Effective

Seeking to conclude a time-worn financial problem, the Capital Transit Co. and Washington Railway & Electric Co. yesterday announced details of a settlement plan offered to bondholders of two units.

Under the compromise plan, approved recently by the Public Utilities Commission, bondholders of the old Anacostia & Potomac River Railroad Co. and the City & Suburban Railway Co. are offered certificates extending the maturity dates of their present first mortgage bonds to December 1, 1951.

Other modifications would reduce their rates of interest from 5 to 3.75 per cent; would waive the old sinking fund payments and make provision for a new sinking fund of 1.25 per cent per annum of the total amount of both issues assenting to the plan. In addition there are provided new call prices covering redemption of the bonds for the sinking fund or other than for the sinking fund.

Capital Transit Co. is to be the principal obligor and Washington Railway & Electric Co. is to be guarantor.

Holders of $1,678,000 of Anacostia bonds and $1,074,000 of Suburban bonds or approximately 80 per cent of each issue outstanding, must assent to the plan by October 1 to make it effective.

The detailed prospectus under which the offer is being made may be obtained in Washington from the Riggs National Bank or National Metropolitan Bank.

A registration statement for as much as $3,439,000 in certificates of "modification, assumption and guarantee" has been filed with the Securities Commission. These certificates would be offered in exchange for A. & P. R. R. 5s of April 1, 1949, totaling $2,097,000 and City and Suburban 5s of August 1, 1948, totaling $1,342,000.

The compromise settlement also would end court actions instituted by plaintiff bondholders.

Two Rails Allocate 46,000-Ton Order

Cleveland, June 25 (AP).—The Chesapeake & Ohio and Nickel Plate railroads today announced allocation of orders for 46,000 tons of rail. Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation got 26,650 tons of the order, Inland Steel 14,880 and Bethlehem Steel 5,470. C. & O. is taking 35,000 tons of 131-pound rail and Nickel Plate 11,000 tons of 112-pound rail, including 3,800 tons announced last week.

Bill Ackerman

—On Fishing

ACKERMAN

There is always more to be gained by common effort and organization, and that is particularly true in conservation. When the Brotherhood of the Jungle Cock was conceived at Catoctin last April during the campfire where outdoors writers and sportsmen met for the advancement of their individual ideas, it had the immediate benefit of the right kind of organization, and for that reason there has been an enthusiastic response. Jungle Cock feathers now are almost a necessary part of the equipment of thousands of anglers throughout the East and Middle West.

The creed of the Jungle Cocks has been publicised to an almost unbelievable extent. Clark Venable, the Virginia author and sportsman responsible for it, probably did not realize at the time the wonderful thing he was creating, but sportsmen everywhere are recognizing its simplicity and honesty, and even better, are subscribing to its tenents.

Many anglers have been passing up the fishing along the lower Virginia bayshores for the past year or two because the bluefish haven't been running there, and thus they have missed out on some exceptional sport. If there is any doubt about the veracity of that, listen to this!

Capt. Floyd Rollins, of Messick, Va., during the past three days boated 16 fish with a total weight of over 800 pounds. Fifteen of them were big cobia, and the odd one a channel bass.

Cobia are game fish, if the name is deserved by anything that swims, and they are right at their peak now though the season runs through July and August.

At the same time, news from Ocracoke is that the cobia are hitting there, and it was a woman who took the first honors of the season with a 40 pounder.

It was not until last year that sports anglers recognized the fine sport they were passing up in this section of the North Carolina outer banks by not fishing for cobia—a fishing that, with barracuda and dolphin, will make July a banner fishing month.

At Southport this past week there was a 6-foot-4-inch tarpon, weighing 158 pounds, brought in. We would like to tell you how long it took to land this great fish, but that isn't possible, for it was caught in a net.

This is well worth noting, however, for our big-game fishing has had every appearance of being late this year. The presence of tarpon seems to prove it is just about to open up.

Bill Chantland is one of the most consistent fisherman we know of in this fair city of ours, which boasts of one angler out of every four persons. Instead of a party with cake and all the trimmings on his birthday, his friends took him out fishing on Capt. Taft Tippett's Sea Queen. It's fortunate too, that hardheads don't count the same as the candles on the cake, for if they did Bill would be in Methusala's class.

All fish were caught late in the evening, just as were the 50 big hardheads Stephen King and his party brought in to Uncle Billie's.

Early morning or late evening the going was good, but fishing through the middle of the day was just so much lost time.

Barney Welsh Victorious at Tri-State Net

D. C. Champion Beats Cincinnatian; Riggs, Miss Marble Score

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 25.—Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Alice Marble, of Los Angeles, ranking tennis stars of the country, advanced in easy fashion today to second-round play in the Tri-State tourney.

Riggs defeated Robert Trautman, of Cincinnati, 6—0, 6—1.

Miss Marble had little trouble eliminating Dorothy Hankel, of Cincinnati, 6—0, 6—1, while her fellow townswoman, Mary Arnold, held Mary Whittaker, of Cincinnati, 6—0, 6—0.

Ronald Lubin, of Los Angeles, trimmed Guy Garber, of Bay City, Mich., 6—3, 6—2, and Early Bartlett, Southern junior champion, from New Orleans, advanced at the expense of Roland Nord, Cincinnati, 6—3, 6—4.

In the men's singles, Barney Welsh, of Rockville, Md., won over Jim Flinchpaugh, of Cincinnati, 6—3, 6—2, while Arthur Marx, Los Angeles, son of Movie Comedian Groucho Marx, took Bernie Hutten, of Cincinnati, into camp, 6—0, 6—2.

Olen Parks, Mishawaka, Ind., defeated James Ratliff, Cincinnati, 6—4, 6—4, and Joe Blackmon, Bradenton, Fla., defeated Alvin Bunis, Cincinnati, 6—1, 6—2.

Bosox Refuse To Play at Night

St. Louis, June 25 (AP).—The Browns, authorized to double the limit of seven night games, announced today the Boston Red Sox had refused to play twice under the lights and, instead, the Philadelphia Athletics would make three night appearances here.

The remaining schedule of night games for the Browns follows:

June 27, Detroit; July 23, New York (tentative); July 26, Boston; July 30, Washington; August 2, Philadelphia; August 6, Detroit; August 9, Cleveland; August 12, Chicago; September 10, Philadelphia, and September 20, Chicago.

The Browns were scheduled to play their first game with the Athletics tonight, and they previously had opposed Cleveland, New York and Washington, incidentally losing all three games.

Horton Smith Wins Massachusetts Open

Osterville, Mass., June 24 (INS).—Racing through the final round in 70 strokes Horton Smith, Oak Park Ill., late today won the thirty-fourth Massachusetts Open Golf Championship with 287 for four rounds at Oyster Harbors.

Five strokes behind Smith at the start of the final round Gene Anderson, Oyster Harbors, carded a 69 to win second place. He beat out Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Winchester, who started the last round even with Smith. McSpaden covered the final 18 holes in 75 to take third place with a total of 292.

Doctor's Service Ten Wins 4th Game in Row

The Doctor's Service Station softball club took its fourth straight victory behind the pitching of Larry Pizza by defeating the W. B. C. Senators, 13 to 5, on the East Ellipse. Pizza gave up seven hits. The Medicos play Police and Fire, Sons of the American Legion Club, tomorrow at 1 p. m. at Fairlawn.

Ex-Tribe Player Dies

Los Angeles, June 25 (AP).—Jack Adams, 52, one-time well-known baseball player, died at his home last night.

Adams caught for Cleveland in 1910, later was with the Philadelphia National League club and New Orleans, and managed Seattle, of the Pacific Coast League, in the 1920's.

League Berths Open

Berths for baseball teams 14 years and under, and 17 years and under are open in the Western Division of the Washington Boys Club League. Paul Casassa at Michigan 2122 is accepting applications.

Larry MacPhail, 'Hot Potato Luke' Smoke Peace Pipe

By the United Press

New York, June 25.—The old "it-could-only-happen-in-Brooklyn" spirit was kept alive in Flatbush today when Larry MacPhail, the fiery impresario of the Dodgers, and "Hot Potato Luke" Hamlin, eccentric right-hand pitcher, sat down in MacPhail's office and smoked the pipe of peace.

After the conference Hamlin, who has been out of uniform for a week, was restored to good standing and a $300 fine slapped on him in a moment of anguish by MacPhail was revoked. Whether Hamlin's injured feelings have been soothed enough for him to rescue the Dodgers' faltering pitching staff remains to be seen.

The feud between MacPhail and Hamlin might still be alive but for the fact that Brooklyn players held a meeting and appointed Freddy Fitzsimmons, most popular man on the Dodgers, to call on the sulking Hamlin and try to persuade him to come back.

Fitzsimmons talked to Hamlin at his apartment Sunday in this vein: "We need you badly, Luke. Come on back and patch things up with MacPhail. We've lost six games out of eight and it's you duty to come back and help your teammates. We've got a chance to win but we can't if we let personal arguments break up our spirit."

Peacock Returns FromConn. Victory

Roger Peacock, former Midatlantic and District champion, and winner of many local invitation tournaments, returned to Washington yesterday after a triumphant invasion of Connecticut where he teamed with Larry Elliott to win the Tamarack Invitation member-guest golf tournament Saturday and Sunday.

The six-round affair over 108 holes saw the Washingtonian and his partner, former local radio announcer now announcing from New York, win out after four extra holes, on the twenty-second. Peacock had a 72 in the finals after a 68 in the opening rounds Friday morning. One of their opponents in the finals was Charles Pettijohn, jr., former Georgetown University golfing ace.

Lions Sign Ohio Star

Springfield, Ohio, June 25 (AP).—Jim McDonald, former Ohio State University football captain and a back with the Detroit Lions in the National Pro League the last two seasons, was named grid coach at Springfield High School today.

ContractBridge

One successful expert who differs spectacularly from other champions is S. Garton Churchill, preaches light no-trump bids at match-point play, though he advises caution in their use at rubber bridge. He says his weak no-trump call is "a gambling bid to meet a gambling situation."

Today's hand illustrates one of his successes. It was played at duplicate against Mrs. Maude Zontlein, North, and William J. Huske, South. "Church" was seated East.

"When my hand went down," explains the highly original expert, "Mr. Huske stared in amazement and queried, 'How can you ever afford to pass 2½ honor tricks?'

"The answer is that I knew exactly the number of high cards my partner held and also the structure of his hand. It is amazing, though, how much top card strength may be passed with impunity, and even to advantage, when one knows that both hands possess the infirmity of the no-trump distribution. Two odd were made for a top on the board in a strong field, all other teams either passing the hand out or contracting for game.

"The weak no-trump opener is a most effective weapon in match-point play, enabling partner to get to the correct contract quickly, while making it most difficult for the opponents to find their best declaration before they are beyond their depth."

Twin Bill at Ballston

Four baseball games are on the schedule today at Balston Stadium, where the Ballston Boys Club will present a program for the benefit of its athletic fund. At 4:30 Ballston and Barcroft midget teams clash, and Ballston and Lyon Park junior nines tangles. Games at 6:30 bring together Ballston and Barcroft unlimited teams, and the Ballston Bears and Ballston Dodgers.

WHY NOT PAY A LITTLE MORE AND GET A HOUSE YOU CAN LIVE IN?
DOES A MILL VILLAGE APPEAL TO YOU? DO YOU LIKE NURSERY ROOMS FOR BEDROOMS? DO YOU WANT ROOM JUST FOR MERE EXISTENCE OR DO YOU WANT TO STRETCH OUT AND LIVE?
Waverly Village Homes
Offer Two Tremendous Features Which make the difference in living much more than the difference in price.
FIRST:
The neighborhood appeal. Each home is different and looks different. A variety of types, each with personality, dignity and beauty.
SECOND:
Each home is designed for comfortable living by providing bedrooms for double or twin beds—the entire house space has style and convenience essential to proud ownership. The difference, perhaps $150 in cash, makes the difference in what you want and what you will be proud to own.

Today's Radio Highlights

11:30, WMAL—"Forest Travel for Stay-Homers," a new series of summer programs based on imaginary trips to national parks in all parts of the country inaugurates a weekly Wednesday feature of the National Farm and Home Hour.

1:15, P. M., WMAL—William Pitt, in 1775, addressed the English House of Lords on the subject of removing the British troops from Boston. Echoes of History catches a possibility of what the English upper house heard.

3:15 P. M., WOL—From Aqueduct's turf we hear the running of the Gazelle Stakes.

7 WJSV—Ben Bernie, All the Lads, and Lew Lehr take in another session of the Musical Mock Trial.

7, WRC—In these days of admirable Red Cross activity comes a dramatization of its beginnings. Charles Boyer plays Jean Henry Dunant, the Swiss physician whose experiences on the battlefield convinced him that a world-wide organization was needed to aid the wounded and suffering.

7:30, WOL—Mutual again takes up its stand at the Republican National Convention.

7:30, WJSV—Jean Hersholt's Dr. Christian clears up some trouble in "River's End" caused by a self-created "martyr" and he does it in much the manner our own Mary Haworth might pursue.

8, WRC—"Us the Folks Speak" with Labiel Teatter doing the interviews. To elucidate: This is Fred Allen's final offering of the season, a b----k----g on "We, the People" and Gabriel Heatter subtitled: "The Sponsor Wore a Riding Habit—He Had Come There With His Plug."

8, WJSV—Charles Coburn and Helen Mack are introduced by Burns Mantle as the stars in Martin Flavin's comedy, "Broken Dishes."

8:30, WMAL—Roy Shield conducts an open air concert in Chicago's Grant Park.

Further airings from the Republican National Committee are promised this evening at 9:15 by WJSV and WOL; at 10:15 on WJSV, and at 11 on WMAL. WOL will carry the meeting continuously, while the other stations will air shorter periods. During the day one may expect the stations to announce over the air whatever changes or additions there may be expected.

WJSV's own John Charles Daly, the pilot of the "Magic Carpet" and the gentleman who does most of the special events work in Washington for the C. B. S. network and Columbia's station for the Nation's Capital, is one of this town's busiest gentlemen these days. And being among the top ten in busy bees in Philly just now is quite a trick.

Charles is a member of the C. B. S. announcing staff covering the convention and to date he has done everything from hanging off rafters interviewing carpenters to staid and dignified introductions of Representatives Joe Martin and Gov. Harold Stassen.

He is sharing most of the ad lib work with Bob Trout, which makes that phase of the Columbia network's coverage a 100 per cent WJSV production.

It can be reliably reported that Sir John's social life in Philadelphia is nothing to what it is in Washington. Even in this early stage of the convention Daly is on a fourteen-hour per day working schedule, which is only two hours less than his roommate, another overworked WJSV wretch.

Daly, incidentally, has but one serious failing as a roomie. He talks in his sleep. In addition to being the only man in America who mumbles in his sleep with an English accent, he keeps you awake awaiting that final contented sigh which precedes unconsciousness. At that moment his words are always the same—"Certified Double Flavor Bread."

OTHO—I'M NOT QUITTING MY MOVIE CAREER JUST BECAUSE A-PIX FIRED ME!!
WHAT ARE YOU GONNA DO ABOUT IT?
HOLLYWOOD IS FULL OF STUDIOS!—I THINK I'LL LET RAINBOW TAKE ME ON!!!
RAINBOW IS THE BIGGEST STUDIO IN HOLLYWOOD!
—YES—THE BIGGEST STUDIO IN HOLLYWOOD—AND I'M GOING THERE NOW!! —I'LL SHOW THAT KIZZAK!
B-BUT-ELSIE —?—
GOLLY—I GUESS I BETTER TELL KIZZAK ABOUT THIS—AND MAYBE FIND OUT SOMETHIN' ABOUT OUR NEW GROCERY—

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Yankee Doodler — BY MILTON CANIFF

WOULD YOU LIKE ME TO TYPE THE LETTERS HERE OR DO THEM OUTSIDE AND RETURN THEM FOR YOU TO SIGN, MISS SHERMAN?
HAVE A TYPEWRITER SENT UP! THERE MAY BE MORE DICTATION.
SOME TIME LATER
WERE THERE ANY VISITORS—OR PHONE CALLS WHILE I WAS BATHING?
NO, MISS SHERMAN! I UNDERSTOOD THE DESK WAS NOT TO ALLOW YOU TO BE DISTURBED!
I TOLD THEM TO STOP ALL CALLS EXCEPT FROM... AH... A CERTAIN PARTY...
YOU MEAN FROM THE GENTLEMAN WHOSE INITIALS ARE "P.R."
HOW DID YOU KNOW?
PLEASE DON'T THINK ME IMPERTINENT, MISS SHERMAN... BUT WHILE YOU WERE DICTATING, YOU COVERED THE DESK BLOTTER WITH THOSE LETTERS!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

YOUR SAFE CONDUCT PAPERS ARE IN ORDER, MR. WATSIKI—BUT WHO IS THE MR. ST. EVEROBER MENTIONED AS YOUR COMPANION?
AH-YES-S-S! ST. EVEROBER POOR CHAP! HE IS ILL—I LEFT HIM IN CALCUTTA!
JUST A MINUTE!
THOSE ARE OUR PAPERS! THIS OILY APE STOLE THEM FROM US ON THE SHIP!
YOUR NAMES PLEASE, SAHIB?
WAHOO AND STEVE ROPER!
VERY SORRY, SAHIB! THOSE NAMES ARE NOT ON THESE PAPERS, SEE—?
PLEDGES AND GUARANTEES HAVING BEEN EXCHANGED, FREE ENTRY INTO THE KINGDOM OF KASBAR AND SAFE CONDUCT ARE HEREWITH ASSURED MESSRS. ST. EVEROBER AND WATSIKI
BUT THE NAMES HAVE BEEN CHANGED! LOOK! EVEN AN IDIOT COULD SEE—
GO! AND QUICKLY!—BEFORE I HAVE YOU LASHED FOR INSULTING A ROYAL KEEPER OF THE GATE!

MICKEY FINN — In Right! — BY LANK LEONARD

I DON'T WANT TO SEEM NOSEY, MISTER—BUT IS THIS FELLA IN BACK SICK?
YES—HE-AH-HAD AN ACCIDENT—AND CAN'T REMEMBER THINGS!
THAT'S TOO BAD! A GUY I PLAYED FOOTBALL WITH AT COLLEGE HAD THE SAME THING—FROM A KICK IN THE HEAD!
GEE, YOU DON'T LOOK LIKE A FELLA THAT'S BEEN TO COLLEGE! WHERE DID'JA GO?
YOU NEVER HEARD OF IT—A LITTLE ENGINEERING SCHOOL OUT WEST—I QUIT TO PLAY PRO FOOTBALL. BUSTED MY KNEE AND HAVE BEEN GETTIN' BAD BREAKS EVER SINCE!
WELL, MAYBE YOUR LUCK IS GONNA CHANGE. I'M PRETTY SURE I CAN GET YOU THAT JOB ON THE AQUEDUCT, THAT YOU'RE HOPIN' TO GET!
NO KIDDING? YOU MEAN YOU KNOW SOMEBODY IN CHARGE UP THERE?
I'LL SAY I DO! LARRY KING, THE MAN WHO'S BUILDIN' IT, IS THE UNCLE OF MY GIRL!

DIXIE DUGAN — No Apologies Wanted — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

I'M SORRY TO HAVE TO PUT YOU TO ALL THIS TROUBLE, MISS, BUT I'VE GOT TO APOLOGIES AREN'T IN ORDER—YOU—YOU HOODLUM!
SAY—WE DON'T HAVE TO TAKE ANY OF THAT FROM YOU!
THAT GOES FOR YOU, TOO!
QUIET!
QUIET! SOMEBODY'S COMING
NOW, NOT A SOUND OUT OF ANY OF YOU, UNDERSTAND?
COME IN!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Suspicion — BY FRANK MARTINEK

HEY, LOOK! WHAT IN THE—?
PSST! HIDE THE COSMOVOX!
BEG YORE PARDON, GENTS! RECKON YOU AIN'T THE FELLERS I'M LOOKIN' FER
WEER'D YE COMIN' FROM MY CABIN DOWN ON THE RIM YONDER, AND WITH ALL THIS MONKEY-BUSINESS GOIN' ON IN THE CANYON—
WHAT? SAY, RED THAT CHECKS WITH WHAT I GOT FROM THE COS-ER-ALIEM—WHAT SORT OF "MONKEY BUSINESS," OLD TIMER?

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

MISS BLAKE, I AM INFORMED THAT YOU WERE SEEN TODAY WITH PETE McRAFTER!
THAT IS TRUE, MR. BLACKSTON!
YOU REALIZE THAT McRAFTER IS BOSS OF THE PARTY OPPOSING MY ELECTION AS GOVERNOR?
NATURALLY, SIR! AND I TOOK ADVANTAGE OF A CASUAL ACQUAINTANCE WITH HIM TO··WELL··DO A LITTLE SPYING FOR OUR SIDE!
SPYING?
YES, HE LET SLIP THE INFORMATION THAT SWILLER HAS MADE A DEAL WITH THE STATE HEAD OF THE FARMER'S ASSOCIATION! AND YOU, BEING A CITY MAN···
THANK YOU! THAT IS ALL, MISS BLAKE!
WELL, LUKE?
I STILL SAY SHE'S POISON··PUT UP IN A BEAUTIFUL BOTTLE!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

THAT MOUNTIE KING... JUST RODE UP TO SEARCH MY CAMP FOR THAT KID WE CAPTURED, BUT HE WON'T FIND HIM!

$3,756 More GivenRedCross Relief Fund

Washington Still Only City to Reach Quota in Campaign

Yesterday brought $3756.26 more into the District's Red Cross war relief fund, which reached a total of $307,161.76, with thousands of additional dollars still in prospect.

Work of campaign volunteers "has been so good that there are still more thousands of dollars which have virtually been contributed and which remain only to be collected," Bruce Baird, general chairman, said in urging a "clean up."

Washington, which passed its $300,000 goal Monday, still stood alone yesterday as the only city of more than 500,000 population to reach its quota.

Sorority Donates Funds

Plans for the Red Cross pro-amateur tournament at the Indian Spring Country Club, July 4, advanced yesterday as Mrs. L. E. Harris, chairman of the Red Cross motor corps, spoke at the club before a gathering of women from various clubs.

Meanwhile, the national Red Cross war relief fund reached $15,326,313 yesterday. A contribution of $50,000 from the Katherine Tuck Fund, designated for aid to French children, was announced by Norman Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross. He received also an anonymous contribution of $2,000 for French relief.

One check of $500 represented money which would have been spent for favors at the international convention of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority, which was held June 22 at Wardman Park Hotel.

The American Red Cross office here told of "appalling" conditions described in cables from its representatives abroad.

Bordeaux Jammed

Military wounded and civilian refugees were pouring into Bordeaux France, at the rate of 25 trainloads a day, and in one hospital in that section six nuns were caring for 500 patients, it was said.

"Toulouse, Cahors and Pau refugee situation is appalling, with men, women and children inundating small towns," John Maloney, Red Cross representative, cabled. "The Belgian and French refugees are sleeping in the streets."

"Refugees are wandering around in great panic and the situation is beyond control of the local authorities because of the overwhelming numbers crowding the departments (provinces) along the Spanish frontier."

Among the gifts yesterday to the District chapter's fund were: The Heurich Brewing Co., $250; Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, $140; J. William Lee's funeral home, $100; Jeffries Dyer, Inc., $150; Anonymous, $100; Washington City Postoffice, $175.25; Department of Justice, $352.38; Federal Works Agency, $513.05; Department of Commerce, $544.52.

James Burns Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Funeral services with military honors for James A. Burns, 62, lawyer and former sailor who died Monday, will be at the Church of the Nativity, 6000 Georgia avenue northwest, at 8 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

JAS. A. BURNS

A native of Montgomery County, Md., Mr. Burns enlisted in the Navy at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, and served aboard the U. S. S. Topeka. At the conclusion of the war, he worked in the Navy Yard here before joining the U. S. Coast Guard.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Margaret Burns; two sons, James Edward and Capt. J. R. Burns, U. S. A.; a granddaughter, Lucy Ann Burns; a brother, Dr. William P. Burns, and five sisters, Miss C. E. Burns, Mrs. George D. Horning, Mrs. C. E. Coppage, Mrs. H. R. Ober and Mrs. B. A. Leatherman.

Britain's Dogs May Be Given Refuge in U. S.

England's dogs, threatened by German bombers and dwindling food supplies, would be preserved for future hunters if a plan of a group of Washington and Chicago dog lovers meets with success.

George A. Coulon, of 4829 Ashby street northwest, veteran local dog fancier, yesterday outlined a scheme to make unnecessary the destruction of Britain's famous blooded animals. The killing of the entire dog population had been proposed, it was reported, because of the suffering of dogs maimed by bombs and the fact that food of all types will be at a premium in the event of a Nazi blockade.

According to the plan which has the approval of humane and anti-vivisection societies over the country, all English dogs would be brought to this country to be cared for by kennels here, free of charge, until the close of hostilities. More than 2,000 kennels have agreed to house the canine refugees, Coulon said.

Coulon said his plan has the unofficial indorsement of the British Embassy here. From England, the dogs would be brought to "approved kennels here" through the cooperation of the English Kennel Club.

Many persons financially unable to care for any of the children, aged, and infirm, who are being sent to Canada, would be able to support their canine companions, he pointed out.

Coulon, State director for the American Humane Society, is handling the Washington area end of the program, which is being sponsored from Chicago through radio talks, and committees favoring the idea in cities and towns over the country.

In a poll of several thousand American dog fanciers Coulon has found sentiment 5 to 1 for American aid to England's canines by methods short of war.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Thanks to the enterprise of Florence Howard, director of the Tuesday Evening Music Club, members and guests of the Arts Club enjoyed last evening the first local performance, albeit in a condensed version, of Gounod's "Mireille," which is as well worth the hearing as "Faust" or "Romeo et Juliette." The setting was a natural one in the club garden, with trees for the wings of the stage, and this production in the open air enhanced the pastoral quality of much of the music embellishing Frederic Mistral's narrative poem, "Mireio," upon which the opera is based.

BROWN

Gounod had considerable difficulty in adjusting "Mireille" to the shape which eventually found public favor. At its premiere in the Theatre Lyrique, March of 1864, it had five acts and must have been somewhat tedious. The composer cut it to three acts and tried again in November of the same year, but the work still failed of success. Ten years later it was mounted in the Opera Comique with four acts, but the public was slow in accepting this version. Since its revival in 1889, however, it has been continually in the repertoire.

The two-act condensation offered by Mrs. Howard retains the best choruses and some of the loveliest melodies. Last evening's performance showed in the choral work the result of faithful rehearsal, and there was pleasurable animation in such ensemble numbers are "Chantez Magnarelles" and "La Farandole." The principals acquitted themselves well, particularly Ina Holtzscheiter in the title role.

As a prelude to the main event, there was a miscellaneous program containing the opening chorus from Semetana's "Prodana Nevesta," a gypsy dance by Tatiana Gnuchev, a chorus from Gluck's "Iphigenie en Aulide" and the aria, "O mio Fernando," from Donizetti's "La Favorita," sung by Frances Tucker. The promising young flautist, Alden Emery, jr., contributed three solos by Saint-Saens, Godard and Donjon.

Katherine Riggs Burchard acted as reader to elucidate the operatic action, and the assisting pianists were Marjorie G. Davis, Starr Preston Tew and Dorothy Radde Emery.

Florence Howard presents the Tuesday Evening Music Club in a condensed version of Gounod's "Mireille" in the garden of the Arts Club Tuesday night. The cast:

Mireille ..... Ina Holtzscheiter
Vincent ..... Grace Holmes
Taven ..... Selma Last
Ramon ..... Helen Perry
Ambroise ..... Ida Kaufmann
Alari ..... Eleanor Catron
Ourrias ..... Elma Dotter

Capitol Police Will Guard Power Plant

The antisabotage guard of five United States Capitol policemen will be stationed day and night, beginning Monday, at the big Capitol power plant near E and South Capitol streets, it was learned last night.

On the same day the Botanic Garden, just west of the Capitol Grounds, will have three Capitol police officers assigned to replace watchmen.

The changes in disposition of the Capitol force, it was explained by Sergeant at Arms Kenneth Romney, chairman of the Capitol Police Board, are being made in conjunction with allotment to the Capitol of "about 20" Metropolitan officers, whose salaries will be paid by the Federal Government under provisions of the last deficiency bill.

Romney said he would confer today with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Metropolitan Police superintendent, on selection of policemen for the Capitol detail, which will be composed of "seasoned men." Their job, he said, would be to protect the Capitol and Senate and House office buildings in cooperation with the regular Capitol force and two Federal Bureau of Investigation agents already on duty there.

The power plant furnishes power and heat for the Supreme Court, Library of Congress and the Botanic Garden as well as the Capitol buildings. It also supplies steam for heating the Government Printing Office and the city postoffice.

State WPA Purging Reds and Bundists

Richmond, Va., June 25 (AP).—R. S. Hummel, assistant Virginia WPA administrator, said today that all Communists and members of the German-American Bund will be purged from Virginia WPA rolls by July 1.
